Ruby Condemned to Death; Appeal to Take Two Years

GUILTY—Jack Ruby, left, leaves court under guard after he was found guilty in Dallas Saturday of murdering Lee Harvey Oswald, and sentenced to death in the electric chair. (AP Wirephoto)

By ARTHUR EVERETT

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Jack Ruby, no trace of emotion on his pallid face, was condemned to death Saturday by a jury that swiftly convicted him of murder with malice.

It took the panel of four women and eight men only two hours and 19 minutes to exact the maximum penalty on the 52-year-old operator of a Dallas striptease joint for the Nov. 24 slaying of Lee Harvey Oswald, accused assassin of President Kennedy.

Chief Defense Attorney Melvin M. Belli, a noted civil courts lawyer in the biggest criminal case of his career, charged to newsmen that he had information that one juror, whom he did not identify, had boasted to his employer that if he got on the Ruby panel he would vote the death penalty.

"Unquestionably they had their minds made up," Belli declared.

Belli, a portly, gray San Francisco lawyer, seemed beside himself with rage in the instant after the verdict was returned at 11:22 a.m. He leaped to his feet. His face grew red. At the top of his voice he shouted, defying Judge Joe B. Brown's attempts to quiet him:

"This is a victory for bigotry. We'll appeal this to a court where we can get due justice and law."

Then as Ruby, still seemingly uncomprehending, was led past him in the custody of a phalanx of burly sheriff's deputies, the defense chief cried:

"Don't worry Jack! We'll appeal this and take it out of Texas."

The packed courtroom was thrown into wild confusion immediately after the verdict, although Judge Brown had warned against any demonstrations. Network television cameras, admitted to the room for the verdict by a last-minute decision of the court, recorded the scene. It was believed to be the first time in the history of major American criminal trials that such a scene was televised.

Dist. Atty. Henry M. Wade, 50, a blunt-faced, gray-haired prosecutor who 24 times before has sent a defendant to the chair, said he anticipated it would be at least two years before Ruby can be executed, assuming the verdict stands. He said the appeal process would probably take at least that long.

Ruby was returned to the Dallas County Jail where he has been held without bond since the day he killed Oswald. Sheriff

Oswald's Mother Says She Hoped for Life Sentence

By JAMES MANGAN

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Marguerite Oswald said Saturday she wished the jury had sentenced Jack Ruby to life imprisonment rather than death in the electric chair.

"I want him alive," she said of the man who killed her son. "I want him alive because I believe Jack Ruby was a paid killler who deprived my son of his trial. I am confident I can prove there are things to be brought out.

"I also do not believe in capital punishment. I would have preferred him to get life imprisonment without parole."

Mrs. Oswald talked matter-of-factly to newsmen while she drank iced tea in a nearby coffee shop after the verdict was returned.

"I cannot say I was surprised at the verdict. I think the jury did what it thought best.

"But I believe, 'Thou shalt not kill.' And I have no hatred. I believe Ruby was a human being just like my son. It's quite possible that life in prison would make him a fine man.

"I also want Jack Ruby alive to help in his own way. I believe Lee—her son Lee Harvey Oswald—was a pawn in the assassination of President Kennedy. The death of Ruby would make my theory very hard to prove. I believe Jack Ruby was paid to kill Lee, because Lee did not kill officer Tippit."

Mrs. Oswald said she is convinced Tippit was killed in order to implicate her son in the assassination. Then, she said, Ruby was hired to kill Lee before he could be brought to trial.

Oswald had been charged with killing Patrolman J. D. Tippitt shortly before his capture as a suspect in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

World Red Chiefs Will See Nikita

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — A conference of world Communist leaders will be held in Moscow next month, well-informed sources predicted Saturday.

Earlier reports had predicted a Red "summit conference" in Hungary while Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is here later this month, but the sources said it is "more and more likely" the Communist leaders will meet in Moscow in April.

The celebration of Khrushchev's 70th birthday on April 17 could provide the occasion for such a meeting, they said. They recalled that a similar conference was held in East Berlin last year on East German Communist Leader Walter Ulbricht's birthday.

Romanian Communist leaders, who stayed away from the East Berlin summit, are expected to demonstrate their improving relations with the Kremlin by attending the Moscow meeting.

President Plans To Tell About 'War on Poverty'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's long-awaited special message detailing plans for a "war on poverty" will be delivered to Congress Monday, the White House announced Saturday.

At one point, the White House had indicated the message would be ready for presentation in February. But last-minute skirmishing over sections of the $1 billion program caused a series of delays.

Sargent Shriver, director of the Peace Corps, will be in charge of the poverty program and has been working with the Labor and Welfare Department and other agencies in drafting plans for the legislation Johnson will seek.

Although Johnson has placed a billion dollar price tag on the program, he has indicated that first-year spending may be closer to one third that amount, with the balance to be spent later.

Work for Men Seen Who Fail Induction Tests

DENVER (AP)—The Colorado Employment Department said Saturday it had launched a program to provide work for young men who fail their Selective Service tests.

Bernard E. Teets, director of the department, said the program at present was restricted to those men who failed their Army tests after Feb. 1.

Selective Service boards were to inform rejectees of the state program and encourage those not fully employed in permanent jobs to seek assistance.

Depending on the applicant's qualifications, the department will make intensive efforts to find him a job or recommend occupational training, Teets said.

So far, 35 service rejectees have reported to employment offices throughout the state. Their average age is 23.

The armed forces will begin examining 18-year-olds in July, and rejectees in this age bracket will be included in the program, Teets added.

Cyprus Still Tense as International Peace-Keeping Forces Begin to Arrive

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP) — Finland and Sweden troops Saturday for a U. N. peace-keeping force in troubled Cyprus, leaving the force only about 1,000 short of its goal of 7,000 men.

The new battalions were expected to add about 700 men each to the 1,150 Canada had already started sending to Cyprus in what Ottawa called "Operation Snow Goose."

The resultant total of 2,550 men did not include the 500 troops pledged by Ireland. The Irish pledge was contingent on parliamentary approval in Dublin.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant aimed at raising 3,500 men from six or eight countries to replace half the 7,000 British troops now trying to keep the peace between Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

An advance contingent of 42 Canadian officers and men reached Nicosia by plane Saturday. Finland and Sweden planned to send advance parties of staff officers to Cyprus too, but their batallions seemed likely to take up to four weeks to get there.

Brazilian Maj. Gen. Carlos Flores de Paiva Chaves arrived in Nicosia Saturday to become acting commander of the new force.

Thant was waiting to get definite word on troops from Austria, which lacked a government to make a decision, and Brazil, which turned him down once but was asked to reconsider.

A new U. N. resolution contained a "hands off Cyprus" provision to deal with Turkey's threat to invade the island unless Greek Cypriots stopped attacks against Turkish Cypriots.

Cyprus was quiet as Canadian troops began to arrive except for several apparently accidental shots in Nicosia suburbs Saturday morning.

Stella Soulioti, Cyprus' acting foreign minister, told a reporter the coming of the Canadian advance party had "practically ended the threats of Turkish intervention."

But Turkish Cypriots in Nicosia were disappointed to learn that Turkish troops had not landed. They predicted a new wave of violence.

In Athens, Greek Premier George Papandreou met with his Cabinet, and the government was reported hopeful the arrival of U.N. troops would lesson the threat of Turkish intervention. But Greek military forces stayed on the alert and a government source said "the Cyprus crisis is by no means over." Greece had warned it would react if Turkey intervened.

Three American Airmen May Face Spy Trial

BERLIN (UPI)—Three U.S. airmen shot down by the Russians today faced a possible Communist "spy" trial and American sources predicted a "long haul" before they return home.

East German officials told United Press International the airmen, whose unarmed RB66 jet reconnaissance plane was shot down over East Germany four day ago, may face trial after a Soviet investigation is completed.

In Bonn, American sources said the Russians have taken no notice of U.S. queries about the fliers' whereabouts or condition, they said Soviet authorities refuse to allow U.S. officers to inspect the plane's wreckage.

The wreckage, the sources said, remained strewn over the crash site. They said all U.S. queries were met by the same Russian reply—"we are checking."

The East German foreign ministry has disclosed the three airmen have been held in "investigative custody" by the Russians since a Soviet fighter shot down their jet.

Life of Crusoe To Be Tried By Dutchman

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A former Dutch commando sergeant will leave here Thursday to re-create for six months on an uninhabited Caribbean isle the life of the fictional Robinson Crusoe.

Anton Van de Water, 23, will make his attempt under the sponsorship of the Dutch newspaper De Telegraaf.

The paper said Saturday De Water will fly to Caracas, Venezuela, then on to the island of Aves de Sotavento, or Biro Island, 190 miles away.

"I want to know if you really get crazy in complete solitude and rest," Telegraf quoted him as saying.

De Water will take 24 chickens and two dogs to the island, which has an average temperature of 104 fahrenheit. While there, he will radio reports of his experiences to Caracas and Holland.

Springs Motorist Dies As Auto Hits Abutment

Eldon Eugene Gipe, 47, 1804 N. Royer St., was killed Saturday morning when his car crashed on U.S. Highway 85-87, four miles south of Colorado Springs, the state patrol reported.

He was driving north and after running off the road, hit an overpass and died from a crushed chest, head injuries and a broken leg, the patrol said.

The death of Gipe was one of three traffic deaths that occurred in Colorado.

A young man from Boulder was killed later Saturday when his car skidded off a curve on Colorado 93 about eight miles southeast of Boulder.

The death was the third of the day as a result of Colorado traffic accidents and the 69th in the state this year. There

Young Scientist Wants Site for Rocket Firing

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI)—A young scientists, whose launching paid was yanked from under him by the Sedgwick County fire chief, said here he will go somewhere else to fire his home-made rocket.

Steven Faulkner, 15, said there were other pastures where rockets were welcome.

Raymond Davis, the county fire chief, put the dampers on the year-long project Friday when he told Faulkner and two helpers there would be no rocket launching in the county.

Faulkner, Mark Conboy, 11, and Steven Zulickey, 12, had planned to fire their rocket from the East High School athletic field today.

"Absolutely no firing of rockets will be permitted in Sedgwick County," Davis said. "We're too densely populated and rockets are a hazard to flying aircraft."

The project was being supervised by Dennis Hampton, 22, a licensed pilot and control tower operator at nearby McConnell Air Force Base.

"I've seen over 300 rockets and I think this is one of the best as far as safety is concerned," Hampton said.

However, Davis said all government agencies concerned were very much opposed to amateurs firing such rockets.

Faulkner, who started his rocket project after winning second prize in the 1963 science fair here for building a miniature X-ray machine, said he may go to Oklahoma to launch the rocket or perhaps to San Francisco this summer.

Court Is Asked To Halt Pickets At NORAD Site

DENVER (AP) -- The National Labor Relations Board has asked for a federal court injunction to avert picketing at the North American Air Defense Command's new headquarters deep within Cheyenne Mountain.

Earlier this week, a plastering contractor, J. O. Veteto of Colorado Springs, filed charges with the NLRB alleging that Carpenters Local 515 and Southern Colorado Building and Construction Trades Council were threatening him and two other contractors on the job.

Veteto said he had two lathers at work installing steel studs for drywall surfacing. He said the carpenters contended this was their work and were threatening a strike.

Friday, the NLRB asked for an injunction pending settlement of the dispute.

Muddy Ohio Relaxes Flood Threat Against Four States

By The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The muddy, overflowing Ohio River relaxed its assault on four states Saturday, though it might take another week before it's flood threat is eased along the lower reaches.

An air of optimism among river towns was reflected at Evansville, Ind., where a disaster center was closed. Only one call for evacuation was received. A 54-foot-high floodwall protects the city.

The Red Cross said in Cincinnati that the flood damaged or destroyed the homes of 20,433 families in Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia.

All told, 110,000 persons were affected to some degree; 11 perished and damage might run close to $100 million. But U.S. Army Engineers said flood control measures saved at least $290 million in damages and reduced flood crests from 2 to 10.5 feet between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

Uncle Sam stood ready to help flood sufferers along the 981-mile Ohio, a key avenue of transportation for the country's midland.

President Johnson and the governors of five states flew over the flood area Friday. Then the President announced federal help was available.

Kentucky asked for $4.2 million, the estimate needed to repair public facilities. Gov. Edward T. Breathitt said damage to private property would run three times that much.

Light rain fell Saturday in the middle Ohio Valley but at worst was expected to do nothing more than delay the fall of the river. Rain totaling one inch or more was expected in some areas before cooler weather moved in.

This was the flood situation:

Pittsburgh—The Ohio was 2.6 feet below flood stage. A slight rise was forecast because of an overflowing tributary but not enough to cause flooding again.

Wheeling, W. Va.—The river was falling all along West Virginia's western border. It was only 3.8 feet above flood stage at Parkersburg and 4.4 feet at Huntington, due to drop below the danger level Monday.

Cincinnati — At 64.5 feet; should be back to the 52-foot flood level next Thursday; some flooded business houses reopened at nearby Aurora, Ind.

Louisville—17.5 feet over flood stage but the main city area was safe behind floodwall. However, backwater from ditches and creeks was on the rise in numerous suburbs, outside the wall. Some families hoped to return home Sunday or Monday at West Point, where all except 100

Former Springs Man Confesses Killing Woman

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A complaint charging first-degree murder was filed in police court here Saturday against a former Colorado man accused in the shooting Friday night of a 22-year-old girl friend.

Police said the three shots which killed Carol Wilson 22, apparently didn't waken three sleeping children at the home where she was baby-sitting.

Charged with the slaying was Emil Vincent Aguayo, 24, formerly of Colorado Springs, Colo. Police said he walked into police headquarters at 11:35 Friday and said: "I don't know how to say this, but I just shot a woman three times," then handed police a .22 caliber revolver with three spent cartridges.

Police said Aguayo had dated Mrs. Wilson who is separated from her husband.

Officers said Aguayo worked as a commercial artist in Spokane after being discharged from the U.S. Air Force at nearby Fairchild Air Force Base where he was stationed. Police said he attended school in Denver.

New Methods Tested To Measure Child Hearing

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

The search for deaf children now is being extended even into the newborn nursery.

As with most other health and medical conditions, there's a big premium here on early detection and early action. The younger the child is when remedial action is taken — medical treatment, sound amplification, auditory training — the better his prospects for the future.

That's why the search for hearing deficiencies is being carried into the newborn nursery seeking ways to detect and analyze hearing losses and abnormalities in even the youngest babies, long before they respond to words.

The Denver area has pioneered in this drive for early detection of hearing loss, principally through the pre-school screening program sponsored for a decade by the Denver Junior League. This was the first large program of its kind in the country, and it has been widely copied in other cities and states.

It is a valuable program and richly merits continued support and extension, and it probably is in large measure responsible for the current surge of interest in pressing the early detection campaign on to younger groups. Studies at John Hopkins University already have demonstrated that screening tests can be conducted with children as young as 7 months, and the research effort, there and elsewhere, now is seeking ways to accurately test still younger babies. A hospital nursery is the only place, until school age is reached, where most children are available for screening. Not all children attend well-baby clinics or pre-school classes.

By the time school age is achieved, it may be too late for some children with hearing deficiencies—too late for maximum benefits from treatment and training.

It is estimated about half of 1 per cent of all children suffer some measure of hearing deficiency, but no one yet has tested deafness at birth and most of the estimates are based on studies which look backward from the ages of 3 or 4 years.

In the past, a wide variety of sound-makers — low-pitched bells, hand claps, horns of various tones — have been used to produce responses indicating the degree of a child's hearing. But these methods are not sharp enough, discriminating enough, to yield scientifically accurate results.

An electronic instrument now has been developed which produces specific bands of noise in various cycles spanning the vital ranges of human perception of sound. It is being tested in the nursery, and the hope is that it will prove a major advance in scientific audiology.

One of the big concerns is for the baby with marginal hearing, an infant who hears but doesn't hear well. He may hear low-frequency sounds — father's voice, or the vowels in words—but miss the high-frequency tones—mother's voice, or the higher-pitched consonants in speech.

Children with such handicaps often fail to develop good speech, and their ability to talk fails to improve normally. Quite often they are considered mentally deficient children when their only real problem is that they do not possess "whole" hearing. Or psychological or learning problems develop which often are not picked up until the child begins to have trouble at school.

Much can be done for these children today. Various amplification hearing aids can be utilized even with babies, medical treatment can determine whether something easily curable is at the root of the trouble, and, very early in life, beginnings can be made on speech training, lipreading and the teaching of sound discrimination by carefully plotted increases in auditory experience.

Old Doc Experience advises:

1. Any suspected hearing deficiency in a child should be investigated as early as possible.

2. Greater use should be made of already available screening tests in the pre-school and early school-age groups. Mothers and fathers should be alert to signs that their child is not hearing efficiently and take action immediately if a hearing loss is suspected.

3. Be suspicious—if a child does not seem to pay attention, particularly to sounds which do not cause a lot of vibration; if he sleeps through loud noises (he should at least stir); if by 2 to 3 months he is not beginning to be quite aware of sounds around him; if by 3 months he is not learning to localize sounds by turning his eyes or head toward them; if by 6 months he doesn't look toward even soft sounds that are interesting; if by 7 months he is not responding well to all sounds and is not able to make a wide variety of sounds of his own; if by 2 years he is not saying words of some kind.

4. The ability to make sounds can sometimes be misleading. Even totally deaf children do some babbling and cooling.

5. It will be a relatively late sign, but you should be concerned if the child seems to be having difficulty in developing good speech habits.

6. One of the big causes of acquired hearing loss is neglect or inadequate treatment of a smoldering ear infection, resulting in scarring or fluid accumulation. Every child who has an earache should be checked by a doctor on the first day of his complaint. The course of medication prescribed by the doctor should be followed carefully and precisely. Don't discontinue the medicine merely because the earache seems to have gone away and Johnny feels better. The infection may still be smoldering, and the medicine should be continued until the fire is completely out.

State Reports On Highway Accidents

Twenty - eight persons were killed and 14 persons were non-fatally injured in the 23 fatal motor vehicle accidents occurring on Colorado's streets and highways in January, the Traffic Operations Section of the Colorado Department of Highways reported. Compared with January, 1963, the figures showed a decrease of five in the number of fatal accidents and a decrease of two in the number of persons killed.

Eleven of the 23 fatal accidents occurred on the State Highway System - the lowest number on record for the system during any month of the past two years. Eight accidents took place on city streets, not a part of the State Highway System, and four on county roads.

Thirty vehicle operators five pedestrians were involved in fatal accidents in January. Five of the drivers were licensed out of the state; another was licensed in a foreign country. Nine drivers had been drinking, and the impairment of driving ability was cited for three of these. One other driver was believed to have fallen asleep.

Manitou High School News

By JOY BORMANN

The Student Council under the direction of President, Lance Huffman, met two times last week to discuss the rules of dress and conduct being set up for Manitou High School.

The rules will go into effect next fall. Bob Nakai, vice-president, gave a report to the Council about other schools' governments.

Some of the included schools were Wasson, Palmer, Widefield, Harrison, St. Mary's, Cheyenne, and Cherry Creek. The report was mostly for the pruspose of showing how other schools handle the problem of dress and conduct.

It was decided that the dress rules will be made and then later the conduct rules will be disclosed. Some of the suggestions were no slacks for girls, belts for boys, no T-shirts or sweat-shirts, and all clothes should fit properly. The final rules will be announced to the Student Body very soon.

At the meetings it was also decided that the Council will sell candy every other day of the week after spring vacation (March 20 - 30). This will be another fund raising project.

The Lettermen's Club with Steve Kohl, Baron, presiding met on March 10. Things discussed were the spending of the money from the freshman tournament and a dance. The boys decided to buy one glass backboard for the gym on the condition that the school will buy the other one.

Students taking the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying test on March 10 were Caryn Amick, Laura Studebaker, Vicki Jarvis, Harvey Lester, Kit Schorer, Donna Davis, Mark Miller, Mike Freeman, Bob Nakai, John Pennington, Denny Bartley, Ellen Lowers, Phyllis Shipp, Paul Swank, Betty Atherton, Kayle Higginbotham, Ronnie Wilson, Julie Jones, Sandra Dittemore, Zoe Green, Barbara Liby, Gerald Boyd, Tom Giles, and Jim Lenters.

A.C.T. test scores from the tests taken in February were given to the students on March 11.

The Booster Club had a meeting on Thursday. Among other things the dance on April 3 and the talent show on April 15 were discussed.

General Russ Gives Farewell Address Here

"Ft. Carson and the 5th Division are lucky to be located here in the midst of such a fine community." With these words Brig. Gen. Joseph R. Russ gave an official farewell to the area at a breakfast sponsored by the Colorado Springs Executive Club at Ruth's Oven.

The assistant division commander was lauded and applauded at the farewell breakfast. Gen. Russ will leave for Germany April 5 to take over the 8th Infantry Division.

Over 70 members of the Executive Club and guests, including Carson and 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) commander Maj. Gen. John A. Heintges, Brig. Gen. Chester L. Johnson, assistant division commander, and Chief of Staff Colonel H. V. Middleworth watched the proceedings.

After breakfast, Gen. Russ was presented with his second "star" by Jack Might of Pikes Peak Optical. The "star" was a plaque, decorated with a cartoon of the general in golfing attire. On the golfing jacket were drawn several patches, depicting events in his life.

Jasper Ackerman, president of the Exchange National Bank, awarded him a proclamation making him a Lifetime Master Executive, Thickskinned, Senior Grade. He was given a membership book by Virgil Justis of Justis Tire Company.

Gen. Russ told the assembly that it was a sad day for him, for he called his tour with the 5th Division and his stay in the Colorado Springs area, "the most rewarding in my career."

Farmers use enough products containing rubber to put tires on nearly six million automobiles.

Friendship Comes to Violent End in Crash

ALAMEDA, alif. (AP) — A friendship which began during World War II came to a violent end in winter snow.

Henry Norris and Irwin Zadwick were pilots and became buddies. After the war they shared flying jobs and were roommates in Alameda.

Norris was the pilot of the Paradise Airlines plane which crashed into Genoa Peak, Nev., in a blinding snowstorm March 1, killing all 85 persons aboard.

Last Sunday Zadwick was an escort at Norris' funeral. He assured Norris' parents he would return Monday or Tuesday to visit them.

Tuesday, Zadwick was piloting a cargo plane approaching Boston's Logan International Airport in sleet and snow.

The four-engine freighter crashed into Castle Island in Boston Harbor.

Zadwick was killed nine days after his buddy had died in another snowstorm across the continent.

CU Music Fare To Be Versatile This Summer

Music fare at the University of Colorado this summer will range from local presentations to appearances by internationally famous names. Music students will vary from high school pupils to doctoral candidates.

Visiting faculty members for the Summer Session, June 12-Aug. 22, will include Alfred Deller, an English counter-tenor and one of the great exponents of Renaissance and Baroque music; Ronald Hayes, a nationally known recital singer; Jester Hairston, American composer and choral conductor; Werner Singer, internationally known voice coach and accompanist, and William Teague, outstanding American organist and teacher.

Most will give free, public lectures or recitals during the summer. In addition, the Netherlands Quartet will appear in a concert and a lecture-recital.

Other public music events will include an opera, "La Traviata," and concerts by the symphony orchestra, the choir and the band.

Several hundred Colorado high school musicians are expected for the annual Summer Music Camp July 30-Aug. 9, and about 75 singing teachers from 20 states are planning to attend a workshop July 19-24.

Fifteen regular members of the College of Music faculty will teach 24 courses.

Pikes Peak Region Yesterdays

By DORA FOSTER

Cedric Adams spoke of attics and of how they had interested him when he was a small boy.

The late Mrs. Charles H. Blood of 707 N. Tejon St., told that the attic of her grandparents' big home on Indiana Avenue, Chicago, was the place to which her grandfather retired when he wanted to enjoy his pipe, and that there too his friends often gathered to make the air blue with tobacco smoke, since the furnishings of the rooms below were not supposed to be "smoked up." It was in this enchanted place that the little granddaughter loved to be when her grandfather's friends gathered and she was allowed to take turns at being handed around and sitting on the laps of various smokers wihle her childish imagination thought the blue smoke-tinged air was blue because it was so near heaven. We have come a long way from that, to the days when every available container in our rooms is filled with cigarette ash. "In that era no ladies were allowed in that enchanted room," she says.

Mrs. Blood was the former Louisa Fisher, the daughter of H. D. Fisher, a pioneer of Manitou Park who was associated in early days with General Adams and other prominent businessmen of the region.

In one of our friend's attics, she reports, the third story up under the roof of their eastern home there was a lot of sacks of geese feathers plucked from the flock on the farm; there were fruit jars and all sorts and sizes of nails and during certain times in the history of our country there were hidden there flour and sugar and other scarce items of food. For obvious reasons this friend wishes her name withheld.

The late Mrs. Nellie Burget Miller, our beloved poet laureate of Colorado, and who organized the local Poetry Club, when asked to speak of the attic in her old home, allowed us to peek into one of her seven scrap books in which she had an article, one of her contributions to The American Home. From this "Slaves of the Stuff," by Mrs. Miller we are taking a paragraph or two as follows: "I have a dress form up there, a perfect 36, a fearfully and wonderfully made female with high full bust, a constricted waist, and plump hips, a perfect figure according to the fashion plates of the nineties. We call her Dora; the name seems to suit her. She would not be of the slightest service in constructing the gowns of today and I no longer make any dresses anyway, but there she stands and I patiently wheel her in and out to clean. I am used to 'dumb Dora' and replace (almost affectionately) her many screws as they rattle out of her creaking joints.

"There is a bread mixer too, which I clean and replace on a shelf each spring. I have always thought I might go back to baking some day. By closing my eyes I can see a motley procession mutely passing by, led by dumb Dora and the bread mixer. There are chairs I may wish to re-cover some day, there are bottles and jars left over from the days of passionate pickling and preserving, there are garments which I must sun frequently to protect from ravaging moths — I may make them into rugs — some day."

Seated in her beautifully appointed little home on West Washington St., Mrs. Miller says, "I have no attic now and I'm glad of it."

From Mrs. Florence M. Stote and her sister, Miss Helen V. Marshall, we secured this choice bit of information concerning their garret:

"Our 30-year-old Kansas attic was being evacuated. We were moving to Colorado.

"We left Mother sitting in front of a grate fire: on one side of her numerous sacks of old letters, letters written to her by her six children while attending college; on the other side an empty carton waited to receive the letters to saved.

"Several hours later we returned to find Mother in the same position. A few letters were in the carton, the sacks still bursting. Mother was reading a letter and weeping. My Father said not unkindly, 'Woman, if you are going to Colorado with us, you'll have to hurry.'

"In the shipment of household goods, which arrived in Denver later, was an old trunk filled with the letters Mother couldn't destroy.

"Our new attic had its first consignment.

"Mother — dear incorrigible hoarder!"

Because my parents came to Colorado in covered wagon trains no family heirlooms were brought west, and the log cabins in which they lived had no third story where such personal chattel could have been stored even if it had survived the trip across the prairies. But I do recall that our ranch home had a space up under the roof, over our kitchen, which was entered from the upstairs hall thru a sliding wooden door and into that darkened place I loved to go, to sit on a gunny sack of carpet-rag balls, while I looked thru a pile of paper backed Sunday School books to find a story that suited me. By leaving the wooden door open and sitting near the shaft of light that came in from the hall, I was able to secure a number of thrills while I read of a little Chinese girl who had been taken aboard a ship by a bad sea captain and was being brought to the United States to be a servant for his wife. That little girl was homesick and while she was being kindly treated by the old captain she hung over the ship rail each evening while she watched the great round yellow moon rise from the ocean and wished she were back in China. I often think of that sorrowing child when I see the moon rising from the horizon and wish I could remember her name. She was very real to me and I always associate her with a bag of carpet-rag balls and the dim light of the garret.

Some of our Colorado Springs pioneers tell us that one reason they came west was so as they might leave "stuff behind and start life unencumbered with the things of the past."

We find that Mr. Noah Webster defines an attic as "A room behind that part of the exterior or all space of the rooms next below the roof," while a garret is "A part of a house which is immediately under or within the roof," and that the word comes from the old French word, garite watchtower, a place of refuge, garir, or guarir from the verb to preserve, or defend.

So maybe it is good ethics to use the upper regions of a house to preserve old stuff, but like Mrs. Miller we doubt it.

Since spring housecleaning is just around the corner let's not try to forget that it is easy to be "Slaves of the Stuff."

Carson Group Interested in Skydiving

Skydiving, one of America's fastest growing sports, is steadily gathering interest in the 2nd Battalion, 61st Infantry at Ft. Carson. Four men from the battalion have joined the Ft. Carson Sport Parachute Club, with indications of others becoming members.

The men are S. Sgt. Jimmie L. Duncan, in charge of the anti-tank platoon in Headquarters Company, who has been skydiving for the past year; Sgt. F. C. John Tostier, battalion mess sergeant, who joined the club three months ago; S. Sgt. Robert Bollivar, battalion supply sergeant, and Pfc. Ryszard Ladowski, a cook.

The participated in a Denver benefit skydiving meet last weekend with the Fort Carson Sport Parachute against all skydivers from Colorado. Proceeds from the meet went to help mentally retarded children.

Leukemia Breakthru May Soon Occur

Is a breakthru in leukemia possible?

Many scientists think so.

Leukemia, cancer of the blood-forming tissues, has long been considered primarily a disease of childhood.

It has now become a major cancer problem. The disease for some unknown reason seems to have leveled off in children, but has increased 17 per cent in adult males and 7 per cent in females in the last ten years.

It is estimated that in 1963, some 9,300 males and 6,500 females developed the disease. There is no known cure or preventive.

Dr. C. W Reiquam, pathologist doing research work at Children's Hospital under a Fellowship from the Colorado Division, American Cancer Society, explains that the Cancer Society is seeking some of the basic answers to the growing leukemia problem.

The answers, if found, may not only lead to a leukemia cure or preventive but may help control other cancers.

Dr. Reiquam pointed out that since 1945, the American Cancer Society has spent nearly $12000.000 on leukemia research and currently has in effect research grants, directly or indirectly related to leukemia, that total over $2,000,000 — more than any other voluntary health agency.

The Society's leukemia research program, according to Dr. Reiquam, seeks to answer these basic questions:

Do viruses cause human leukemia? It has been established that viruses can cause leukemia in animals.

Can leukemia be prevented by a vaccine or other means? It can be done in animals; it remains to be seen if it can be done in human beings.

Can a drug be found which will be permanently effective in checking the course of leukemia? Drugs have been found that will arrest leukemia temporarily, but not permanently.

Dr. Reiquam said that evidence seems to indicate that leukemia may be caused by a virus. "Many scientists place their hope in this theory. Should this be found to be true, then the possibility of developing a vaccine against leukemia in human beings is possible."

"If a vaccine can be developed that will work against one type of cancer there is a possibility that a vaccine may be developed that will work against many types of cancer."

Pointing out that the last 15 years has seen a marked improvement in the treatment of leukemia patients, including the prolonging of lives for months and even years, Dr. Reiquam said, "The course of leukemia has been slowed, even halted for a time, by new drugs, blood transfusions, and other therapy."

Backed by this knowledge and experience, the American Cancer Society is constantly expanding its "conquer leukemia" program. The Society began this program in 1945 with a modest allocation of a little over $11,000 for research in the field. "Today," Dr. Reiquam said, "this modest investment has grown into a $2,000,000 a year project."

Why this concentration on leukemia research? "Because," Dr. Reiquam said, "the experience of the Society has been that by concentrating on one form of cancer a great deal can be accomplished. The death rate from uterine cancer, for instance, has been cut 50 per cent in 25 years.

If every woman would have a "Pap" test as part of a routine annual health checkup, cancer deaths for this site could be drastically reduced." He said, "that an annual proctosigmoidoscopy examination once a year can save many lives from cancer of the colon and rectum. Also, we have learned that about 75 per cent of those who develop lung cancer would not develop the disease if they did not smoke cigarettes. With leukemia, we may be on the threshold of something very important."

Wreckage of Airplane Still Sought in Lake

NEW ORLANS (AP)—Salvage crews today probed a spot on big Lake Pontchartrain which apparently held the best lead yet in the 19-day search for the main wreckage of the jet airliner that crashed with 58 aboard.

The Civil Aeronautics Board said parts of the aircraft's center section, tail, landing gear, skin section and pieces of tires were believed uncovered at the spot.

William Lamb, chief investigator for the CAB team in New Orleans, said he was "reasonably sure" searchers had located part of the hull of the Eastern Air Lines jet that crashed into the lake Feb. 25.

A bed of mud and silt about 20 feet deep on the bottom of the lake hampered the search, centered about 25 miles northeast of New Orleans International Airport.

Goodwill's Joint Effort Sets Up Insurance Plan

Thru the joint efforts of 52 Goodwill Industries across the nation, a unique and successful life insurance plan is made possible for handicapped persons employed in Goodwill's sheltered workshops.

Goodwill Industries of Colorado Springs has 23 employees participating in the plan for a total of $33,000 insurance, according to Kenneth Olson, executive director. Locally, half of the premium for each disable worker is paid by Goodwill.

Eligible to take part in the plan are employees who have been with Goodwill for three months. Policies are issued them without a physical examination and regardless of the employee's disability. This feature, according to Olson means much to the hopelessly handicapped.

Another valuable feature provides that any person covered by the policy, upon leaving Goodwill employment, has conversion priveleges for the same amount of insurance without a physical examination at cureent rates contingent on the age bracket.

Nationally, 5,121 of Goodwill's employees are insured for more than six million dollars.

All Goodwill employees are eligible for coverage. The cost is $1.30 monthly per $1,000. Since the plan went into effect in 1957, a total of $167,500 has been paid in claims. Three premium reductions have also been made.

And they brought him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

Crippled Child Dies; Beatings Are Charged

NEW YORK (AP) — Crippled Elizabeth Pappolla, 7, is dead, and the mother and her boyfriend are charged with beating the child off and on for the past two weeks.

Elizabeth, suffering from muscular dystrophy, a progressive weakening of the muscles, died Friday in Brooklyn's Methodist Hospital.

The mother, Florence Papolla, 32, brought her there Thursday night and told attendants: "She fell off her crutches. She is always falling off her crutches."

Examination of the child, authorities said, disclosed a skull fracture and bruises over most of her body. Police quoted Mrs. Pappolla and her friend, John Koltosky, 26, as saying they "enjoyed beating" the girl. The woman and Koltosky were charged with homicide.

De Gaulle to Pay Mexico City Visit

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Preparations for the arrival of French President Charles de Gaulle on Monday moved at a feverish pace today.

Newspapers extolled De Gaulle as a great statesman, poster-size portraits of the French leader were hung along the capital's major boulevards, radio and television played French music and a government helicopter flew over Mexico City Friday playing the French national anthem.

The government ordered the tightest security measures ever imposed on the capital, and the preparations for the welcome appear to exceed those for the visit of any other foreign chief of state, including President John F. Kennedy, who received a tumultuous welcome in 1962.

Jewess Says Nazi Treated Her 'Very Nice'

FRANKFURT, Germany — (UPI) — A red haired Jewish woman who said she was treated "very nice" by Wilhelm Boger, Friday told of seeing the broken bodies of the victims of the accused master torturer of the Auschwitz death camp.

Mrs. Maryla Rosenthal, 57, testified at the trial of 21 former Nazi officials and a turncoat inmate accused of taking part in the murders of up to 4 million persons in the infamous camp during World War II.

Another former inmate, who admitted he helped the Gestapo hang a fellow prisoner and then retrieved the half-smoked cigarette he had given the victim, singled out two other defendants in his testimony.

The stylishly dressed Mrs. Rosenthal, who lives in Zurich, said she spent two years as Boger's inmate secretary. She told of watching Boger kicking and beating prisoners before leading them off to his "talking machine."

The device Boger called the "talking machine" was the whipping apparatus inmates referred to as "the Boger swing," she said.

"Two hours later, I would see the victim again," she said. "He would be lying on a stretcher. I wouldn't recognize him any more. He would be unlike a human being, almost dead."

The Sock and Buskin Club met Wednesday. Diane Kraus, president, gave the highlights and characterization of the Senior Class Play, "Come to Dinner." The play will be presented Friday, at 8 p.m. in the FHS gymnasium.

A picnic was also planned. It will be held in North Cheyenne Canyon on April 26. Food committees were formulated. Each girl is to bring a cake or pie. Committee heads are Judy Olsen, Eddie Fisher, Terri Gonzales, Earl Hanson, Lee Lefert, and Kathy Ward.

One hundred and twenty-six freshmen were orientated at an assemblage Tuesday. The purpose of the orientation program was to welcome next year's sophomores and interest them in taking pride in the school, its clubs, and activities. The freshmen also received data on the courses that will be offered them next fall. They are to return a tentative schedule of their courses this school term.

Student body president, Bob Weber, introduced the freshmen to FHS. Following this, the class officers gave welcoming speeches. Speakers were Judy Watkins — sophomore class president; Jerry Kent — junior president; Bob Weber — senior class president. They explained the various duties and activities of their prospective classes.

Gym class members had instructions on skiing last week. Joe Keegan, head of the boys' physical education program, sponsored the activity.

The group was transported daily after school to the Ski Broadmoor. The price was $8.60 per person. This included the instructions and also the ski equipment rentals.

The Future Teachers of America held their monthly night meeting Wednesday. Ginnie Leonard was the evening's hostess. Her guest speaker was a probation officer, Mr. Gary Holmes from the El Paso County Court House juvenile probation office.

After the meeting doughnuts and punch were served.

Jan Malone, president, called the meeting to order. Laura Nugent, secretary, read the preceding meeting's minutes. Discussion was presented on fund raising projects. A bake sale was decided upon.

The bake sale was held at Barney's Food Market, Saturday.

Funds are being raised for the club's transportation and lodging expenses at the 1964 FTA Convention which will be held in Grand Junction April 4.

The meeting was then adjourned.

Larry McGuire has again excelled by capturing first place in the annual High School Mathematics Examination which was held on March 5. This is the second time he has succeeded in attaining this award. He was also first place winner in his junior year.

Larry was awarded a book of Mathematical Tables for his efforts last year.

Jim Hughes, a junior, and Sylvia Erickson, a senior, have also demonstrated their mathematical intelligence by taking second and third place respectively.

The scores of these three students will be entered in state competition. Awards are made to both the schools and their contestants on the basis of team and individual scores.

Miss Arlene Evangelista, cheerleading sponsor, treated the "A" and "B" squad cheerleaders to a pizza dinner the evening of Friday. The group, Laura Nugent, Nancy Cruse, Angie Smith, Jan Malone, Phyllis Bystrom, Lynn Russ, Nikki Moore, and Betty Talbot, ate at the "Liberty Bell."

Band members participated in a band festival at SCSC in Pueblo March 14. The purpose of the festival was to rate the participants on individual performance and talent. Jim Hughes, baritone; Neil Fleishchauer, trombone; Dick Simpson, trumpet; Evelyn Bryant, clarinet; and Don Seymour, trumpet were the contestants rfom FHS.

The Girls Ensemble also participated at the festival.

Ruby Condemned to Death; Appeal to Take Two Years

Bill Decker said he will remain there until his last appeal is exhausted. Then the actual date for execution would be set by Judge Brown.

Ruby, a paunchy, slight man with a few wisps of dark hair across a nearly bald head, stepped from a crowd in the basement of Dallas police headquarters at 11:21 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 24. With a single bullet, he cut down the 24-year-old Oswald, a loner, a professed Marxist and the man charged officially with the assassination 48 hours earlier of the 35th President of the United States.

The state called Ruby's crime murder with malice. Wade described Ruby as a glory seeker, and told the jury he hoped to gain materially as the killer of an accused presidential assassin. State testimony quoted Ruby as saying he killed Oswald "to show the world that Jews do have guts."

The defense pleaded temporary insanity. Their witnesses told of youthful head injuries which they said led to Ruby's suffering psychomotor epilepsy. This was described as a rare form of the disease, characterized by violent rages, and blackout seizures. It was during such a robot period, Belli insisted, that Ruby killed Oswald, not knowing what he was doing in advance and without any clear memory afterwards of what he had done.

Under Texas law, a jury sets the penalty when it convicts a defendant. The jury had a wide range of choices in Ruby's case. He could have been acquitted. He could have been put in prison for any number of years up to life.

But the jury chose the maximum punishment—death in the electric chair at the Huntsville State Prison.

The trial began Feb. 17 and the case went to the all-white, all-Protestant jury at 1:05 a.m. Saturday after a grueling night session, marked by final hours of summation oratory by the defense lawyers and the prosecutors.

The jury had breakfast, then began deliberations at 9:15 a.m. in a mezzanine room above and behind the second floor courtroom.

The jury's first item of business was the selection of a foreman. They chose Max E. Causey, 35, a husky, redhaired cost analyst for an electronics firm, a Baptist, and the father of two boys.

Attorneys for both sides had forecast a speedy verdict. But even they were caught by surprise when, at 11:34 a.m., Causey knocked on the courtroom door at the bottom of a flight of stairs leading to the jury room.

"We have a verdict," he announced.

Telephone summonses went out to attorneys and to Judge Brown.

Belli, a model of sartorial perfection throughout the trial, rushed to the courtroom in a dark suit, wearing a black sport shirt, buttoned at the neck but without a tie.

At 12:10 p.m. Judge Brown, who had been at home, ascended the bench.

Then Ruby was brought in, a short man dwarfed by his guards. Four of the security men took seats behind him at the defense table. Three others sat in a front row courtroom seat outside the railing, ready to spring up and form a human barricade at the verdict.

Ruby, as on every day of his trial, wore a dark suit, a white shirt and a dark tie.

The defendant blinked his eyes once or twice, then cocked his head slightly to the left and settled into a seemingly composed attitude of waiting.

The jurors filed in and Ruby shifted his eyes to them, about 20 feet to his right. He might have been watching an orchestra file into its chairs to begin an overture, so expressionless was the mask he wore.

"You have your verdict ready?" Judge Brown asked. As several jurors spoke assent, a bailiff carried the written verdict up to the bench.

Now Ruby's eyes moved slowly to the left until they were fixed on Judge Brown. His lips were firm, his body motionless.

Judge Brown read the verdict —"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of murder with malice and assess the penalty at death."

Ruby kept looking at the judge, as though not a word had been spoken.

"Is this unanimous?" Brown asked. "So say you all? Please hold up your right hands."

Twelve hands shot up.

By now his guards were on their feet and so was Jack Ruby. He automatically took his familiar position in their midst and marched to his left and out a courtroom door. From the time he entered to the time he left—a space of no more than three minutes Ruby acted like the most disinterested man in the entire packed courtroom.

Not so Belli. As Brown adjourned court, the lawyer was engulfed by a wave of newsmen and photographers.

"Any independent appraisal of this all over the world," the defense chief shouted, perspiration boiling up on his forehead, "will give a pretty good impression of one of the sore spots of America.

"If this venom spreads throughout the country, God help us all. This is the most disgusting thing I have ever seen in my life."

Would he appeal, someone shouted.

"Appeal?" Belli cried. "Appeal? Today!"

He was asked if he considered that Ruby was railroaded.

"Railroaded — yes railroaded," Belli responded, so emotionally worked up that he seemed unable to form a complete sentence. "This is a kangaroo railroad. I hope the people of Dallas are proud."

According to Deputy Sheriffs Charles White and Ray Carey, Miss Steidel was in the mountains with another girl and Bass.

The boy said he was on a low ridge while the girls were on a higher one. He told White he was ready to shoot when he stumbled and the gun went off accidentally. Officials at St. Francis Hospital described the girl's condition as good.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field)

A little light rain or snow fell in northern New England, the northern Great Lakes and in the northern Rockies. Quarter-inch rain and winds up to 45 miles an hour continued to buffet western Washington and Oregon. High pressure brought fair weather to the Great Plains and the central and southern Rockies west to the Pacific.

Maximum temperatures Saturday afternoon ranged from the mid 20's in southern Wyoming to the 80's in the Gulf Coast region.

Lawyer Accuses Revenue Men of Legal Vendetta

DENVER (AP) — A Denver lawyer accused five Internal Revenue Service agents Friday of having begun a tax-evasion case against him after he defeated them in a court case in Canon City.

The lawyer, John J. Gibbons, was indicted by a federal grand jury on three counts of income tax evasion and three of perjury. He could receive a five-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine on each of the evasion charges and a three-year sentence and a $5,000 fine on each of the others, if convicted.

The indictment accuses Gibbons of having knowingly failed to pay $3,629 in income tax for 1958 and of having falsified income figures for that year and the next two years.

Gibbons called the indictment phony and said he would defend himself in the trial and call the agents as witnesses. He identified them as George C. Bodley, chief of the intelligence division of the revenue office here, and Thomas E. Fontecchio, Paul W. Grimes, James H. Leach and Russel Olson, also of the Denver office.

The lawyer said the five sought a share of a uranium claim near Canon City in 1957 on the ground that two prospectors had found the claim by using an instrument belonging to the agents. Gibbons defended the prospectors in the case in District Court at Canon City and won for them, he said.

The case against Gibbons was referred to the regional revenue service office at Omaha, sent back to Denver for review, forwarded to the regional office at Dallas and then sent to the Justice Department in Washington for prosecution.

The steps were taken to safeguard taxpayers, V. Lee Phillips, district director of the revenue service, said.

Gibbons defended John Gilbert Graham, who was executed in 1957 for bombing a United Air Lines plane and causing the death of 44 persons, including Grahm's mother.

Social Security Battle Waged In California

By RAYMOND J. CROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cal- Sharp words flew over the Social Security issue in the New Hampshire GOP presidential primary campaign, and they are flying again in California.

When Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona suggested in New Hampshire that Social Security should be made voluntary — in place of the present compulsory taxation of workers and employers—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York hit back quickly.

He said Goldwater's idea would bankrupt the system and "take us right back to the poorhouse" conception of relief.

Rockefeller kept peppering away, and Goldwater kept explaining. He denied he wanted to end Social Security; he said his aim is to improve it. The night before the balloting he wound up proclaiming himself a card-carrying member of, and firm supporter, of Social Security.

What part the issue played in the results will, of course, never be known exactly. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, who wasn't there to talk about Social Security or any other issue, won a resounding victory.

In California Friday Goldwater and Rockefeller were at it again.

Goldwater said at a rally in Visalia that he wants to see the system strengthened but that it cannot be "if we saddle it" with medical and mental-health care.

Rockefeller, speaking at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, described the senator's views as "extremism."

The issue may not be so hot in California as it was in New Hampshire. Contrary to some popular impressions, the percentage of oldsters is smaller in California than, for example, in New England.

The 1960 census showed that 8.8 per cent of California's population of 15,717,204 was 65 years of age or older. But 11.2 per cent of New Hampshire's 606,921 people were in this age bracket. For the country as a whole the percentage of population 65 or older was 9.2 in 1960.

Goldwater's leanings toward a voluntary plan antedate the New Hampshire primary. In radio-television interviews last spring, for example, he predicted an eventual "revolt" among working people against increasing taxation for Social Security.

If proposed health care for the aged is added to gradual increases in taxes already slated, he said, it "means that by 1970 an individual could take the money that he and his employer spend on Social Security and buy twice as good a policy to cover everything that Social Security proposes to cover."

Campaigning in New Hampshire last January, Goldwater again spoke of a voluntary system. Whereupon Rockefeller got out a statement saying in part: "Sen. Goldwater's notions would wreck the Social Security system. He seems to have no conception of its basic functioning. He doesn't seem to understand that a contributory social insurance system, based on shared financing between employer and employe, simply will not work on a voluntary basis. . . .

"Under voluntary coverage, those who felt they did not need the protection would stay out of the system. This would mean less income for the system, an immediate deficit in receipts as compared with the benefits now being paid to retired persons, and the ultimate bankruptcy of the system. . . . It would be a national disaster."

As Rockefeller continued to fire away, Goldwater kept replying. In mid-February he told a campaign audience: "Social Security is a contract between you and the government. I don't believe in breaking contracts.'

He spoke of the retirement dollar decreasing in value and called for fiscal policies that would guarantee the soundness of that dollar. He said he does not advocate doing anything to the Social Security system "until we make a study of it and find out what should be done."

Again and again, he denied to campaign audiences that he wanted to abolish the system.

Barry, Rocky Pursue Votes In California

By ROBERT T. GRAY

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — California's rich prize of 86 delegates to the Republican National Convention was pursued with oratory and political maneuvering here by Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona and Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeler of New York.

The two contenders for their party's nomination for president were guests of the California Republican Assembly (CRA), a 14,000-member volunteer organization that is debating whether to endorse one of them.

Both are entered in the California June 2.

The senator and the governor came within 100 feet of each other Friday night—the closest since they became winter campaign opponents—but they did not meet.

Both sides apparently avoided a meeting deliberately when the two were at the Hacienda Motel, site of the CRA convention.

The 700 delegates will decide Sunday whether to endorse a presidential candidate. Rockefeller forces are trying to block an endorsement for fear it would go to Goldwater.

The Goldwater partisans, anticipating victory, insisted that the assembly take sides and promised to fight hard on the floor when the question comes up Sunday.

Labor Council Considers Recall Move

By GORDON G. GAUSS

DENVER (AP) — The Colorado Labor Council's executive board intends to study for another six weeks whether to enter any campaign to recall Gov. John A. Love, a Republican.

The board directed Herrick Roth, president of the council, Friday, to appoint a five-member committee to look into all aspects of the situation and report back at its May 5 meeting.

Roth announced the decision after a meeting of the board during which two persons appeared to urge a recall action. Roth did not identify them to reporters, but apparently they were from the University of Colorado.

While recall is possible under Colorado law, the procedure is difficult because petitions necessary to initiate it must be signed by 25 per cent of the voters who cast ballots for that office at the most recent election. In the case of the governor, petitions would require about 153,000 signatures. This is three times the number required to initiate a constitutional amendment.

The labor organization's delay also would tend to discount the possibility of any recall drive being successful, since a candidate would have to be found to oppose the governor. A May date for starting a recall move would mean only six months would remain until the time the issue would be voted upon at the November election.

Word that efforts were being made to start a recall move against the Republican governor leaked out while the legislature was in session, during the height of the battle over tuition increases for state colleges. At the time it was learned that officials of the Democratic Party were approached but turned down a request for financial help.

The Labor Council is an organization of AFL-CIO unions.

Its executive board, in a separate action Friday, praised presidents of state colleges and universities for their request to the legislature's Joint Budget Committee that appropriations be increased for higher education.

At the time, Gov. Love demanded the college presidents say what taxes they wanted increased to pay for such appropriations and how high they wanted the taxes raised.

"We don't consider it your responsibility to show the governor or the members of the General Assembly how or what tax sources to use at that level," the Labor Council said in a letter sent to the college chiefs.

"Basically, the people of Colorado are with you," the letter declared.

Two Suits Reported Stolen From Store

Stan Keller of Stan Keller Inc., 121 E. Pikes Peak Ave., reported to police Saturday that two suits valued at a total of $260 had been stolen from his store.

One was made of blue suede and valued at $150 and the other, colored beige, cost $110. Keller also said that in October of last year five garments were stolen.

Satellite Will Be Tested For Miracle Laser Beam

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —An Explorer satellite is scheduled for launching here Thursday to study the ionosphere and to serve as a tracking target for the intense, ruby-red beams of science's revolutionary new tool, the laser.

A three-stage Delta rocket is slated to lift off early Thursday to start the satellite on its intended 625-mile-high scientific mission. The Delta, made by Douglas Aircraft, will be seeking its 23rd straight satellite-launching success.

Major purpose of the 120-pound, propeller-shaped package is to make the most comprehensive survey yet of the ionosphere — an electrified atmospheric region which reflects radio waves back to earth and makes possible long-range communications on earth.

The satellite will send radio signals by varying frequency to more than 80 ground stations in 33 countries. By studying the strength of the signals as received at the widely scattered stations, scientists hope to obtain the first truly global map of the ionosphere under varied conditions of solar activity, time of year and hour of day.

Attached to the top of the satellite is a pyramid-shaped cluster of 360 one-inch-diamater mirrors to reflect the beam of a laser light-gun mounted on a tracking telescope at a ground station at Wallops Island, Va.

By measuring the time it takes the light beam to travel to the satellite and bounce back of the telescope, it is hoped that computers will be able to determine the position of the payload with an accuracy not possible with radar and other tracking devices.

The Wallops Island laser has a six-inch synthetic ruby rod which becomes highly energized as its atoms are excited by the flashing of a xenon gas high-intensity light. Within a fraction of a millionth of a second, a chain reaction produces a powerful concentrated red beam of light which can be directed by the telescope.

In the laboratories, potent laser beams have cut through steel and diamonds in split seconds, have drilled teeth and delicately "welded" detached retinas of human eyes back in place.

If the upcoming satellite laser experiments are successful, experts foresee several uses for the powerful beams, including precision tracking, communication with manned spaceships, determination of distance between two spacecraft intending to rendezvous, and as a possible destroyer of enemy missiles.

Old Greek Statue Found by Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — A charming little statue of Aphrodite, goddess of love, death and war, has been found on the Black Sea coast near the town of Taman.

The statue, about two feet high, is obviously of Greek origin and is highly prized by Soviet archaeologists. Little sculpture of such quality has been found in Russia although there were Greek colonies along the Black Sea for a thousand years before Christ.

The little goddess is nude to the thighs and is as dainty as a flower.

Soviet specialists are working the lime off the marble statue, accumulated during an estimated 2,000 or more years during which it may have been covered.

It was found, lying face down, by an archaeological team working on an old city site just where the Sea of Azov pours into the Black Sea. The head and hands are missing but careful digging is going on in the hopes of finding them.

THAT'S ALL

This is the actual size of the new "Sonotone Wisp" hearing aid compared with an ordinary peanut. It weighs only ¼ of an ounce, including the battery. It's a wisp of a hearing aid worn entirely at the ear, with a tube running to an eartip. Women cover it with a curl, men just tuck it in place.

Highway System To Be Longer Than China Wall

By TOM NOLAN

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Lane for lane, the sprawling federal Interstate Highway System will be about 130 times longer than the Great Wall of China. It has been called the most gigantic construction project in the world.

Now, despite a good many proven cases of corruption, graft and shoddy workmanship, the 41,000 - mile system is rambling toward its 1972 completion date.

As the halfway point of the 16 - year program approaches, 16,550 miles are open to traffic. Another 5,000 are under construction. Surveys and right-of way acquisition are under way on 12,000 more miles.

Only 18 per cent of the planned system remains to be tackled. The interstate system will account for a sizable portion of the total national investment of $6.3 billion this year. And many of the 870,000 highway jobs in the United States will be owed to the federal project.

Dancer's Life Like Laborer's, Poole Reports

By LYNN POOLE
The Johns Hopkins University

"Father! Look at the beautiful lady!"

The exclamation was mine decades ago, uttered as I walked down a railroad station platform, passed a glamorous private car coupled to the end of a long train and saw a very, very beautiful woman surrounded by many, many men.

My ramrod-backed father was not among them. He was with me. I wanted to tarry and gaze at this fascinating female whose magnetism penetrated even my puerile being. But being with my father I was peremptorily yanked by the arm and dragged down the platform to our own, more modest Pullman car.

Soothed by the soft voice of the porter, I was about to lean back on the white head-cloth and dream about the beautiful princess of whom I had so fleeting a glance. A thunderbolt split my unformed dream — "Lynn! THAT woman is a woman of the theatre. Furthermore she is a DANCER!" Not content with such damnation, my father continued to instruct me fully on the sins of the theatre and especially women of loose morals who were dancers — especially THIS one.

To impress me with her wickedness he told me all the salacious details of the life of this woman — known as Isadora Duncan. With each new tidbit he managed only to tittilate me the more. His sermon stopped. I leaned back, closed my eyes and burned with an inner fire by imagining what bacchanalian revelry was taking place in the private car at the rear of the train. How I wished I were there!

Isadora Duncan incited invective and kudos, stirred controversy while she lived, and in death, defied dispassionate evaluation — as a woman and a dancer. She patently was more than a "loose woman running barefoot around the stage" as many said, and she was less than a "mind and moral force" using her "momentous power, as the giants of mankind have always done, not only to entertain the world but move it," as Max Eastman claimed.

After her tragic death in 1927 a battle raged between her devoted disciples and unchivalrous underminers. But, today, for the first time we have an objective biography of the woman and the dancer. With "Isadora Duncan: Her Life, Her Art, Her Legacy," (Dodd, Mead & Co.), Walter Terry, dance critic of the New York Herald-Tribune, has completed many years of research and written in 174 pages a concise summation of the "beautiful lady" I saw surrounded by admirers on a station platform.

Immoral she was, by Puritan standard. Creative she was, by any standard. But, Isadora Duncan brought new life into the art of the dance — thru her artistic devotion, and backbreaking, hard, physical work. She, Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn infused the dance with new life; brought it from the quivering mud of "Little Egypt" and the "Belly Roll," to the apex of creativity now seen on our stages. Whether a dance enthusiast or not, many people will find Duncan's biography a provocative and worthwhile study about the life and times of Isadora.

I never saw Duncan dance. But I have seen every great dancer, and known many of them personally, since that fateful day decades ago. I have seen sweat soak their practice clothes and grimaces of pain cross their faces. I have seen them fall from exhaustion during rehearsal and after performance.

They dance with raging fevers, perform with acute disorders, smile with aches that would put most of us in bed. Most men dancers combine the souls of artists and the bodies of laborers. Day and night they work, no matter how they feel. They travel all night by bus, perform and travel again. The toughest sandhog would crumple under the physical pressure of a dancer's life.

Yet, none of this is evident in their performances, nor in "American Dance Portfolio" (Dodd, Mead & Co.) by the famous dance photographer Jack Mitchell, published simultaneously with the new biography of Isadora Duncan. Containing 159 portraits of leading personalities in American dance from Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, to contemporary dancing stars of theatre, stage and television, this book presents what we the audience see from the auditorium. Mitchell, with his tutored knowledge of the dance, has caught today's artists in the full joy of action, in the sombre moments of waiting-for-cues, in the semi-pause of arrested motion. For us, he has focused his close-up lens on the fascinating faces of dancers as they pause between rest and movement.

At times he subtlely lights the lovely forms of the females, and harshly outlines the virile muscularity of the men. At other times he preserves the blur of single aerial leaps, the solidarity of group formations, and the freedom of space each creates. Through the pages pass the joy, triumph, success, artistry and color of contemporary dance.

In this superb, photographic tribute to American dancers, Mitchell has not once dimmed the picture by exposing that laborious, hard life behind the footlights. It is there. But, like Isadora Duncan, the life of a dancer is on stage — the laborer's job is done behind the curtain.

Faculty Lecture Programs Set at Palmer High

The next two scheduled lectures in the Palmer High School Faculty Lecture Program will give students a look at two vastly different subjects.

On Monday Henry Lujan, Science Department chairman, will talk about space satellite communication. Two weeks later, on March 30, George Lewis of the Speech Department will deliver a lecture entitled "Unity in Disunity: Buddhism."

Lujan's lecture will deal with the launching and tracking of satellites, calculating a satellite's orbit, and related topics. He holds a bachelors degree from Colorado State College, a masters degree from Colorado College, and has done additional work at Brigham Young University and the Colorado School of Mines.

Lewis, who holds degrees from the Universities of Denver and Colorado, became interested in Asiatic religions while he was in college and has continued to study them since. Military service in the Far East gave him an opportunity to attend Buddhist services and discuss the religion with Buddhist priests.

All lectures are given in the Palmer High's General Palmer Room, starting at 3 p.m.

Science for You

PROBLEM: The Floating Paraffin.

NEEDED: A jar, some water, some kerosene, and a piece of paraffin.

DO THIS: Fill the jar not quite half full of water, then pour kerosene in. Drop the paraffin into the jar, and it sinks through the kerosene but floats on the water. It seems to float mysteriously midway in the jar.

WHY? Paraffin wax is heavier than kerosene but lighter than water. (See Archimede's principle.)

'Oldest Physician' Still on House Calls

FANCY GAP, Va. (AP) —Dr. J. R. Branscombe may be 100 years old, but as Virginia's oldest practicing physician, he is still able to make house calls, even under adverse conditions.

He began 1964 by delivering a son to Mrs. Hed Wood at the home of her parents. For a while it looked like the physician would have to use a sleigh to reach his destination, but he made it by car despite the difficulties.

Said the centurian, "I felt I did as good a job on this one as I did on my first delivery 64 years ago."

SEPARATE NATIONALITIES

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., believes the only way to end the bloodshed on Cyprus "is to separate the two nationalisties altogether."

He suggested "immediate consideration and evaluation" Thursday his proposal for transferring all Turks living on Cyprus to the Turkish mainland with full indemnification for property rights and assistance in relocation. This would leave the island to the Greek Cypriots.

'ENTRE LAUGHING'

NEW YORK (AP) — A Paris version of Broadway's comedy success, "Enter Laughing" is slated for spring debut. The show, based on a novel by TV's Carl Reiner, concerns a youth's efforts to become an actor.

Jean Cosmos is handling the adaptation. He previously prepared another White Way comedy, "A Thousand Clowns," for exhibit in the French capital.

DISASTER AREAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Small Business Administration (SBA) has designated flood-damaged sections of Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Missouri as disaster areas.

The disaster declaration, announced Thursday, permits owners of homes and businesses, churches and charitable institutions whose property was damaged or destroyed to apply to the SBA for 3 per cent loans to rebuild or rehabilitate their property.

The United States is the world's largest exporter of agricultural products. The value of 1962 exports was $5.1 billion.

Fountain Valley School Has Day-Boy Program

The Fountain Valley School, altho it is essentially a boys' boarding school, takes a limited number of day boys each year from the Colorado Springs area.

The program offered is a particularly rich one, designed to prepare potentially able students for entrance to the more selective colleges in the country.

The Second Form (8th grade) group contains about one half this year's day boys. For this reason, special emphasis is put on teaching them as a unit.

To accomplish this, their course of study is integrated or "correlated." English, mathematics, science, history, French, Music and art are all presented in relation to one another, so as to demonstrate the essential contiguity of the disciplines presented.

Moreover, most of these courses are taught by the older and more experienced members of the faculty, who have been trained in the leading universities in this country and Europe.

The Headmaster, Mr. Lewis Perry, Jr., teaches them English; science, music and art are taught by department heads, and Mrs. C. Dwight Perry, French-born, is their French teacher.

These boys are transported by bus each day from their homes to the school. They eat lunch in the dining room with the boarders and faculty; and they associate intimately during the day on the campus, in sports, in extra - curricular activities with boys who come from thirty-four different states and several foreign countries.

They have their own room in Froelicher Hall where there is a locker for each boy.

Each year in May, an examination is given which is open to any boy entering the Second Form. The winner is awarded a full scholarship for the year.

The examination this year will be held in the school gymnasium, Saturday morning, May 23, at 9 o'clock. Last year's winner was Lee Bartholomew, son of John Bartholomew, local columnist and commentator.

Dr. Sterrett To Speak to Winter Nighters

Dr. John K. Sterrett, scientific advisor to the deputy chief of staff for communications and electronics of NORAD, will be the speaker at the Monday meeting of the Winter Night Club at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Dr. Sterrett will discuss the national space program. The meeting will be held in the ballroom of the Broadmoor Hotel and get underway at 7 p.m.

Before coming to Colorado Springs he was staff scientist at National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), where he worked closely with the U.S. astronauts. He helped to set up arrangements whereby they could be informed, while in flight, where their space craft was and the performance of that space craft. When Col. John Glenn went over, Dr. Sterrett was at the Fort Huachuac, Arizona, tracking center, monitoring his performance.

Prior to his appointment at NASA, Dr. Sterrett was Chief Mathematician (Quartermaster Corps, U.S. Army); Group Leader, Operations Research Division (U.S. Navy); Director, Aeroballistics Directorate (Air Force Armament Center, U.S. Air Force); and College Mathematics Professor for ten years.

Dr. Sterrett was born in Manhattan, Kans., and moved to Colorado Springs in April 1961, with his wife, Ruth, and their three children. He received his BS degree at Washburn College, Topeka, Kans.; his MA degree at Kansas University, Lawrence, Kansas; and his Ph. D. Degree at the University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, Pa.

He is affiliated with the British Interplanetary Society, American Rocket Society, Mathematics Societies, Associations, and Organizations. He is a member of the International Relations Committee, National Academy of Science, and the International Committee for Space Research (COSPAR).

Dial System Flourishes In Vienna

By JIM BECKER

VEINNA (AP) — Have you heard about the fellow who picked up the telephone and dialed the weather, and got a fairy tale instead?

You probably haven't heard about him because I just made him up, but in Vienna it could happen.

Or he might get the soccer scores. Or the bus schedule. Or find out what's playing at the movies.

In Vienna you can dial a number and get any of those services, via tape recorder.

Or you can call 1562, and they will play you the "record of the week." And 1582 and 1583 will bring the snow reports for skiers.

The number for the news is 1530. The weekly fairy tale is 1560. And 1503 is the correct time.

One of the telephone services that had to be discontinued was the weekly recipe. Cooking is pretty serious business in Vienna, and housewives reportedly were trying to talk back to the tape machine and tell it how the dish should really be prepared.

One other handy service that was disconnected was the "joke of the week."

Listeners said it wasn't funny. The telephone company said that was because it had to launder the jokes so drastically that they lost their flavor.

Here's the joke that killed the "joke of the week:"

A man strolls down the street with his father-in-law. The man keeps mumbling. "I can't forgive you. I simply can't forgive you."

"Why can't you forgive me?" asks the father-in-law.

"Because you didn't throw me out of the house when I asked to marry your daughter."

How does that grab you? Oh, you hung up.

District Nurse Of the Year to Be Selected

Dr. E. B. Liddle, Colorado Springs surgeon, will speak on the medical aspects of the picture and Richard Schmidt, Denver attorney, on the legal aspects. Schmidt is attorney for the Colorado Nurses Association.

Interest Focused On Cloud-Racked Planet Venus

For centuries man has been intrigued by the brilliant, cloud-racked planet of Venus.

The mysteries of Venus, brighter than all celestial bodies except the sun, will be explained during the spring presentation at the Air Force Academy Planetarium.

Open to the public, programs will be given at 2 and 3:15 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays March 21 to May 10.

The present demonstration "Our Island Universe" will continue until today.

Two extremes of steller exploration will also be traced by the spring program; the flight of Mariner II, Aug. 27, 1962, and the first probings of Galileo Galilei nearly four centuries ago.

Tribute will be paid to Galileo on the 400th anniversary of his birth. The great discoveries made by the astronomer with his newly-made "optick tube" will be described.

Observations by Galileo of the phases of Venus substantiated the revolutionary theories of Copernicus and opened the gateway to much of the knowledge of the world around us.

Doctor Saves Man's Life With New Technique

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Dr. Henry Lemon, director of the Eppley Cancer Institute here, has been credited with saving a man's life by the use of an emergency technique about which he had read, but had never before tried.

Dr. Lemon was returning to Omaha aboard a United Air Lines plane Sunday when the stewardess asked his help for a passenger who was slumped over in his seat and apparently unconscious. The man was Woody Clardy, 43, Denver.

Dr. Lemon felt Clardy had suffered a heart attack and decided to apply the relatively new external heart massage, about which he had read although he had never tried it. He also used oxygen that was available aboard the plane. After about 15 minutes Clardy began breathing and slowly regained consciousness.

"At one point, not sure of my diagnosis, I stopped massaging. The man immediately had a relapse so I resumed," Dr. Lemon said.

Clardy was removed from the plane at Denver and taken to General Rose Memorial Hospital. The Omaha World-Herald said the hospital reported Friday he had recovered sufficiently to be sent home Tuesday. A hospital official said the emergency treatment by Dr. Lemon aboard the plane "undoubtedly" saved Clardy's life.

FROM HIS NICE NAP

LEWIS, Iowa (AP)—John R. Struthers was taking an afternoon nap at his home one afternoon when his wife awakened him.

"There's a bunch of cars stopped down the road," she said. "Maybe it's an accident. Go down and see."

Struthers protested, but finally made the trip of about two blocks in his car. The cluster of cars was the result of an Iowa Highway Patrol motor vehicle check, and Struthers got a ticket for a defective turn signal.

Carson Unit Has New Information Officer

Capt. Thomas S. Bainbridge, who since August 1962 served in the Information Division of the staff of the U.S. Commander Berlin, reported this week as Ft. Carson and 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Information Officer. He succeeds Capt. Leonard A. Henry, who is on orders for Korea.

Bainbridge was born in Detroit April 27, 1935. He attended Detroit grade schools before going to Howe Military Academy in Indiana from 1949 to 1953, then attended the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, where he was graduated in 1957.

He took the basic infantry officers course, airborne and Ranger training at Ft. Benning, Ga., prior to joining the 101st Airborne Division in April, 1958.

After further schooling at Ft. Benning, he became aide de camp to the commanding general at Ft. Jackson, S.C. ,Maj. Gen. Christian H. Clarke, Jr. In February, 1961, he was transferred to Berlin where he served for 18 months as a weapons platoon leader and company executive officer for the 3d Battle Group, 6th Infantry. From this duty he was selected for the information office assignment.

HARTFORD, Ky. (AP)—Anna Fay Autry often reminds her friends of a visit she received from outer space while she was watching television. A half-pound metallic object crashed through the window of her home. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Autry sent it to geological-survey authorities in Washington. They said it was a meteorite.

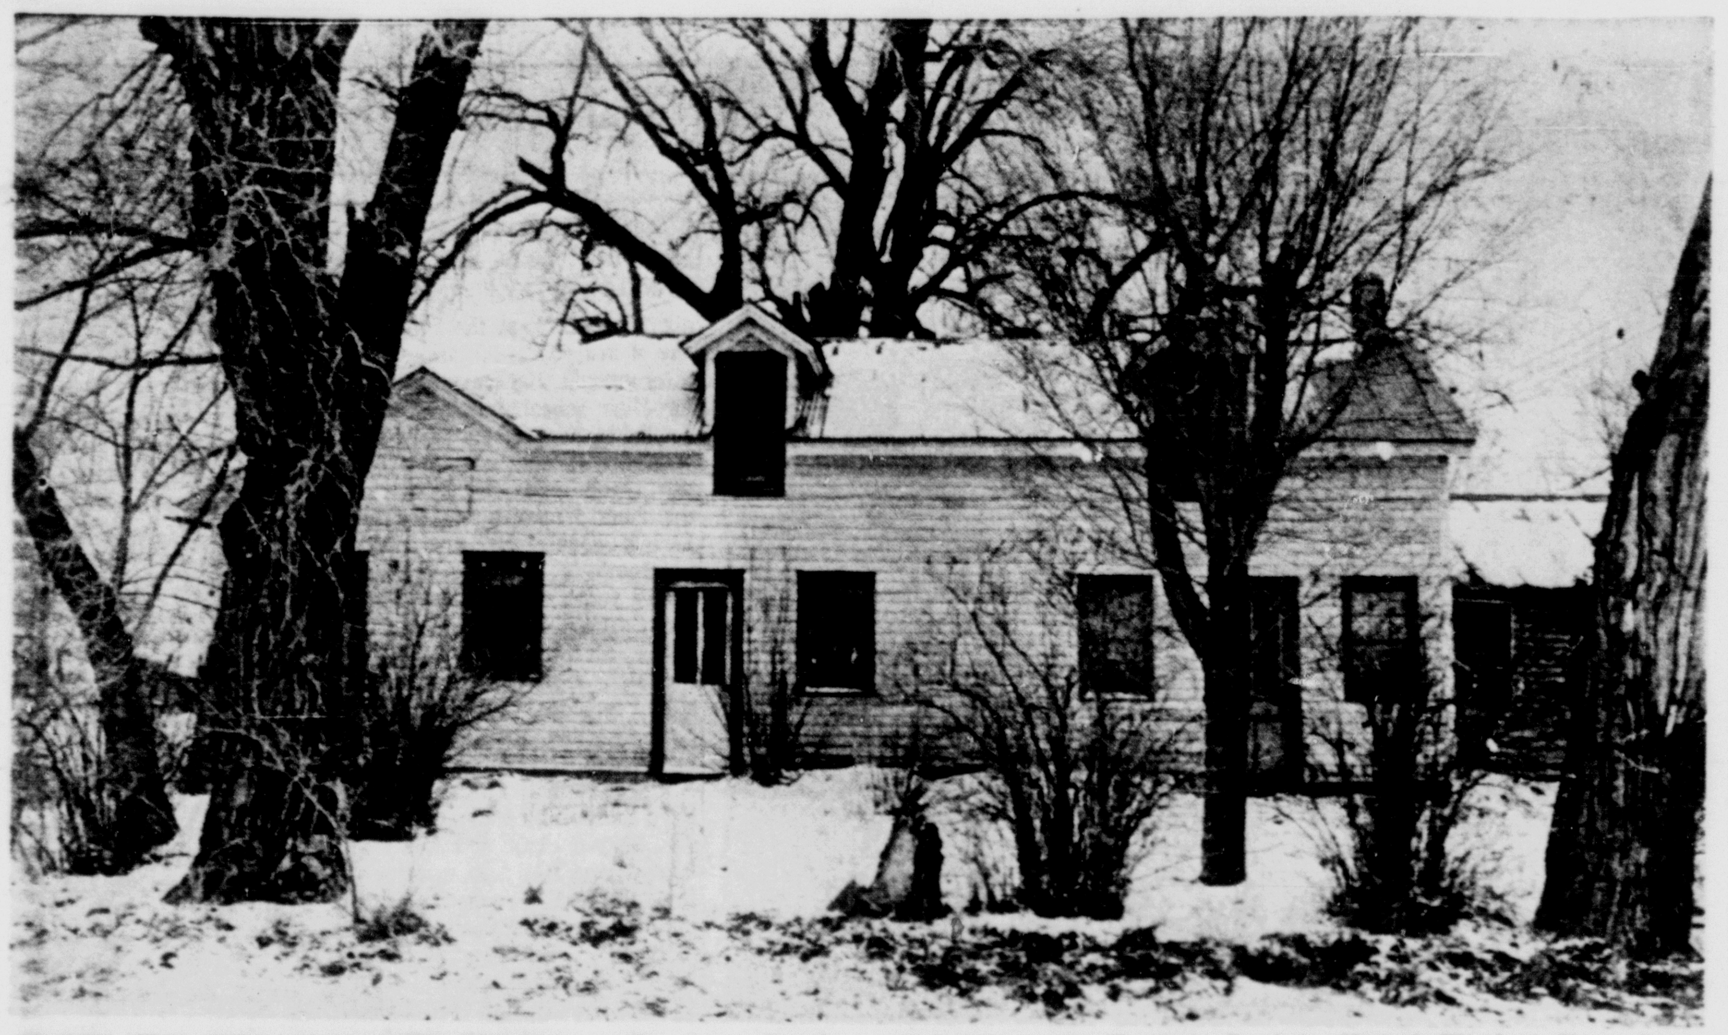
COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE TELEGRAPH
COLORADO SPRINGS—SUNDAY, MARCH 15, 1964 SECTION B



UNDER THE SPREADING COTTONWOODS — The Bates Ranch house on the Sinton Dairy Co. property south of the city will soon be torn down to make room for a housing project by Stratmoor Development Co. The section showing the two dormer windows was the original house; additions were put on later. The trees began as saplings plucked in nearby Fountain Creek by Hannah Elizabeth Evans Bates who planted them around the house. James Wherry Bates and his wife came to the Colorado Territory in 1859 and the ranch house was built the following year. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

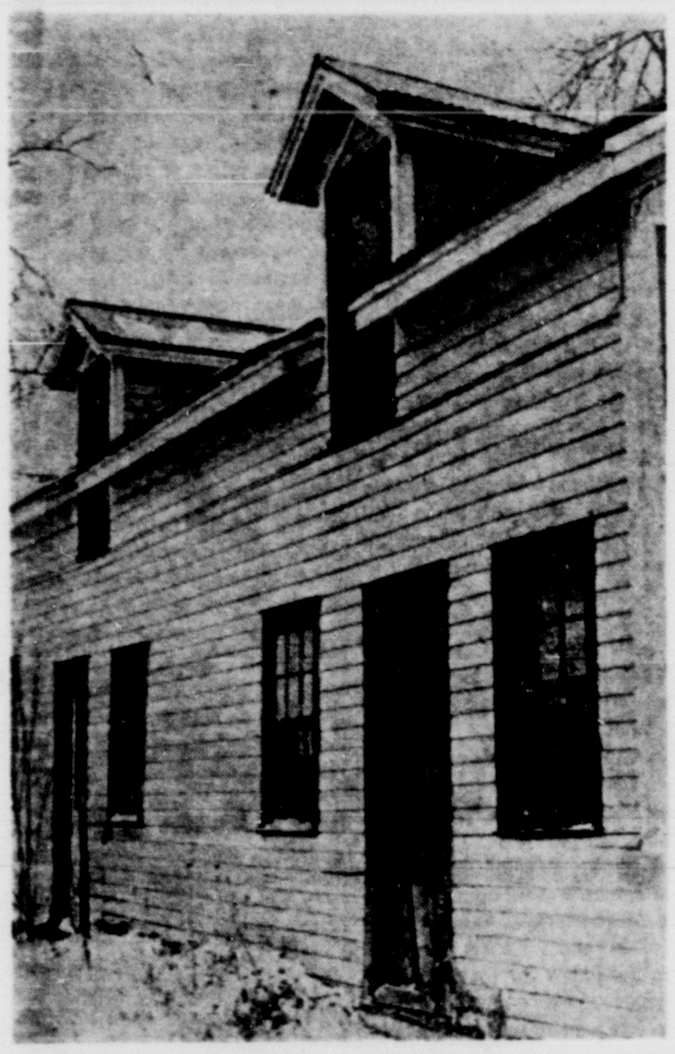
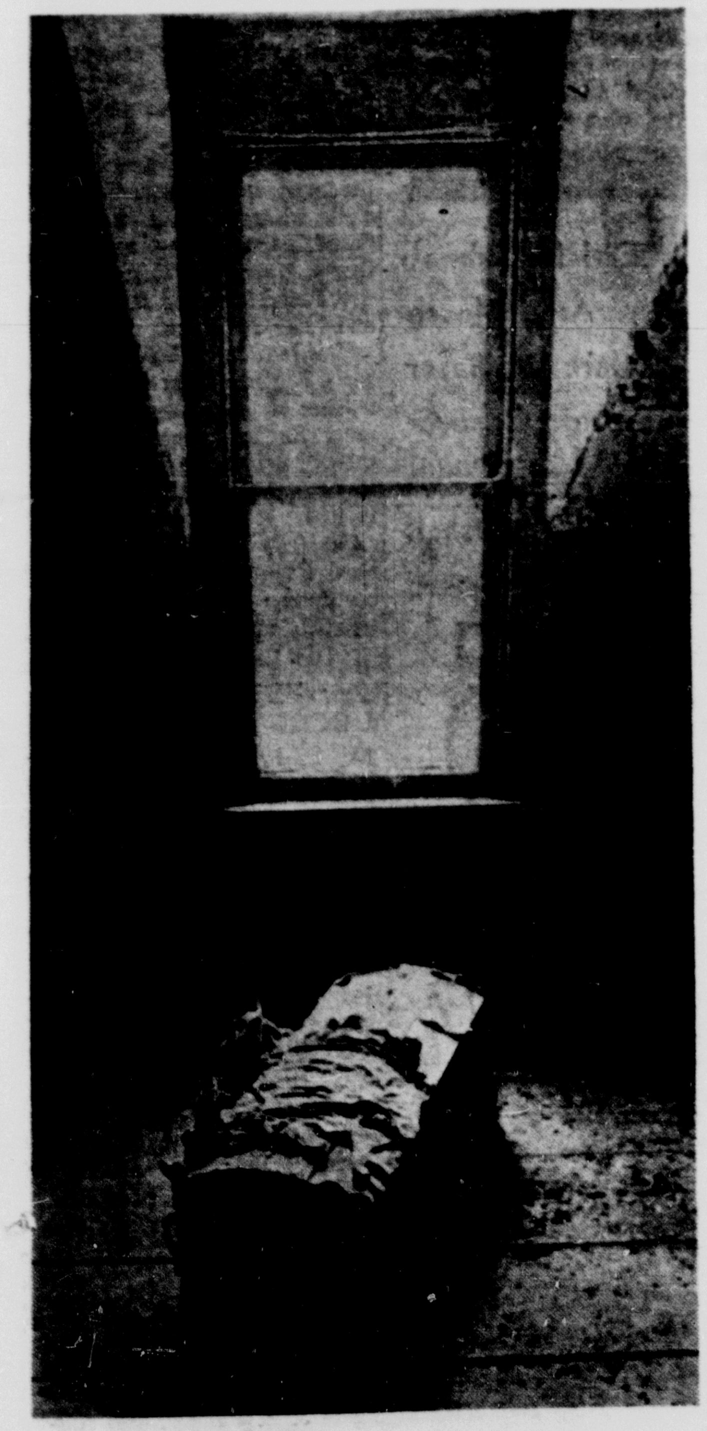
Century-Old Ranch Soon to Disappear...



19TH CENTURY HOME — This shows a closer view of the original part of the ranch house. The cottage boasted two ground floor rooms and two bedrooms upstairs with dormer windows housed in gablets. Slanting walls in the bedrooms were typical of the period. Gazette Telegraph Photo)



WELL TRAVELED TRUNK — One a many splendored thing, the small wooden trunk in foreground reveals only a trace of its original handsomeness. The trunk was covered with horsehide, the remaining pieces now brittle and dry with age. On the bottom, lettering reveals that it was sent to a member of the Evans family "near Elkton, Maryland."

Descendant Recalls Other Times

By MARGUERITE MITCHELL
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

The American practice of replacing old landmarks with historical markers has long puzzled the British and Europeans.

A marker posted near a parking lot or a housing project just doesn't mean anything to a foreigner, and has less meaning to many Americans.

When ancient buildings are torn down in foreign countries, especially England, the hue and cry can be heard across the land. Often times the objections find sympathetic ears and history is preserved.

Here it is usually another story. Progressive-minded city planners turn a deaf ear to the small groups of history-conscious people whose valiant attempts to save old landmarks come to nought.

Of course, to be fair to the city fathers, it's often a necessity to tear down obsolete structures and replace them with modern buildings.

"What will be, will be," sigh the people, unless they have the tenacity to fight it out to a last ditch stand. Otherwise, future generations have only photographs to show them what went before.

This will not be the case with one of the pioneer ranches in Colorado.

The Bates Ranch, long the property of Sinton Dairy Co., will soon be demolished.

The land has been sold to Stratmoor Development Co. who will replace the white clapboard ranch house and its outbuildings with rows of family residences.

It was more than a century ago, 1859, when a New York coffee buyer and his Maryland-born wife arrived in the Colorado Territory after a long trek across country on the Santa Fe Trail.

The couple, James Wherry Bates and Hannah Elizabeth Evans Bates, settled on the banks of Fountain Creek and built a small board house.

Mrs. Bates had brought along with her from Maryland a syringa shrub which she planted in front of the small house. From the creek bottom she dug up cottonwood saplings and set them out around the house to provide shade in later years.

The cottonwoods still stand where she planted them, now tall and graceful and adding their bright yellow beauty to delight the scene during the early fall.

James and Hannah Bates had two sons; one was William Henry Bates who married Phoebe Holcomb whose parents had come west on the Overland Trail.

Phoebe Holcomb was the first white baby girl born in Denver (Jan. 6, 1860) and her daughter Mrs. Susie Bates Clements tells the story about how Indians used to come from miles around to see the little white papoose.

Mrs. Clements, 76, and her husband Willie live with their son, Bill and his wife, on one of the Little Ranches of The Fountain.

She was one of nine children, all born on the Bates Ranch. Her younger brother Roland, who makes his home in Louisiana, is the only other child of William and Phoebe who is still living.

A pert, witty lady, Mrs. Clements says she's often asked about the "hard times" back in the days before the turn of the century.

"I can't remember when we didn't have steam heat," she says, "and Dad put in his own electric plant in the 90s so we always had lights, even around the ranch buildings."

Her grandfather had started a school on the ranch but later a red brick school house was built a couple of miles away on the road to Colorado Springs. Named The Bates School, it is used today as a private residence.

The children had no trouble getting to school, Mrs. Clements says, as there were always hired men about to take them "or a grandfather."

Her grandfather and father were always interested in education, and her father never failed to stop off at the school for a visit when he was on his way to Colorado Springs to chat with the county commissioners.

The trip to town took about an hour, Mrs. Clements said, and she often came into Colorado Springs in her mother's "real classy buggy."

She recalled that the buggy had seats that switched around and remembers once when they pulled over on Tejon Street, a nearby girl was heard to say "When we get rich we're going to have a buggy like that."

"I guess we were considered rich," Mrs. Clements said. Her father had bought a "townhouse" on 19th Street and the family divided their time here and out on the ranch.

Out at the ranch, there was never a lack for anything to do. The children had swings on the stately cottonwood trees planted by her grandmother, and she remembers when Winfield Scott Stratton used to come out and ride the team of horses he kept on the ranch.

Her parents often entertained with dances and Mrs. Clements says their dining room was big enough for "two or three squares."

Visiting ministers used to come and stay at the ranch and preach at the school house for the family and neighbors. Mrs. Clements recalls particularly there was usually a minister of the Church of the Latter Day Saints who called on them.

Mrs. Clements' father died in 1911, and her mother followed him nine years later. During the 20s, the children sold the property to the Sinton Dairy Co.

Later, one of Mrs. Clements' sisters asked the Sintons if she could have a slip from the syringa shrub to place on her grandmother's grave. "Please, take the whole bush," she was told.

The shrub was taken up and placed on the grave of the lady from Cecile County, Maryland, who had come to Colorado during the "Pikes Peak or Bust" era.

"We did all sorts of things to try and save it," Mrs. Clements says, "but it started to die."

But before this happened, Mrs. Clements took a slip from the plant and placed it on the grave of her sister who had made the original request to the Sintons.

"It lived and grew," Mrs. Clements said.

All this was years ago. And soon there will be a cleared earth and the white clapboard house and its ranch buildings will be replaced with modern dwellings.

And there will be nothing to remind El Paso County residents of how a family lived here a century ago.

Charles Simon Announces for District Judge

In a letter to Bernard L. Trott, republican chairman Fourth Judicial District, incumbant County Judge, Charles J. Simon, announced his candidacy for district judge.

Admitted to the Colorado Bar in 1929, Simon practiced law in Colorado Springs until 1953 when he assumed his judicial duties.

In his letter of announcement, the Judge advised he was seeking the district judgeship to continue his service to people in trouble and to assist in an orderly transition of the probate, mental health and juvenile functions of the court, now administered by him which pass to the District Court on January 12, 1965.

Those services have been dignified by the constitutional amendment and the legislature; in Denver the probate and juvenile courts have been constitutionally segregated; I am honored by the recognition of the responsibility I have tried to discharge during the past 11 years, and hope to continue experienced, competent, efficient and courteous service to the people of my judicial district."

Nelson came to Colorado Springs sixteen years ago, and he has had a varied legal experience, including approximately 30 years of law practice.

He spent the first two years of his career on a state study of judicial administration conducted by the chief justice of the Ohio Supreme Court and then practiced law for five years with Stearns, Chamberlain, Royon, Dolphin and Ziegler, a Cleveland firm.

After the "bank holiday," Nelson accepted a position as law and claims attorney with National Surety Corporation, opening and managing their offices in various mid-western cities for a period of eight years. He resigned this position to accept an appointment during World War II as an enforcement attorney in Cleveland with the office of price administration; and after the war, he served as assistant counsel of the Society for Savings in the City of Cleveland.

In 1948, Nelson joined his brother-in-law, Leonard V. B. Sutton, briefly in the law practice in this city. He later held positions at Shepard's Citations, Inc., Colorado Interstate Gas Company, and as post claims officer at Ft. Carson, before engaging in the private practice of law for the past five years here. He is now deputy district attorney and legal aid attorney.

Nelson is a trustee of Broadmoor Community Church and is president-elect of the West Colorado Springs-Manitou Springs Rotary Club. He lives at 1604 west Cheyenne Rd. with his wife, the former Jane Sutton, a native of Colorado Springs, and his daughter, Gail, a senior at Cheyenne Mountain High School. He has two sons: Scott, a second year student at Harvard Medical School, and Kent, a junior at Yale.

Nelson announced his candidacy for the county judgeship this past week.

Youths Held For Questioning After Break in

Police picked up six teen-age boys Friday night for questioning regarding the Wednesday break-in at King Soopers, 2727 Palmer Park Blvd. and the theft of two cars.

The youths who were in a car stolen from Ernest Q. Williams, 326 S. 8th St. were stopped at Eighth and Cucharras Street by Police Officers Robert E. Isham and Donald M. Bjornsrud. The boys were using a set of stolen license plates.

According to the report, the 15-year old driver confessed to entering the supermarket. He said he backed a car up to the door, fastened a chain to the vehicle and door and then pulled the door down. Approximately $587 worth of merchandise was taken and the police officers said they found "several hundred dollars worth" of the loot in the boy's car.

Three of the six were 13 and the others 15. Two were brothers and wanted as runaways. At least three of the group have already been in juvenile institutions.

The second stolen car was taken sometime before the Wednesday robbery and belonged to Richard Carter White, 1320 N. Nevada Ave. It was found abandoned in the 1100 block of West Kiowa Street. A number of items worth $48 were missing and have not been recovered.

Bank Crimes Soar 360% in Seven Year Period

Robberies, burglaries and larcenies of banks rose to a record 1,548 in 1963, an increase of 360 per cent from the 450 such incidents recorded in 1956, according to Commerce Clearing House, publishers of federal banking law reports.

The 1963 rate was 20 per cent higher than in 1962, recording a monthly average of 125 cases compared with 100-a-month a year earlier, according to the CCH review of a Congressional study.

The study indicated that factors contribuitng to the increase were lack of laws protecting financial institutions, lack of standard requirements for security procedures, devices and alarm systems, the increase in suburban and outlaying area banks and the existence of deposit insurance tending to create laxity in deposit protection.

Looking to curb the upswing in bank crimes, the Congressional report called for closer federal scrutiny of crime prevention facilities in considering a bank's application for charter, branching or deposit insurance.

It recommended that a set of guidelines for the prevention of such crimes be established by federal banking supervisory agencies and further, that fingerprints of officers and employees of banks be submitted to the FBI for a check against the Bureau's files to forestall possible internal crimes and to exclude underworld elements from bank employment.

Bank crimes involving violence in 1961 resulted in a loss of $1,975,331 and this figure grew to $2,220,139 (less recoveries) in 1962. These figures do not include estimated losses due to embezzlements which in 1962 numbered 700 cases involving $10.1 million, the CCH review noted.

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

The 1964 initiation of members into Quill and Scroll Society was held Thursday night, March 5, at the home of one of last year's initiates. This International Honorary Society for High School Journalists is limited to 20 members per year. With the 17 new members for this year and the three old members, Wasson's total for the Society equals the prescribed number.

Last year's members are Karren Cogburn, Art Wright, and Linda McEwen. This year's members from the yearbook staff include Craig Carson, Lynn Charlton, Mike Fiene, Larry Gendreizig, Leslie Helfrich, Karen Loptien, Louise Manz, Brad Smith, and Elaine Thompson. Sharon Price and Ann Ellington are the new members from the staff of Wasson's original student publication, the "Penman." The new initiates from the school paper, the "Thunderbolt," staff are Lynn Brunstein, Pat Cowan, Veralyn Cox, Madalyne Gunn, Sherry Irving, Carol Jensen, Janet Priest, and Lynn Rainier. Wasson's sponsor for the Society is Mr. Robert Hill, who is also sponsor for the yearbook, the "Wahian."

To be eligible for honor, students must have done superior work in some phase of journalism for school publications and rank in the upper third of their class. Writing, editing, business management, and production are among the phases of journalism the students could participate in.

This past week was designed as "Take Pride in Wasson Week" by the student cabinet. Each day was designated a special title, all of which dealt with pride in the school.

Monday was a clean-up cafeteria day; Tuesday was a dress-up day for the students, with the goal that pride in oneself creates pride in the school; Wednesday was set aside for safety in the halls; Thursday was the day to show courtesy to fellow students and faculty members; and Friday was a official "Red and Gray" day, with all students having to wear some red and gray as a symbol of school spirit.

Wasson's students newspaper, the "Thunderbolt," has received an honor rating of "All-American" from the National Scholastic Press Association. This award was made on the basis of a total score of 3,800 points out of a possible 4,000 accredited to the paper for its treatment of copy, sports coverage, news coverage, headlines, and pictures, plus other journalististic qualities.

Even tho school newspapers from all over the nation submit papers for consideration and ratings of first, second, third, or fourth class.

The order of business at the National Honor Society meeting last Wednesday was the discussion of the day's events during the First Annual Colorado National Honor Society Conference held on the University of Colorado campus in Boudler Feb. 29. Those students who attended the conference were asked to report to the group on the various activities and panels they attended.

Over 600 Colorado scholars attended the state meeting and toured the campus. Most students felt that the day was interesting and educational, let alone well-organized. During Wasson's meeting last Wednesday, members asked questions of the student reporters about the subjects of the panel discussions and then discussed the idea of the meeting.

Julia Ann Hargrove, Collen Hall, and Jean Totten won first, second, and third prizes respectively in the essay contest sponsored by the Colorado Sprin'gs Breakfast Optimist Club.

This year's patriotic topic was "There Is a Reason to Salute the Flag!" The contest, opened to all juniors and seniors writing an essay of 250 to 450 previously unpublished words, was judged on "originality, logical presentation of ideas, clear expression, and neatness." The awards were made during a breakfast given by the Optimist Club on Feb. 25.

The National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test was given by the Wasson counseling department last Saturday morning for those juniors interested in earning financial aid for college. Only those students with high scores, however, are eligible for a letter of recommendation or a scholarship. These semi-finalists after notification of their status by the school in September of 1964.

Wasson students in American History classes were asked to vote for one senior girl whom they thought had "leadership ability, patriotism and responsibility and had given service to the community."

The top five girls chosen by the school faculty for the the students were then voted on Good Citizenship Award from the Daughters of the American senior girl to receive the 1964 Revolution. Secretary of Records, Pat Bailey, won the award given to a Wasson senior, and she received a gold pin with a "DAR Good Citizen" inscription.

Pat filled out a questionnaire including questions about her school services, community, and religion, plus a definition of democracy and republic and then their differences, to be considered for the state winner.

Wasson's mixed choir, Watonettes, and the preparatory choir will participate in the original musical, "Dubble Trubble," to be presented to students and the community on Thursday and Fri day at 8:15 p.m. in the auditorium. This musical was written by Charles Meeker, director of the vocal music department at the school.

The plot centers around a scheduling of two performances for the same night at a college. The musical leads, which will give only one performance since the musical is double-cast, include Karne Lind and Sue Speed, Steve Young and Tom Green, Kathy McVehil and Du-Ann Rutherford, and Dave Scott and Mike Anderson.

Miss Marian Hollister of Wasson's English department and teacher of the Advanced Placement English course at the school has been awarded a John Hay Fellowship for the year 1964 to 1965.

The fellowship, given by the Ford Foundation, will pay for her tuition and transportation costs to one of six major colleges in the nation.

Easter Bunny To Be Blue For Youngsters

The Easter Bunny will be blue for some 650 underprivileged youngsters from the Colorado Springs and Denver areas this year.

"Operation Easter," an annual event planned, paid for, and carried out entirely by members of the Air Force Academy Cadet Wing, will bring the children to the Academy for a real, old fashioned, egg hunting holiday.

From the time they arrive until they leave, packed inside and out with Easter goodies, the youngsters will be guests of the Cadet Wing.

They'll receive a picnic-type lunch, play a wide variety of games, watch special entertainment, films, and a chemistry demonstration.

Naturally, there will be an egg hunt with success for all practically guaranteed.

An appearance of the Easter Bunny himself — not without some complications — is also promised.

Judging from last year's program, it will be a tossup to see who has the most fun — the kids or the cadets.

GOLD MEDAL TO LILLIAN HELLMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Institute of Arts and Letters is presenting its 1964 gold medal for drama to Lillian Hellman. The award is made every five years.

Miss Hellman's most recent Broadway success was "Toys in the Attic." In 1941 she won the Critics Circle annual citation with "Watch on the Rhine."

Local Drivers Receive Patrol Commendations

Four Colorado Springs motorists last week received commendations for safe driving from the State Highway Patrol and will compete for the March Highway Safety Award to be presented by the Denver Post and the Denver U.S. National Bank. They were:

Charles S. Ververs, Rt. 2, Colorado Springs; Jack O. Munson, Rt. 3, Colorado Springs; James K. McCann, 1010 Cache la Poudre St.; and Evelyn L. Siler, 1011 E. Vermijo Ave.

Highway Patrolman John D. Morrissey, 2123 W. Circle Dr., recently issued a commendation for careful, defensive driving to J. B. Palmer, 4500 Nassau St., Wichita Falls, Tex.

Ent Swordsmen Score High in Fencing Meet

Ent swordsmen Ed Weathers and John A. Sotomayor have once again teamed up at a Colorado fencing meet and, as usual, have placed among the top finishers.

This time, while fencing in the Colorado State Preliminaries at Lowry AFB, Colo., Sotomayor placed first with Sabre and Weathers copped a fourth using the sabre.

Sotomayor won all of his preliminary bouts, with scores of 5-3, 5-3, 5-4, 5-2, 5-2 and 5-3. He then went on to win five and lose one by scores of 5-4, 5-4, 5-0, 5-3, 5-2 and 1-5. He dueled Chuck Wakefield of the Colorado Fencers Club in a fenceoff for ifrst place and won, 5-2.

This makes Sotomayor's third first place in Colorado Sabre events and earns him another Gold Medal. He was, of course, the 1963 Air Force World-Wide Sabre champion.

Weathers garnered a second place in the preliimnaries with three victories against two setbacks. He won 5-3, 5-1 and 5-1 and then lost 5-1 and 5-2 in the prelim bouts.

In the seven-man finals, he won three and lost one with scores of 5-4, 5-0 and 5-2 along with the 4-5 defeat as time ran out in that match. He actually finished in a third place tie, but lost it on total number of touches incurred during the matches.

The Ent fencers are now practicing for the big one, locally — the Colorado State Championships scheduled for April. The locals will field a three-man team for the State meet, which at the U.. Nationals it they're victorious.

Parent's Math Course to Begin At CU Extension

"The New Mathematics", a course designed to assist parents and other interested adults in understanding the new concepts of mathematics recently introduced in the schools, will begin March 30 at the University of Colorado Extension Center.

The class, taught by John Morris, will meet for 9 weeks on Mondays from 8:20 to 10:30 P.M. Some of the topics to be covered include vector and vector spaces, sets and set theory, the logic of mathematics and the concept of number.

Time will be allowed for students to raise specific questions about the newer mathematical concepts. The fee is $17 for an individual and $25.00 for husband and wife.

Registration must be completed before the first class meeting at the C. U. Extension department of physics at the Center offices, 1105 N. Nevada Ave.

BURN U.S. FLAG

MEDELLIN, Colombia (UPI) —About 50 youths screaming "Yankees go home" burned a U.S. flag Thursday in the street outside the American consulate here, it was reported Friday.

Police quickly dispersed the anti - American demonstrators. There was no report of casualties. The demonstration apparently was touched off by reports that some troops from the Panama Canal Zone are coming to Medellin on leave.

There are about 1,000 different kinds of known cactus plants.

public without charge, will be a part of the song service before the "Bible-in-hand" lecture to be given by Evangelist Harold M. Williams.

Mrs. Du Boistops the list of a number of guest singers and instrumentalists scheduled to take part in the program. Others will be students from Campion Academy near Loveland, including violinist Joanne Mozat and others selected by Meritt Schumann, who conducts the school's choir.

Also on the program will be Dick Martin, the vocalist member of the evangelistic team, and his wife, Nita, who plays the organ and sings, too.

Pastor Williams will speak on the subject, "Mark of the Beast," climaxing a series of lectures on the topic taken from prophecies of the Book of Revelation. He will point to a day when "liberty will be in chains" and "no man can buy or sell." The nightly Bible talks are scheduled through March 22.

Mrs. Du Bois, who has taken several leading parts with the Colorado Springs Opera Association, currently is preparing for the role of Kathy in "The Student Prince," scheduled to be presented April 9-12 at the Fine Arts Center.

She has sung with the Colorado Springs Symphony and annually sings during the Good Friday services sponsored by the Colorado Springs Ministerial Alliance, this year to be presented at the First Presbyterian Church.

During this year's Lenten season she sang at the Chapel of Our Saviour in Broadmoor and was a guest soloist last week at the First Methodist Church. It was a broadcast of the Methodist service heard by Evangelist Martin that led to the invitation for her to sing at the service tonight.

Mrs. Du Bois, who lives at 2909 Garden Hill Dr., is the soloist at the Audubon Heights Baptist Church.

Some of her previous roles with the Opera Association were the lead in "La Serva Padrona," Polly in "Beggars Opera," Nedda in "Pagliacci," and she sang in "Hansel and Gretal."

Labor Groups Told To End Their Strike

FORT COLLINS (AP) — Two labor organizations were ordered Friday to end their strike against the construction of a 15 million gallon water storage reservoir for Fort Collins.

Dist. Judge Dale E. Shannon issued a temporary injunction against the Colorado State Council of Carpenters and Local 1340 of the Carpenters Union. The carpenters called a strike March 2 against the project and Van Winkle Construction Co. of Golden.

Van Winkle officials, who had requested the injunction, said work would resume Monday morning. Judge Shannon gave the carpenters 15 days to file a motion for a new trial.

Ever striving for the Pikes Peak Region to be an even better place to live

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

A Telling Point for Individualism

Individualism and collectivism are two opposing doctrines. Some folks favor the one idea, some the other. In a nation where freedom is a birthright, there ought to be a system in which a person could believe as he pleased.

But there is one major difference in these divergent views. Individualism, by its nature, is non-coercive. A person can believe in individualism, and let others believe as they please. But a person cannot believe in collectivism in the same way. To be a collectivist REQUIRES the conformity of everyone else.

This is the source of the real problem we face today. Differences of view should not only be permitted, they ought to be welcomed. But implicit in freedom of opinion, is the idea that regardless of the opinion taken, no one should be coerced to share the view of another.

To provide an illustration, let us take the question of government-supported and managed schools. Assume a state with 2,000,000 population, and let us suppose that of this number some 1,500,000 persons favor government schools. They have a right to their views, of course. They want government to tax them and to provide schools for their children as a result of these taxes.

But there is a minority group of 500,000. This group would like to put their children in private schools. They do not like government involved in the delicate task of training and educating their children. Well, they have a right to their views, too. And if minorities have any rights in this country, they should not be oppressed because of their opinions.

But examine the situation.

Because the majority group favors compulsive education, the minority loses its rights totally. The minority is compelled to pay taxes to support the schools favored by the larger segment. Then, if they wish schools of their own, they must provide them and pay for them on top of the fees forced from them in support of schools they don't want and won't use.

Here is the real problem between individualists and collectivists. The individualists, admittedly a minority, are in no position to force anyone to their wills. They simply want to be let alone. They don't want to force everyone else to a tax-free existence. They simply want to escape the double cost they encounter when they educate their children.

Is something wrong with this? If so, what is it?

But the collectivists are in such a weak position, philosophically, that they cannot brook opposition. This is the problem arising from all compulsion. Once compulsion has been accepted as a way of life, EVERYONE must be compelled. And this is the problem which would be faced, say, if the tables were turned and individualists were in the majority, yet they still relied on the government to make decisions for them. Then, because individualists were in a majority, they could, conceivably, pass a law forbidding government schools.

But this would be wrong, too. But it is a kind of wrong many people have difficulty in recognizing because we are all of us too certain that the majority, whatever it says, rules out the minority. This may be one of the reasons why more people do not express the individualism they feel and want to experience.

They imagine that the position of the true individualist is one wherein, if the individualists ever got the upper hand, collectivism would be ruled out. It could not be, in terms of moral understanding.

If there was a group of, say, a mere 100,000 who wanted compulsive tax-supported schools there would be nothing wrong with this group turning their educational problems over to the government, permitting themselves to be taxed, and getting the result. But it would be wrong for this group to tax the remaining 1,900,000 so they could have their schools.

This is, to our way of thinking, the factor that makes individualism so attractive and so unanswerable in terms of logic. The individualist doesn't try to force the collectivist to be an individualist. He merely insists that the collectivist content himself with coercing others in the collective framework, and let those who wish to be free, be free.

If collectivists would stop coercing individualists and confine their energies to those who approve of coercion, we could have little objection. But the weakness of collectivism resides in the fact that individualism, on this ground, is more attractive.

There are many organizations today in this country which pride themselves on supporting the rights of minority groups. The trouble with most of them is that they really don't support minority rights at all. They try to win a majority to their standards and then they use force to compel all minorities to disappear.

Constant Demand

There is always a "buyer's market" for good ideas.

Problems in Government Education

One million youngsters walk out of the government school system each year, never to return. Why? Those who are intent on learning the truth will examine the nature of existing schools. The politically oriented government school system has a single answer. The reason for so many drop-outs, it is said, is lack of money.

One out of every four draftees in the last year failed the mental tests of selective service examinations. Why? Those who have the ability to analyze critically are seeking an answer. The government school system has one. "If we had enough money, we could solve this problem."

A very large number of persons engaged in the teaching professions have not mastered the subjects they teach, nor are they skillful in imparting knowledge. Why? Again, those seriously concerned with the problem would like to know the truth. The answer as provided by the NEA and similarly connected pressure groups is the same. "Give us more money."

Last year the federal government appropriated more than $3 billion to be pumped into the existing school structure during the coming four-year period. Already, the proponents of bigger and better spending are clamoring that when we are spending $20 billion on a moon race and $50 billion on national highways, we are justified in seeking many more billions in order to solve all educational problems.

This reiterated panacea should demonstrate to the thoughtful that the government school system has become intellectually stagnant. Certainly, no school can run without money. But the evidence reveals that every year we increase the amount of money flowing into the schools and with each increase the problems we have cited become more pronounced.

If we were to employ logic, we would suggest that the answer (at least in part) to the problem of drop-outs, low mental ability and poor teachers may arise from too much money flowing into the schools. If these problems increase with each increase in funds, then why not reduce the flow of dollars and see what happens?

Why are there so many drop-outs when the propaganda directed at us from every direction tells us that government schooling is the one thing needful and that every boy and girl is entitled to the best that money can buy in an education? Could it be that the self-evaluation of some one million youngsters convinces them that they are wasting their time in school? If so, how good are these schools where such waste occurs?

Nor will we accept the idea that these one million annual drop-outs are necessarily uneducable. We note one college in Iowa with a vigorous and far-seeing president which has consistently admitted students rejected by other institutions. In fact, flying in the face of tradition that a school can't make money, this one institution shows a healthy profit. And the "poor" students it accepts come through with flying colors. The president says that the answer lies in giving more personal attention to the students.

Could this be part of the answer, too? That students, confronted with the philosophy that money can buy anything and also confronted with peculiarly untrained and badly prepared teachers, decide that they've had enough?

Possibly this mass approach to collectivized education is faulty in its basic premises.

And take the failures in the mental tests for the Selective Service people. How many of the young men taking these tests were shrewd enough to see that if they failed the examination they might be dismissed from military service? A consummation devoutly to be wished? A man smart enough to pass the test would surely be smart enough to intelligently miss the right answers.

We will never solve the basic problems of mass education unless and until we recognize that education is a private, personal experience and that each student is unique, not simply a member of an in-group.

Education, distinctly individual, has no rightful relationship to government, which, by its nature, can only deal in terms of mass and in terms of generalizing.

The problems of mass education derive from the mass. There is nothing particularly distressing about education itself. Properly conducted, private education can alleviate this distress.

Spending more and more billions will not solve the problem, because the problem is not oriented to a dollar lack. The problem is geared to mass governmental methods which have no proper role to play in education.

Terrorism in Rail Dispute

By THURMAN SENSING

Dispatch of a special task force of FBI agents to Florida to deal with violence in the strike against the Florida East Coast Railway, now in its fourteenth month, is a necessary and long overdue action on the part of the government. At last count, the railroad had been subjected to 216 acts of sabotage or vandalism. These were criminal acts that endangered those who work for the railroad or members of the general public.

The civil rights of the railroad managements, its employes who are on the job and the citizens of Florida and other states who are using the rail line are entitled to the protection of the federal government.

But it is questionable whether this protection will be fully provided so long as some high-ranking federal officials openly condemn railroad officials whose organization has been subjected to nothing less than guerilla warfare.

Deeply shocking to many citizens was the recent statement of Assistant Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds, who said that the chief executive of the railroad had blocked all settlement proposals "with a petulant insistence that has no place in this century." The record shows a very different picture than that which Mr. Reynolds attempts to put across. The Florida carrier has made ten offers to the unions. One wonders why Mr. Reynolds did not save his indignation for those who are responsible for the dynamiting of trains.

The public must be aware, however, that federal bureaucrats frequently are blind to violence committed against private enterprise. For more than a generation, federal officials have had no real interest in seeking how goon squads operate against law-abiding citizens and respectable companies. This was the case in the notorious strike against the Kohler Company in Wisconsin. It's the same story all over again in Florida.

The public should clearly understand what has happened. In recent days, for instance, it has been necessary for the railroad to operate what's called a hi-rail car, an automobile equipped with railroad wheels, in advance of regular trains in order to scout for locked switches and other forms of sabotage.

In short, the Florida East Coast Railway and the territory it serves has been subjected to terrorism of a kind that should outrage every decent citizen in the nation. But some federal officials, who are determined to appease the union movement at any length, can hardly see the terrorism because of their rage that a business enterprise should stand up for its rights and refuse to be intimidated.

Actually, the strike against the Florida East Coast should be an eye-opener for the American people. Today, approximately 850 employes are doing the job that 2,100 union members did before the strike. They are running the railroad with efficiency, and railroad car loadings are up over carloadings in the same period in 1962.

What does this prove? It proves that the featherbedding which railroads have complained about in recent years is on a scale that the public hardly imagined. By hiring people who want to work and work hard, the Florida East Coast has been able to do its job with ease, except for the terrorism and sabotage.

If the Florida East Coast can carry on with less than half its normal roster of employes, then other railroads in the United States should be able to do the same thing.

Obviously, the railroad unions are appalled at the thought that the Florida East Coast will stay in business under these conditions and will, therefore, serve as a living laboratory of how a business can operate efficiently when freed of union restrictions and make-work. The unions certainly don't want other railroads to get the idea that they are overloaded with help that they don't need.

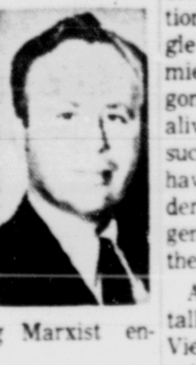
The American people should have much sympathy with the Florida East Coast Railway and the state that it serves. It is unconscionable that free enterprise should be subjected to the criminal acts of sabotage that have been inflicted on the FEC. It also is unconscionable that a profit-making business should be bulldozed into hiring people it doesn't need, simply to maintain the empire of Big Unionism.

What's needed in this situation is not only a large force of FBI agents but a nationwide public awakening that will cause people to see how evil influences are trying to stamp out a free enterprise organization by terrorist methods that have no place in America.

To The Point

For What Does Viet Nam Fight?

By RUSSELL KIRK



As South Viet Nam sinks toward anarchy and Communist domination, desperate remedies are sought. One plan is this: carry the war into North Viet Nam, by raids and possibly even a regular campaign, so as to give the Communists a taste of their own medicine, dampening Marxist enthusiasm.

But if the fighting is carried into the North, how can the leaders of South Viet Nam and their American backers appeal to the North Vietnamese to rise against their Communist masters? Without the cooperation of the people of the North, a counterblow against Ho Chi Minh and his Hanoi regime would only involve South Viet Nam and the United States in greater military and political difficulties.

Ho Chi Minh's regime seems unpopular, and has serious economic problems. But South Viet Nam and America must offer the people of the North some comprehensible alternative. For what man or principle are simple folk to fight against the Communists?

It will not do to appeal to an abstract "democracy": the Vietnamese never have known democracy. "Capitalism," as a slogan, means even less to rice-growing peasants. "Christianity" affects that small minority of the population — less than ten per cent — who are Christian communicants.

The Vietnamese need an heroic name, not a slogan, to rally round. But in the North, people never have heard of the members of the military junta who now govern in Saigon. Who is the alternative to Ho Chi Minh?

Once there was such a man: but he is dead. He was murdered in the coup engineered with American financial support and encouragement. He was President Diem. The people of the North knew and admired him. They cannot rally in his name now. Certainly they will not rally behind Southern generals they never have heard of — nor under the banner of Mr. Henry Cabot Lodge, whose attention seems diverted to the American primaries.

Though a Catholic, Diem was respected and obeyed by most of the Buddhists who make up the majority of the Vietnamese, North and South. It now appears that the alleged "persecution" of Buddhists by the Diem government was no real persecution at all, but a political struggle engineered by Diem's enemies. Buddhist monks have gone on burning themselves alive in protest against the two successive Saigon regimes that have appeared since the murder of Diem — although the generals in power are Buddhists themselves.

A few days ago, this columnist talked with a very intelligent Vietnamese, a Roman Catholic priest. Whatever the faults of the Diem government, this informant said, that domination was better far than any other regime of Southeast Asia —and more tolerant. The people of the North might have fought in support of Diem. They will not rise in aid of some unknown Southern commander, or to help foreigners from America. My friend thinks that probably South Viet Nam is doomed — its hopes ruined by American bungling.

Senator Mansfield, previously one of the chief supporters of South Viet Nam, now thinks the same: he advocates "neutralization," taking further military resistance to be hopeless. And one recalls certain words quoted by Madame Nhu: "If you have America for an ally, you don't need any enemies."

These Days

Renascence in Savannah

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

SAVANNAH, Ga. — It's an article of faith with New Frontier thinkers that what Professor J. Kenneth Galbraith calls the "private sector" is incapable of rehabilitating our cities. But it is a sure bet that Dr. Galbraith has never made the electrifying acquaintance of Mrs. Mary Hillyer of Savannah. Without waiting on urban renewal funds from Washington, Mrs. Hillyer began an operation eighteen years ago that has transformed downtown areas of this ancient seaport, recovering old architectural beauties that had been hidden for more than a century under sagging roofs, pealing paint and mountainous piles of coal and refuse.

I spent one of the most fascinating mornings of my life listening to Mrs. Hillyer tell her story. An Illinois girl who was trained in Chicago as a singer, she came to Savannah when her husband, H. Hansell Hillyer, a developer of utilities, took hold of the run-down Savannah Gas Company. Mr. Hillyer's company possessed six gas tanks which reared their cumbersome bulk hard by the Savannah River amid some of the worst slums on the Atlantic seaboard. There were rooming houses in this old trustees garden village area which slept ship-yard workers eight-hour shifts that used the beds around the clock.

Mrs. Hillyer, who was capable of translating her singer's love for live music into an equally discerning love for the "frozen music" of architecture, saw something in the properties of the Savannah Gas Company which no one else saw. Looking at earth that had been poisoned by tar, pitch and coal dust, she saw magnolias and camelias blooming in her mind's eye. She envisioned dignified dwellings with eighteenth century lines in tumbledown shacks, and tasteful insurance company offices in old warehouses. When the gas company razed five of its six great tanks after going over to piped-in natural gas (leaving one tank for a stand-by), she saw trim courts and lawns in their exposed foundations.

PERMISSION

Taking her proposition to her husband, she obtained gas company permission to make over one old slum house. The idea was that if she couldn't rent it at a profit, her husband could use it as an office. Everyone told her that nobody who was anybody in Savannah would move to a downtown slum area to live in one charming building, but, luckily, she found a tenant from out of town, a doctor who had come south from New York's Greenwich Village. This gave her the courage to go on with her plan.

The directors of the gas company, however, couldn't see tying up money in a real estate venture. So, with her husband's backing, Mrs. Hillyer took the slums of the trustees garden village area off the directors' hands. Bit by bit Mrs. Hillyer's imagination became transformed into a new reality. Her method was to photograph a building, then take a pencil and sketch in her own ideas over its surface. She would clean up grounds, fumigate the rooms, tear out the plaster and ramshackle plumbing, cut through to solid heart-of-pine timber, and rebuild on a durable skeleton.

TRANSFORMATION

In one place, where there was so much pitch and tar that nothing would grow, she dumped in 4,500 tons of fill dirt. She plundered the South for appropriate building materials, going as far afield as New Orleans for wide clapboards. When the development began showing a neat profit after seven or eight years, she and her husband became conscience-stricken. So they sold the whole thing back to the gas company. Today, with twenty-five restored buildings, the company collects a $105,000 annual rental on a $750,000 investment. Rents that once brought in $11 or $17 a month now go for $75 up to $500 per month.

What Mary Hillyer did to transform ten acres of filth has proved wildly contagious. Mills B. Lane Jr., Georgia's biggest banker, is now rehabilitating a whole area to one side of trustees garden village. Individuals have caught the idea. And visitors from all over the South come to see what is happening to Savannah.

If there were 40 individuals like Mary Hillyer in the United States (with understanding capitalists to help), the cities of the nation could be rehabilitated without losing historic charm to the undiscriminating federal bulldozer. And Congress could give everybody another tax cut.

Question Box

Question No. 464: "Is there much resemblance between the Gazette Telegraph and most other daily papers?"

Answer: We will have to answer with a compound answer. In some respects the Gazette Telegraph is very similar to other daily newspapers. In other respects there is very little resemblance.

Most other newspapers carry the AP and-or UPI as well as different columnists and comics and features. The newspapers in large cities do not carry as much local news as do the newspapers with less than 100,000 circulation. The reason for this is that the larger the circulation, the smaller the percentage of people who are interested in local doings. The smaller the circulation, the larger the percentage of readers who are interested in the local happenings. This pretty much applies to city, county and local offices.

The part in which the Gazette Telegraph does not resemble most other newspapers is that we have convictions and we make them known and invite anyone to question them. In the invitation we say that if we cannot answer each question without evasion or contradiction we are not worthy of confidence and we will change our convictions. These questions pertain to human relations as we do not want to get into theology. We are like Henry D. Thoreau, "one world at a time."

The Gazette Telegraph also runs a question box in which anyone can write in to seek answers to questions which will improve the well being of mankind on this earth. Such writers do not need to sign their names to ask their questions.

Letters to the editor must be signed and have the address because they usually express opinions and we want the privilege of asking the letter writer what he means or how he can defend certain opinions.

We want the assistance of all our readers or non-readers to point out our errors. We do not want to do anything that will injure anyone.

Tail Wags Dog

By GEORGE BOARDMAN, PhD

Election years seem to contribute to an atmosphere of mass hysteria which is as senseless as other forms of hysteria and there is no evidence to suggest that the patients want to find a cure. As a matter of fact, all evidence points to an unthinking insistence that the hysterical condition is part of the "American way of life" and since the insisters insist, that's the way it will be.

In the midst of the confusion, hysteria and general turmoil, we will read and hear a great deal about foreign policy or international policy and other specific appendages thereof. This might be a good time to try to figure out what goes on and why.

To begin with, the State Department, complete with ambassadors to foreign governments, has no reason for being except to protect the lives and properties of Americans in foreign countries. Supposedly passports, visas and other documents were issued for the sole purpose of providing an official means of identification which would aid in the protection of the lives and interests of Americans. In truth, the system actually provided government with a means of control over the movements of Americans in foreign countries.

Foreign policy, per se, has nothing to do with protection of the lives and interests of Americans. Foreign policy, with all of its undertones and overtones, is simply a vehicle upon which government attempts to gain more power for government in the dealings of government with all other governments. It is something like an international game of chess, a game which the players enjoy even to being blessed by certain special privileges which make them immune to laws which affect the lives of the suckers who are compelled to pay the awful cost of the chess game — a game which costs billions in stolen tax dollars and millions of lives. It is a game which never ends as long as government can steal the money to pay the costs. There is only a single goal: more international power for government.

I don't know whether you've thought of this lately but please take a look at the fact that a mighty small tail wags a darned big dog. Fewer than 1,000 people are elected to rulership posts in the federal government and their political party tail-wagging affects the lives and fortunes and the happiness of more than 180 million human beings. Nobody can tell me that great big dog can't stop or at least slow down the tail which wags it any time the dog goes to work on it.

Certainly, the American people can exert some control over the State Department and save a little money at the same time. If 50 per cent or more of the people who travel to foreign countries stay home for two years, the government and the foreign service hired help will become frightened silly and start asking questions, making explanations and talking up quite a storm because those American tourist dollars are an important part of the bribe which enables this government to gain power over another.

Of course, if you want your government to be the most powerful of all rulerships, that's your business. For myself, I've never cared for the idea of saying my slave master is more powerful than any of the others; it just doesn't make sense to me.

You will probably recognize my suggestion of refusing to do business with those who make what is called foreign policy, as being much different than the idea of writing to your representatives to ask them to tell the foreign policy makers what to do and how to do which. I am convinced, to my own satisfaction, that refusing to do business with the various agencies of government is the ONLY method by which the people may exercise any really important influence upon government. Let foreign travel drop off by as much as 75 per cent and a bunch of extremely arrogant rulers will be on their knees begging because they wish to retain some semblance of power, no matter how much it is diluted. If you MUST write to the people who represent you because of your sanction of the system, just mention that you only want them to get off your backs and see what happens.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

POWER GRAB

To the Editor:

The following weeks in the Senate of our United States government will be the turning point in our constitutional American way of the life of free choice. The Freedom Press and all conservative news media in cooperation with the conservative citizens must rededicate ourselves to inform enough people in our Senate enough times so that the Civil Rights Act of 1963 can be defeated.

The following group of senators are as yet undecided and they do need some encouragement. They can with their vote defeat this federal power grab.

Spessard L. Holland, George A. Smathers, Frank Carlson, James B. Pearson, Ralph Yarborough, Lister Hill, John J. Sparkman, Gordon Allott, Peter H. Dominick, Robert C. Byrd, Thruston B. Morton, Russell B. Long, L. Glenn Beall, Norris Cotton, Herbert Walters.

The following ideas that I sent to each of the above senators should be encouragement to others to write their senators.

The oath taken by a senator requires that he uphold the Constitution of the States of the U.S. Relative to this may I quote two past presidents of the American Bar Association, Loyd Wright and John C. Saterfield. After a detailed analysis of the Civil Rights Bill currently before the Senate, they state (among other comments in opposition to the bill): "It will, in fact, destroy the constitutional checks and balances between the federal government and the executive branch of the federal government and the legislative and judicial branches."

Also what these distinguished authors are not yet realistic enough to add is this plain fact: 'The Civil Rights Act of 1963,' if enacted, will be the first major legal step in establishing a brutal totalitarian police state over the American people.

This preceding fact must surely remind you of one fact quoted by Gus Hall at the funeral of Eugene Dennis, Feb. 1961: "I dream of the hour when the last congressman is strangled to death on the guts of the last preacher — and since the Christians seem to love to sing about the blood, why not give them a little of it — slit the throats of their children and drag them over the mourners' bench and the pulpit, and allow them to drown in their own blood; and see whether they enjoy singing these hymns."

If this bill is allowed to pass, we citizens can do nothing but watch Gus Hall and his ilk go into action.

If the freedom of the United States has any meaning to you, please oppose this grab of federal power.

PLANE HISTORY

To the Editor:

In your March 9 Gazette Telegraph, you show a picture of a low-wing monoplane, named the Bullet, that was manufactured by the Alexander Aircraft. It was also mentioned that this company was the country's largest manufacturer of planes, and that this plane was the first to have a retractable landing gear.

This may be entirely correct but for the record, I would like to state for anyone who may be interested, the following information: Three low-wing monoplanes, with retractable landing gears (that retracted into a receptacle in each wing) were manufactured for the United States Army (Air Corps) in 1922-1923 at the Lawrence Sperry Airplane Co. plant on Rose Street in Farmingdale, Long Island, New York. This monoplane was built for speed, and was designed as a pursuit plane by a Mr. Vervell (not certain of the spelling), a Wright (McCook) Field design engineer in cooperation with Charlie Kirkham, who is the granddaddy of the Curtiss O.X. Motor.

In or around 1928 Fairchild Airplane and Motor Corporation and its successor, the American Airplane and Motor Corporation, manufactured, in a

The Profit System

By FRED G. CLARK and R. S. RIMANOCZY

I.

One might reasonably expect that most educated people would have a pretty good knowledge of the American profit system — if for no other reason than that it has produced the world's greatest flood of high quality, low-cost goods and services.

But such is not the case.

There is great ignorance both as to the amount of profit and the nature of profit.

A recent Gallup poll of foreign capitals regarding the margin of profit of a typical American industrial firm showed the following averaged estimates: Rome and Milan 25 per cent, Melbourne 27 per cent, Athens and Helsinki 30 per cent, Stockholm 31 per cent, Copenhagen 33 per cent, Oslo and Brussels 39 per cent, Amsterdam and Paris 40 per cent, West Berlin and New Delhi 47 per cent, and Vienna 50 per cent.

In Latin America the estimates run from 60 per cent to 90 per cent.

At home it is not quite so bad: the results of two polls taken by Opinion Research, one in 1951, the other in 1962, show 21 per cent and 20 per cent, respectively, which is still about four times too much.

Considering the ease with which the true figure could be established, there doesn't seem much excuse for this ignorance.

II.

The problem of establishing the nature of profit is somewhat different because it involves the question of why it should exist.

The most popular concept of profit is "the amount left over after all costs have been paid."

If this were an accurate description the case for profit would indeed be a weak one.

But it is not accurate and this fact can be established in any normal mind by a simple functional description.

III.

Profit is not "something left over": it is payment for the use of the voluntary savings that provide the tools which make industrialization possible.

Inasmuch as tools do 95 per cent of America's work it is obvious that they are the key to our high productivity and prosperity.

Tools, and the necessity to use them competitively, are the heart and soul of American capitalism.

No reasonable person, therefore, who understands the nature of profit can oppose it.

But, as has been seen, this understanding is lacking.

IV.

It should be good news, therefore, to all people who wish to support the good name of free-enterprise, that, for the very first time, at the 1964-65 World's Fair in New York, there will be a crystal clear description and measurement of profit in the American capitalistic system.

This will take place in the Hall of Free Enterprise, the pavilion of the American Economic Foundation.

The nature of profit will be presented in a dramatic "playlet" showing a typical business at work.

The size of profit will be shown on an 8-foot long animated diagram depicting where corporate funds come from and where they go to.

This is a brand new concept that treats all corporations as if they were one and eliminates the intercorporate transactions.

Each important section of the master diagram will be flashed on separately in side panels and discussed on a sound tape in all necessary detail.

It eliminates all argument by showing the amount available for division between payroll and profit, or, in other words, between employees and stockholders, or, in still others words, between those who make their living using the tools and those who supply them.

It will show that over the last five years the average amount of corporate income divisible between employees and stockholders was $200.6 billion and that 90 per cent of it went to employees.

It will further show that of the 10 per cent allocated to the stockholders, about half was paid out in dividends and half retained in the corporations.

V.

The beneficial domestic and world-wide effect of a general knowledge of the nature, function, and size of profit is almost without limits.

The private enterprise, individual initiative, profit system is the only means of conquering poverty — but many millions of uninformed people, including many Americans, do not know it.

This ignorance puts them at the mercy of power-seeking politicians who promise them prosperity in exchange for their freedom.

Mighty oaks from little acorns grow, and the whole world can benefit from this simple demonstration of the truth at the New York World's Fair.

plant now occupied by Republic Aviation Corporation in East Farmingdale, Long Island, New York, a low-wing monoplane with an English-type motor for the sports trade. At the time, manufactured orders were for 10,000 airplanes, but actual orders were placed in the shops and sub-contractors for only 1,000 airplanes with a production schedule of approximately 50 monoplanes a week. Eventually, due to the lack of a ready market, all production was stopped, and all finished raw materials, including flight instruments, tires, tubes, wheels, props, etc., were sold. At the time, I was assistant service manager in charge of parts sales, etc., and my duties also included supervision over other departments such as scrap and surplus materials, so we disposed of practically all this surplus to such concerns as Carl Ort of York, Pennsylvania, Air Associates, Inc., etc.

From 1922 to approximately 1958, I have been connected with the airplane industry on Long Island in an executive capacity, such as director of purchases, planning, production, etc., for Alexander P. DeSeversky, Curtiss, Fairchild, Dzus Fastener, Liberty Aircraft, etc.

The aircraft industry during the early part of 1920's was a feast or a famine, but very romantic, open one day, closed the next, due to lack of orders from the U.S. Army or Navy. In fact, it used to be said, you didn't have to be "teched in the head" to work in the aviation industry, but it helped.

Thank you for taking up your time with this letter and hoping I have not taken any of the glory from our good friends at Alexander Aircraft, now Aircraft Mechanics, of which I have had some pleasant dealings in the past.

PTA PROPOSALS

To the Editor:

I have just been studying the National Congress of Parents and Teachers legislation program which the state PTAs are to consider for ratification this year. I am astonished that so many socialistic proposals could be wrapped up in three short pages of fine print.

The top brass in PTA wants federal legislation and federal funds for the following things: 1) for all educational requirements for elementary and secondary public schools and tax-supported colleges; 2) for setting up a United States Office of Education as a separate agency of government; 3) for child life research; 4) for expanded public health services for all children and youth and maternal and child health services; 5) for juvenile protection and safety; 6) for extending public library services to all people; 7) for complete inspection and control of all food, drug, and cosmetic establishments; 8) and (notice this) for "equalization of education, recreation, and health services from children and youth . . .in rural areas and in densely populated urban areas," also for migrant families (now who else and what else is there?).

Could a group of avowed socialists draw a better blueprint for accomplishing their aims?

To make the picture complete, the National PTA would help the Pentagon plan national defense strategy. It would also continue to support the United Nations and its agencies — UNICEF, UNESCO, WHO, TAO and FAO.

One thing that frightens me about this document is that even tho it covers just about the whole field of possible legislation, it is worded so that on first reading it offends no one; on the contrary it appeals to the humanitarian instinct of those who would like to see a better world. All PTA members would like that, but perhaps not at the expense of our freedom.

For example the National PTA legislation program starts out with ideas which all can agree with like maximum local control and channeling federal funds thru state agencies. Then it states its case for the whole field of federal aid to education this way. "In order that the free public school system be maintained and strengthened, federal funds for education must be appropriated for publicly controlled, tax-supported schools only, for the purpose of increasing educational opportunity and services among the states. . ." The words "publicly controlled, tax-supported schools only" are in dark print as tho they contained the main thought in the statement. Actually the intent of this item is to give "blanket authority" to a few top people in the National PTA to speak for our entire organization in behalf of extending federal aid to education without any stated limits. Federal funds to pay teachers' salaries are certainly not excluded. I believe thinking PTA members should object to this backdoor bid for unlimited authority in political matters.

Notice under international relations, the last sentence in the third paragraph (which few will notice) states the national congress (of PTA) supports federal aid to education in foreign countries!

Before I moved from the Texas Panhandle a few months ago there was a furor going within the local PTAs over undemocratic procedures and control from the top. After studying the national's legislation policies I can understand why.

It seems to me that it would solve a host of problems if all local parent - teacher groups would disaffiliate with the national PTA and devote all our funds and energies to the local concern of promoting better home-school relations — which is the real reason most of us joined PTA in the first place.

To the Editor:

I agree with Mrs. Ruth Turner that PTA has become undemocratic. This organization, through coalition with National Education Association and State and National Associations of School Boards, enunciates policy which purports to be the consensus of its 160,000 members in Colorado. Nothing could be further from the truth, and it is time these 160,000 woke up.

Example 1: Last session House Bill No. 154, which delivered to the Welfare Department powers they should never hold over private child - care facilities, was called the "best greased" piece of legislation on the calendar. Public hearings were denied, partially because PTA had endorsed it — five or six people speaking for 160,000! Those people should be compelled to witness some of the tragedy and injustice in the wake of H.B. 154. When I asked the state PTA president why they had endorsed such a bill she replied, "Your Mrs. . . . . came to state board meeting and told us about the bill, and it sounded okay, so we placed our stamp of approval on it." I asked her if it had occurred to them to seek out the opposition and hear both sides. They had not!

Example 2: More recently, in an ill-advised attempt of the State Department of Education to take over the functions of the State Board of Vocational Education, a four-page letter was placed on the desks of all legislators urging that they support such a change. The letter was signed by Congress of PTA. Again, the 160,000 they represented had not been consulted.

In a telecast to my own constituents, I asked the women of PTA if, in case their husbands, thru displacement, injury or other cause, required vocational retraining, would they prefer his program to be supervised by a small committee, who were close to the problems, or to have it handled by a muiti-structured, ivory-towered governmental department. The replies to my telecast have been 100 per cent against the position taken by spokesmen for PTA.

If concerted political action is desirable, the pros and cons of every issue should be heard. Then let 160,000 ballots be distributed and the results of each thinking individual PTA member be tabulated.

RIGHTS

To the Editor:

A great deal is being said about civil rights and at least one minority group is actively engaged in promoting the Civil Rights Bill now before Congress. Let us hope that the majority of them and also the majority of the American people have the power to see and know that human rights are the gift of God, the Creator, and not within the power of government to give. The basic purpose of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution is to enable our government to protect our God-given rights.

Since the establishment of these documents, amendments and laws have been passed which weaken the power of the government to protect our rights. Our government does have the power to issue license and special privilege, and it is quite possible that in gaining this special priivlege all of us, including those who gain the special privilege, will lose our power to protect our rights to maintain our person, property and freedom.

"May the American people have the power to discern, not the fraudulent distinction between the right and left, but between right and wrong, truth and error, between those who trust in God and those who trust in man."

VIRUS

To the Editor:

Out of more than 50,000 trusting citizens of our larger community, whose loyal patriotism to distant promoters caused them to be obedient children while partaking of a sugar-cubed, partly live polio virus, at least several hundred of them will be reading these few thoughts, for whom this is written. Since a big part of this promotion is ended in our city, all of us have time to think in retrospect about this selected ailment supposed to have its origin in a virus with other three "virus diseases."

We agree that "virus" is not some kind of insect flying around in the air and that it is a classified substance found within a sickly animal or human body. We also agree that no such substance is present in a living healthy body, whose chemistry remains disease resisting with the use of proper food.

What do you think? Is it right or wrong to observe that a diseased condition is the cause of virus — not virus the cause of disease? When you are eating or injecting this serum, do you think it is going to correct the faulty chemistry of your body, so as to prevent or immunize you from some supposed future disease? If you are still with me, you will see that eating or injecting any kind of vaccine or drug causes still more faulty chemistry in the intestines or bloodstream. You are the supposed victim, the judge and jury to make your own decision and to arrive at an intelligent answer, which is the prerogative of a human being.

SPEAK THEIR PIECE

To the Editor:

I had a very nice talk with Mr. Roger Coffin by phone regarding his article in Open Parliament. I agree with him 100 per cent and I wish there were more people like him that would open their mouth and speak their piece as an American citizen as is their freedom to do.

Many points that he has brought up about the Soviet Union, the United Nations charter, and also the Congo are without doubt true in my opinion.

In my opinion, we the people of the United States ought to forget about the color of skin for it is only skin deep and give more thought to our freedom which has been bought and paid for by many men from the very birth of this nation to this present day. I for one would like very much to hear more of the personal views of today's world. I believe this is our best way of telling the men who are in a position to do something about the present situations in the world what we as individuals think.

In my opinion there is just plain too damn much bickering among the world leaders as well as the politicians of our own country. It seems like the animal kingdom gets along far better than the human race, which is supposed to have God-given superior minds. We don't need an Einstein mind to preserve our freedom and way of life; just common sense is all it takes, and people to open their minds and mouths.

COSTLY MISTAKE

To the Editor:

I enclose a few words that I think should be published for the public good. It confesses a mistake that cost me $300 in the last three years, but thankful I am out of it now. The people of this community provided over five million dollars to the Boettcher Company and others to finance the Central Investment Co. of Denver. It was formed under the Small Business Administration plan of the government to help the small businessmen to get a start.

The stock was sold for $3.75 a share, and it went like hot cakes because the officers were experienced financiers, half of whom were from the president on down the line of the Central Bank and Trust Co. and the other secretaries and directors were from leading businesses of Denver. No company could start with a better promise of success. But from the start it has been a failure. There has been no dividends for three years, and I sold my little 100 shares for $1.20 making a net loss to me of $300 counting the small interest I should have drawn for the three years. I just charge this off to experience, I have had plenty of that in my young life of 83 summers; perhaps it will save me much in the next fourteen years. Ha, ha.

What about the rest of the stock amounting to over five million dollars? Much of it was provided by people who could not afford to lose. Widows put in their insurance money and all their savings. Many small businessmen paid the savings of a lifetime. By the mismanagement of these funds suffering has been caused to hundreds of worthy people, and on account of the start of this SBA by the president, who asked people to help the small businessman who couldn't get a loan at the banks. The reason I claim mismanagement caused part of the loss, they pay the president of the Central Investment Company 30,000 dollars a year to mismanage the business, and $2,000 for insurance on his life, according to the last prospectus they sent me before I sold my stock.

Perhaps you wonder how I came to try to write this obituary, so I will tell you I read in the U.S. News & World Report of March 9, Page 50, an article, "Business Loans That Went Sour: Why a Federal Agency Is Under Fire." Stockholders of the Central can read that article and see that they have lots of company, because these SBA companies are all over the U.S. and the joker is that the government was supposed to back up the SBA.

I hope this little note may be a warning to some people, but it cannot help the folks who lost all they had in this business that went sour.

Exercise and spare diet will aid your health.

FRANK S. WELSH
1820 W. Bijou

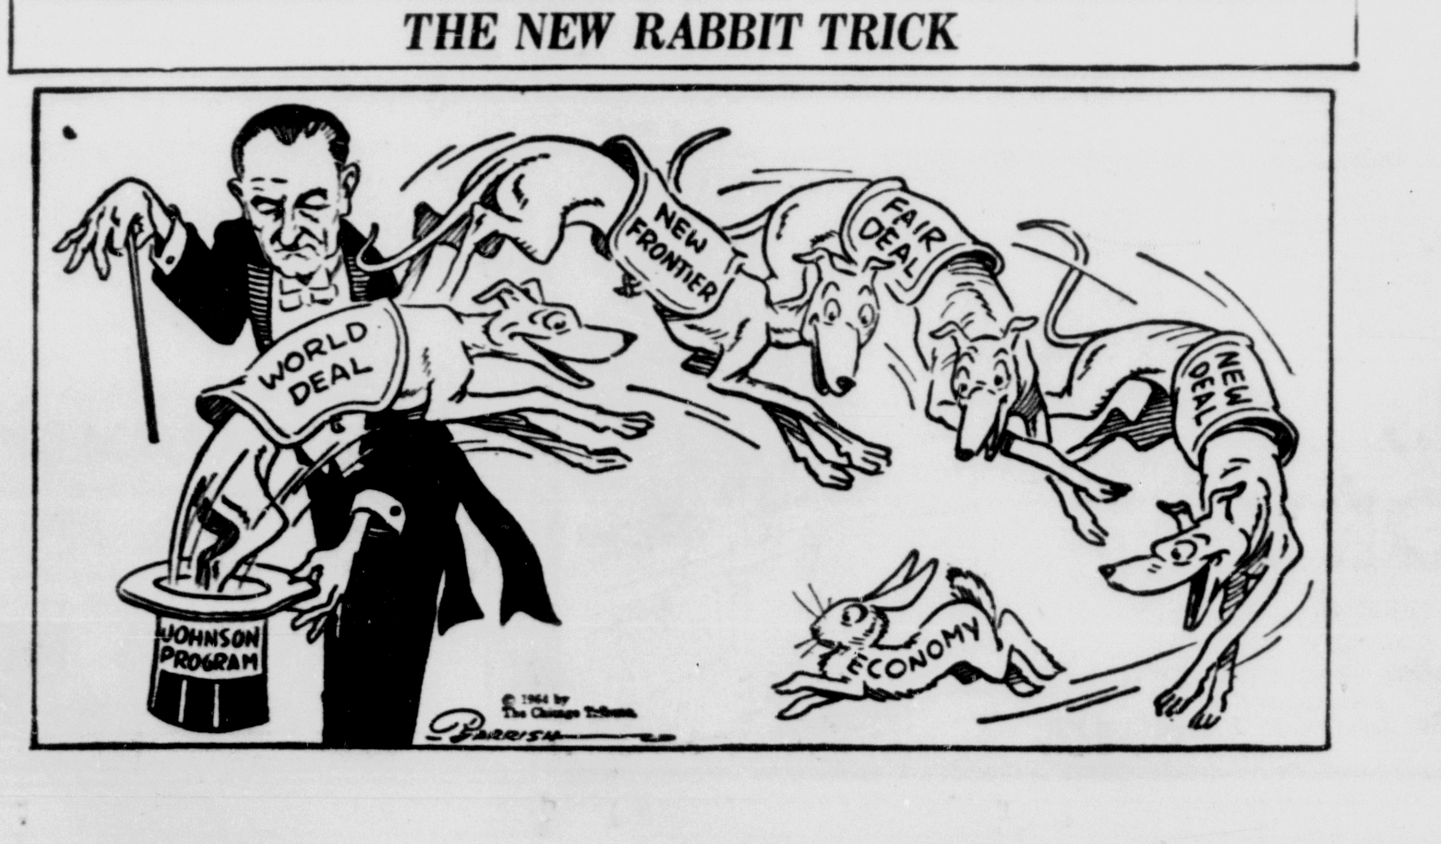
Editor's note: Frank Welsh has provided a magnificent illustration of why government should NOT get into the business field, even for the most benevolent reasons. The facts are these: If a man cannot obtain financing thru regular business channels, it is probably because he does not deserve the financing. The whole purpose of the government program was and is to provide financing for businessmen who don't deserve it.

Every successful business exists because it is providing goods or services customers want or will buy. No successful business has ever been built or can ever be built simply because the government would like to be kind.

But Mr. Welsh has revealed the real extent of the damage. Even with government-backed enterprises, it is the little fellow who cannot afford the injury who carries the bulk of the burden and suffers the greatest setback when things go wrong.

A good rule of thumb to be adopted is this. Have as little as possible to do with a government-backed or government-supported business.

THE NEW RABBIT TRICK



Nation's Press

Johnson's Professor of Budgeting

From Omaha Evening World-Herald

President Johnson's suggestion that trained government workers be used to help low-income families learn more about budgeting and how to "get the most for their money" has been greeted with some hilarity.

As Sen. Byrd has pointed out, the administration which now proposes to tell low income Americans how to spend their money has gone in the hole more than $16 billion in the last two years. By the time another year rolls around, the three-year accumulated deficit will total more than $20 billion, and the secretary of the treasury has forecast another deficit year still to follow.

In which case, the federal workers who set out to instruct their fellow Americans in the intricacies of budget-making would have a background of six consecutive deficits, totaling more than $35 billion, in their government housekeeping.

Would the government-trained fiscal missionaries counsel their pupils to reduce their incomes, increase their expenses, and spend themselves into prosperity? That's what might be expected if they follow the Washington fiscal textbook.

If, as President Johnson suggested, additional legislation is needed to bring to the bar of justice the liars and cheats who attempt to rob consumers by making false claims, we say it should be enacted. If the public needs protection against the indiscriminate sale of untested pesticides, then by all means it should be provided.

But heaven help the bankruptcy courts if Uncle Sam ever tries to inflict his own principles of fiscal management upon those Americans who gather 'round paper - strewn kitchen tables to try to make ends meet.

Allen-Scott Report

Leftist Ray Plans to Invade Cuba

ROBERT ALLEN

PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — President Johnson faces a new thorny decision on Communist - ruled Cuba — that may be a lot tougher than countering Castro's cut-off of Guantanamo's water supply.

Manuel Ray, one-time minister of public works in the Castro regime and among the most controversial leaders of the Cuban exiles, proposes to launch a new guerrilla underground on the island and wants U.S. assistance. Specifically, Ray is seeking two things:

Assurance that the U.S. will not interfere with his infiltration of fighting men and arms into Cuba.

A steady flow of funds and weapons to support his combat operations when they get underway.

An avowed socialist, Ray announced last May he was organizing a new force that would "invade" Cuba within a year. Thru emissaries, he has notified authorities in the State and Justice Departments and Central Intelligence Agency he is now ready to start infiltrating his troops.

Their number is placed as between 700 and 900.

They have been undergoing vigorous training in Puerto Rico and Venezuela, where they have had the support of former President Betancourt. His recently inaugurated successor is reputedly also behind them.

Trained to operate in small guerrilla units, they will embark for Cuba from Venezuela and one other Central American country. Ray's plan is to follow Castro's successful tactics of infiltrating into the mountains of Oriente Province and striking from there.

Ray and most of his officers are thoroly acquainted with this region.

BACKSTAGE SPLIT

In weighing Ray's potentially highly explosive proposals, President Johnson is confronted with sharply clashing views among his top advisers.

Foremost among the left-leaning Cuban exile leader's supporters are Attorney General Robert Kennedy, Defense Secretary McNamara, and important officials of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Secretary Rusk is strongly against Ray's venture. The State Department head argues it might escalate into a new dangerous confrontation between the U.S. and Russia. It is Rusk's contention the U.S. should limit its efforts to topple the Communist Castro regime by economic and diplomatic measures — despite their patent ineffectualness.

Still on the fence are two other key officials — CIA Director John McCone and Assistant Secretary of State Thomas Mann, in charge of Latin American affairs.

McCone is much concerned about the wide variance in CIA over Ray; with some officials vigorously favoring him and others equally against him. Also, McCone is wary of Ray's past close association with Castro and his known radical economic views.

The fact that the Joint Chiefs of Staff also are chary of Ray is influencing McCone in withholding a decision regarding him.

Assistant Secretary Mann is keeping an open mind pending a thoro study of Ray's plans and background. Because of the President's confidence in Mann, his counsel is certain to be influential.

Under the late President Kennedy, Ray visited Attorney General Kennedy in his Washington home. At one time, he was widely credited among Cuban exiles as the Kennedy administration's favored anti-Castro leader. He still appears to have the confidence of the attorney general and important elements in the Defense Department and CIA.

Whether they are enough to overcome the skepticism of Secretary Rusk and other high-placed authorities remains to be seen.

Siding with them in this wariness are rival refugee leaders who are critical of Ray on the ground he is a "dedicated leftist." Some who were on close terms with him are now actively against him. They charge Ray's basic policy is "Castroism without Castro."

SEETHING CAULDRON

Senator George Aiken, Vt., veteran member of the Foreign Relations Committee, is privately warning that a revolution is "highly likely" in strife-and inflation-racked Brazil by Easter. Aiken has authoritative information that extreme leftists and rightists are busily arming in preparation for attempts to seize power. . . President Gamal Nasser, who is continuing to publicly threaten war in the Middle East, has secretly signed a so-called "technical assistance" agreement with Russia to provide equipment and scientists for an atomic center. This Inshas Center is to be built by the Soviet ostensibly for "peaceful purposes," but with no outside check to determine its true nature.

Golden Rule

From The Royal Bank of Canada Monthly Letter

In the whole history of humanity there has been voiced only one rule of conduct of the slightest value as a standard for behaviour: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise."

The Golden Rule seems misleadingly simple. In reality it calls for a little working at. It is not merely sentiment, but reason backed by a sense of justice. It requires an act of will, to suppress the special pleading of your own private desires. It calls for mental flexibility which enables you to move over so as to see the situation as it appears to others. It must experience shared feeling. Dante, in his Inferno, describes the condition of a soul in one of the lower reaches of hell as being capsuled in ice, never to feel any more. Coldness of heart does not go with the Golden Rule.

Given reason, will - power, mental suppleness and fellow feeling, the Golden Rule will work constructively to avoid misunderstandings.

It has, in fact, been said by statesmen and philosophers that in the new world which is coming into existence application of the Golden Rule is not only a moral duty but an indispensable condition of survival.

The only way to prevent misunderstandings and thus to avoid many of the bad things that occur is by positive action. We need vision to see the best, courage to face the worst, adaptability to change, resistance to hatred and jealousy, and we need the Golden Rule.

To seek understanding is nobility's true badge. Instead of weighing in grudging scales the good and the bad we see in those around us, we need to keep in mind that they, like us, have difficulties, sorrows, and wants, and that they are fellow-actors with us on the stage of life.

We often hear people talk about the "imperatives" of life. What was the categorical imperative, the unconditional command of nature, formulated by Immanuel Kant, the German-Scottish philosopher? It might well have been designed as a means toward ending our misunderstandings: Act so that the principle of your action could be made a universal law.

HOUSE PARTY

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Builder Don Canter feels his responsibility to the purchaser doesn't end when the contract is signed for one of his custom - built homes. He wants the owners to be happy and get to know their neighbors.

For the fourth consecutive year Canter and the realtors handling the sale of his houses entertained residents of the development and prospective purchasers. The party was held in a recently completed new model home.

The bill for lime and fertilizer for United States farms is $1.5 billion a year.

If approval is granted from Hq. USAF, the UF and Aid Society campaigns will be linked by a contractual agreement promising the Society a certain percentage of receipts from the combined drive. It is projected that the Air Force Aid Society's share of the 1965 United Fund campaign will be $4,649.25.

Folk Song Hero Was Born 100 Years Ago

By RUSSELL LANE

CHICAGO (AP) — The 100th birthday anniversary of one of America's greatest heroes of folk song slipped in almost unnoticed today.

The hero was John Luther Jones, born March 14, 1864, in Jordan, Ky.

He crashed into legend 36 years later as Casey Jones at the throttle of Illinois Central Locomotive No. 382, pulling train No. 1—the Cannonball Express—on the foggy morning of April 30, 1900.

None of the passengers in the 12 cars of the New Orleans-bound express he had taken out of Memphis, Tenn., that morning was killed when the locomotive split the caboose and two cars of a standing freight train in Vaughn, Miss.

Their survival was attributed to his remaining in the cab and damping the throttle as well as working the brake to keep the train from a helpless skid on the slippery rails.

As he saw the track obstruction and struggled to slow the speeding train, he told his Negro fireman, Sim Webb, to "take your place to jump, cause it's two locomotives that's a bound to bump."

The scalded remains of Casey Jones were buried at Jackson, Tenn., and there's still a tradition at the I. C. of "Whistling Casey" in salute as locomotives pass the cemetery.

WHAT ABOUT MIDGETS?

ROME (AP) — There's never any argument on Rome buses about whether a child is still young enough to ride free or must pay the fare. If the child's head is higher than the ticket seller's shelf, the fare must be paid. If the child doesn't stand that tall (one meter, or 39 inches) he rides free.

Scranton Indifferent To Nomination Race

WASHINGTON (AP)—A leading Scranton-for-president congressman said today the Pennsylvania governor's attitude toward the Republican nomination is one of "sincere indifference."

Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., said Gov. William W. Scranton is genuinely engrosed in his state leadership job, but would accept the presidential nomination "if it came to him; but he is not going after it."

"I think he is sincere in what he is saying now," Schweiker said. "A lot of people don't. Some of the political pros don't. Some of the newspaper editorials don't. But that's the was it was getting him to run for governor in 1962 and even to run for Congress before that."

Schweiker and Scranton came to Congress together in 1960. Schweiker played a key role in engineering Scranton's race for governor in 1962. He acted as a liaison between the pro-Scranton forces of Sen. Hugh Scot, R-Pa., and political pros in the state who had become disaffected from Scott's leadership.

The result was a big victory for Scranton, who carried the state by a bigger margin than anyone except President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1956.

'U.S. Go Home' Drive Spreads In Librevile

By ANDREW BOROWIEC

LIBREVILE, Gabon (AP)—A "U.S. go home" campaign is spreading among the French community of this thriving West African nation, where 250 Americans live.

A grenade and shotgun attack on the U.S. Embassy building last week was meant to warn Americans to get out.

No culprits have been found. French Embassy officials say more attacks are possible by angry Frenchmen.

Rumors alleging American backing of a recent abortive coup against President Leon Mba have given rise to the tension among Gabon's 6,000 French residents.

Many Frenchmen charge that the United States wants to upset France's favored position in Gabon, which supplies uranium for the French atomic industry. They accuse the United States of trying to meddle in a country largely directed by French experts and closely cooperating with France.

The U.S. Embassy has formally denied the accusations.

"I always praise France's role here and the efforts of French residents," said U.S. Ambasador Charles Darlington.

The French Embassy agrees there has been no American interference. Nevertheless, the French community generally has disregarded all explanations.

The rumors upset virtually overnight the harmony between the French residents and the Americans, most of whom are diplomats, businessmen, Peace Corps members and misionaries.

Canadians Will Take Part in Easter Sunrise

Members of the Canadian armed forces will have leading roles in the annual Air Force Academy Easter sunrise services to be held in Falcon Stadium at dawn March 29.

The public is invited.

In case of inclement weather, the service will be in Arnold Hall.

Chaplain General of the Canadian Armed Forces (Rev.) E. G. B. Foote will be guest speaker for the service.

Air Vice Marshal Murray D. Lister, Deputy Chief of Staff-Operations for NORAD, and other Canadians serving in the Colorado Springs area, will be special guests.

Scripture lesson will be read by Air Marshal C. Roy Slemmon, Royal Canadian Air Force, Deputy Commander-in-Chief of NORAD.

The Academy Superintendent, Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren, is scheduled to introduce Chaplain General Foote and Brig. Gen. Robert W. Strong Jr., the Commandant of Cadets, will also read a scripture lesson.

All Academy Protestant chaplains will take part in the service.

The Chancel and Cadet choirs will sing "The Anthem," "Call to Prayer," and the "Choral Benediction."

"The Hallelujah Chorus" will be sung by the combined choirs.

Immediately following the services, both the Academy NCO and Officers Clubs will serve special Easter breakfasts available to the public.

Post Office Will Not Exchange Stamps for Money

"There is a time-honored tradition to the effect that postage stamps are as good as gold," says Postmaster R. H. Wardwell. "But don't bring them to the post office with the thought in mind of exchanging them for either gold or any other kind of money."

Postmaster Wardwell points out that there are many good reasons why postal regulations prohibit the exchange of postage stamps for cash. These same regulations also prohibit the exchange of postage stamps of one denomination for another except under extraordinary circumstances.

"The redemption of stamps by post offices is forbidden to forestall thefts of stamps and their conversion to cash," says Postmaster Wardwell. "The whole purpose of the prohibitions is to protect the government and the taxpayer againist making burglaries of postal facilities profitable."

Postmaster Wardwell assures us that nothing in the regulations is intended to imply that all who present stamps for conversion to cash are properly suspect of having stolen them. It is just that the regulation prohibiting conversion to cash must be absolute if it is to be effective. Where odds and ends of stamps are concerned, the provision against their redemption protects purchasers against receiving contaminated second-hand stamps, which the new purchaser would probably moisten with his tongue.

The only extraordinary circumstance under which redemption of stamps is permitted is where the original transaction was inadvertently made in error by either party. A mistake on the part of the Postal Service may be corrected by the post office through exchanging stamps at full value for other denominations.

A mistake made by the purchaser "in buying adhesive stamps of the wrong denomination, or stamped envelopes or postal cards of the wrong kind, size, or denomination, may be corrected by exchanging stamps at full value."

Information on regulations governing redemption of unserviceable and spoiled envelopes or cards, unused precanceled stamps, and metered postage can be immediately obtained by calling 632-8841.

Once ordered by a movie studio to lose weight, CBS Television Network comic Red Skelton dodged the issue by buying oversized suits.

Wasson High To Present Musical Comedy

"Dubble Trubble," an original musical comedy in three acts, will be presented Thursday and Friday at Wasson High School.

A cast of 250 is featured in the fast moving story of life on a college campus. The show was written and directed by Charles A. Meeker Jr., supervisor of vocal music for District 11.

The production will mark only the second time the show has been staged here. It was last performed as the final musical production at the old Colorado Springs High School in 1959. The show made its debut in 1955 in Englewood.

Taking part in the production are faculty and students from the music and drama departments at Wasson. Meeker is using a double cast for the leading roles in the production. One cast will star Thursday night and the other will be featured in Friday's performance.

Both shows are scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are $1.25 and all seats are reserved. Reservations may be made by calling 632-1554, Ext. 33.

A fast moving show written in the Broadway extravaganza style, "Dubble Trubble" features a vocal concert of standard melodies as its second act. It is the concert which presents the principal problem to the plays leading characters.

Set at Kenwood State Teachers College, anywhere U.S.A., the story revolves around the romantic and professional problems of a college vocal teacher and his drama teacher fiance; and the president of the student body and his girl friend.

Before the show is over, politics, both the political and educational kind, raises its ugly head but all comes out well in the end.

Montine Richmond, the vocal teacher, schedules a concert the same night his fiance, Joanne Calvert, scheduled a play. Both are alumni of the college but Joanne's father has just become president of the school.

The trouble is doubled when Bob Shaffer, the student body president, backs Richmond and arranges for a live telecast of the concert while his girlfriend, Betty Lou Poter, is cast as the star of the drama.

The problems arise when Joanne protests the concert to her father. He is about to cancel the concert when he learns of the arrangements for the television broadcast. Result: two unhappy girls who decide to do a bad review of the show.

Betty Lou is the unhappier of the two and protests the canceling of her play to her father who is a state senator and this is no little thing to be when dealing with a state-supported school.

But love triumphs and everybody is happy and singing at the end of the show.

Meeker directed the show and will direct the choral group during the concert. Homer Paris, dramatics director at Wasson, and his stagecraft classes, did the staging for the show; the dancers were directed by Shirley Shalberg of Wasson assisted by Ilsa Reese; John Bearzi, vocal instructor at Wasson will direct the freshman, girls, sophomore and preparatory choirs. Nick Rossie of Wasson will direct the Wasson High Stage band.

Karen Lind and Susan Speed will alternate in the role of Joanne; Steve Young and Tom Greene as Richmond; David Scott and Mike Anderson as Bob; Kathy McVehil and Du Ann Rutherford as Betty Lou. Dick Wederquist, vocal music instructor at Horace Mann, will be cast as Dr. Calvert. Lennie Baylinson will be guest organist for the show.

SUBMARINE TAKES SHAPE—Workman at Nordberg Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee, installs hatch cover on aluminum dome which will be "nose' of Aluminaut, worlds deepest diving submarine. Lone Pine Will Host Father-Daughter Meal

Lone Pine neighborhood will host a Father-Daughter banquet Monday, from 7 to 9 o'clock, at the Ent Air Base N. C. O. Club. All Junior troops and Cadette troop 212 will participate.

Each troop will make their own centerpiece and table decorations. Grace will be given by Troop 212 with a welcoming speech by Kathy Meixner from Junior Troop 133. Singing will be led by Sue Sullivan and Sherry Roberts of Troop 212.

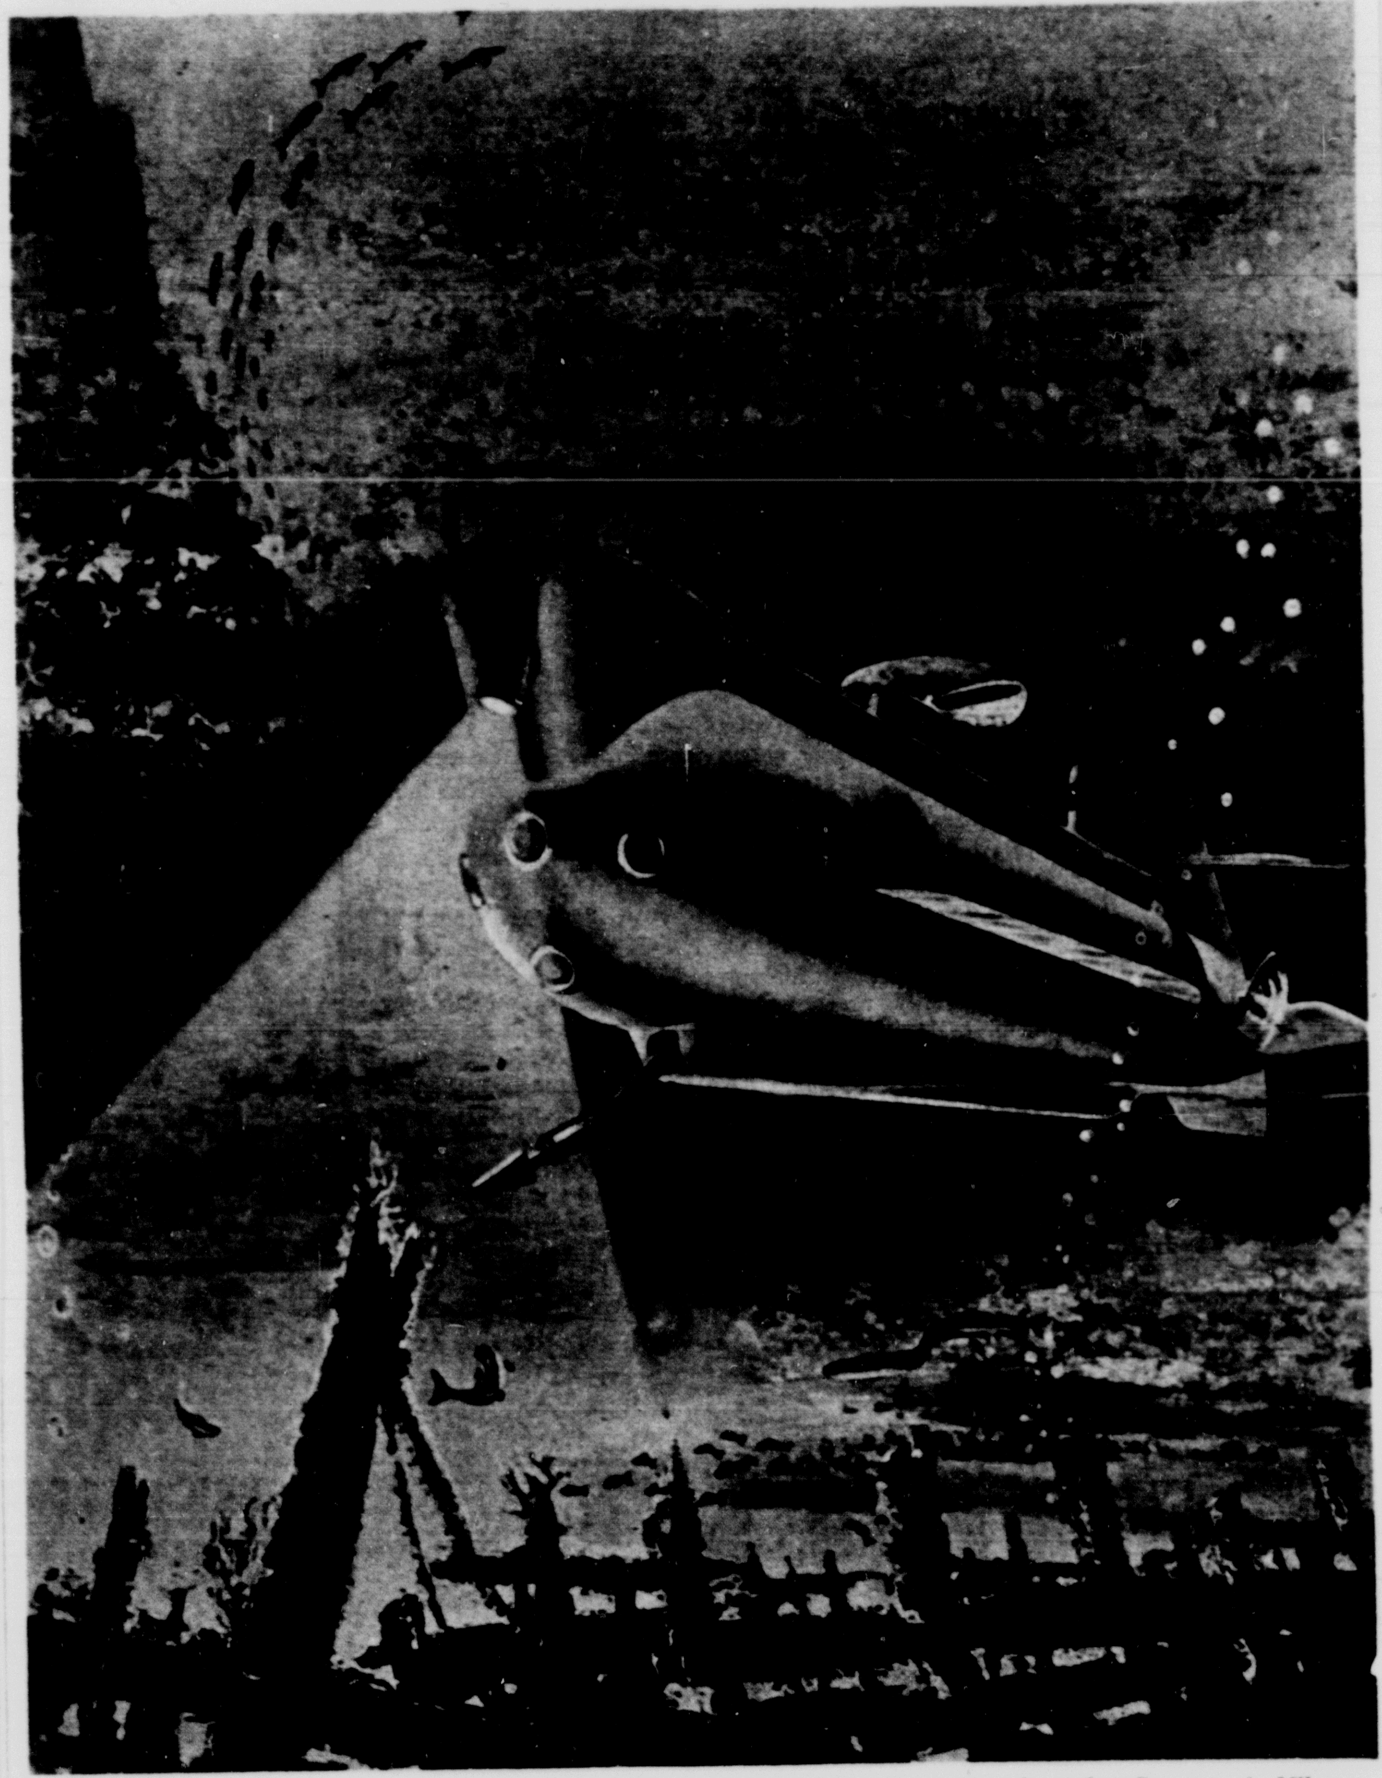
QUICK WITH QUIP, TOO

BARDSTOWN, Ky. (AP) — The back of Nazareth College campus adjoins a distillery and the aroma of whisky mash often fills the air.

Recently, a priest visited the campus and jokingly told an Irish nun: "Sister, I couldn't help noticing that there is a well-trodden path from the campus to the distillery."

Without batting an eyelash, she replied: "And I couldn't help noticing how fast you found the well-trodden path, your reverence."



DEEP DIVER—Artist's rendering of completed "Aluminaut," world's deepest diving submarine, now being built under sponsorship of Reynolds International, Inc., subsidiary of Reynolds Metals Company. The six-and-a-hal finch thick aluminum hull of the craft, which will be the first all-aluminum submarine, has been completed at Nordberg Manufacturing Company in Milwaukee and is being shipped to General Dynamics' Electric Boat Division, Groton, Conn., which is building the submarine for Reynolds. Aluminaut is designed to operate at depths of 15,000 feet.

* * *

Deepest Diving Submarine Has Been Assembled

The six-and-one-half inch thick aluminum hull of "Aluminaut," world's deepest diving submarine, has been assembled, and the unique undersea craft is expected to be completed and launched late this summer.

A progress report on the developmental project was made today by J. Louis Reynolds, International, Inc., at a press showing of the hull at Nordberg Manufacturing Company here.

Aluminaut is the first all aluminum submarine. General Dynamics Electric Boat Division is building the vessel for Reynolds and subcontracted hull fabrication to Nordberg and other area metalworking firms.

Reynolds Metals Company cast the huge aluminum ingots from which the hull sections were made at its McCook, Ill., plant. Ladish Company here forged and ring-rolled the eleven rings and two hemispherical heads which compose the hull.

At Nordberg, the rings and heads were machined, finished and assembled to scientifically precise specifications, including tolerances as critical as five ten-thousandths of an inch.

"Designed to operate at depths of 15,000 feet — almost three miles down — the Aluminaut will permit man to explore about 60 per cent of the world's ocean floor, most of it for the first time," Reynolds said.

Likening the project to space efforts in terms of the technology required, Reynolds said that the metalworking techniques used to fabricate the hull "have significantly advanced the state of the art."

"Some idea of the metallurgical problems involved," said Reynolds, "can be realized from the fact that the submarine is designed to allow for contraction and expansion under the tremendous pressures of the deep ocean. For example, when three miles down, the submarine actually will be compressed two inches in length and about an equal amount in diameter."

"Much attention now is being given the need for capability to operate in the deep oceans," Reynolds said, "particularly since the tragic loss of the submarine Thresher."

This need was foreseen many years ago by Reynolds. He initiated a research program culminating in successful design of an aluminum submarine.

"Design of Aluminaut," Reynolds said, "represents a substantial breakthrough in pressure hull design. Its construction has resulted in significant advancement in large mass aluminum casting and forging techniques. New instrumentation also is being developed."

The craft will be equipped with sonar, television cameras for detailed observation of the ocean floor and robot hands to obtain specimens.

Displacing 150,000 pounds, Aluminaut will be slightly more than 50 feet long with an eight-foot-diameter hull. Separate electrical propulsion systems will give the three man craft both horizontal and vertical locomotion. Its operating range will be about 80 miles.

The sub's hull was constructed by bolting together large, one-piece cylindrical sections of high-strength aluminum forgings. The world's largest aluminum ingot was cast for the first hull section.

Aluminum was chosen because it is one-third the weight of steel and has greater strength or its weight than other available metals. This allows fabrication of a hull thick enough to withstand tremendous pressures at great depths, yet light enough to stay afloat without external bouyancy.

"In our constant research for new uses for aluminum we have long been convinced that an important potential lies in shipbuilding and in certain types of submarine hulls," Reynolds said.

"Reynolds International has undertaken this project for two reasons. We feel it is the duty of private enterprise to promote programs in the public interest. Also, Aluminaut will be dramatic proof of aluminum's high strength properties as a material for ship hulls and other marine applications."

Others who have cooperated on the Aluminaut research program, according to Reynolds, are General Dynamics Electric Boat Division, Southwest Research Institute, Dr. Edward Wenk, Jr., Technical Assistant to the Director, Office of Science and Technology, and Philip Mandel, Naval Architect, M.I.T.

Reynolds International, Inc. is a subsidiary of Reynolds Metals Company.

Noted Economist To Deliver Free Lecture at CU

Prof. Wassily Leontief, director of the Economics Research Project at Harvard University and a distinguished economist, will deliver a free, public lecture at 4 p.m. Tuesday in 140 Chemistry Building at the University of Colorado.

Leontief's topic will be "Economic Development in Advanced and Backward Nations." Sponsor is the CU Bureau of Economic Research.

Leontief has served as a consultant to the U.S. Government and to the United Nations. His work with the UN has been primarily with the economics of disarmament and the economic development of newly emerging countries.

He is the author of numerous books and articles and is recognized as the developer of "input-output economics." This is the technique for analyzing the structure of economic systems with particular emphasis on interdependence.

It is possible to use the technique to demonstrate the impact on one sector of the economy of a change in another sector. For example, the system can determine the effect of a cut in defense spending on each portion of the United States' economy.

Leontief was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, and was graduated from the University of Leningrad in 1925. He did research in economics at the University of Kiel and completed his graduate work at the University of Berlin, from which he received his Ph.D. in 1928.

The following two years he was at Nanking as Economic Adviser to the Chinese government. In 1931 he came to this country to do research at the National Bureau of Economic Research, and to join the Harvard faculty.

Utah University Chorus to Present Concert

A variety show will be presented by the Delta Phi Kappa Chorus from Utah State University at 8 p.m. Friday in the Palmer High School Auditorium.

The performance will feature religious, western and humerous music performed by the 36-member chorus as a unit plus group sections including a bottle band, women's trio, a quartet and a three-guitar supplement.

Officials of the group said that the purpose of the performance is to benefit the fund for the new Chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) located at Pine Avenue and the Old Broadmoor Road. The concert is being sponsored in the area by this church.

Tickets for the performance are priced at $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for students and children, and are available for purchase at Walgreen Drug Store and at the auditorium door.

The chorus, which is under the direction of Prof. James L. Bradley, and accompanied by Debra Blackham, was organized in 1959 with 24 members.

The group is now on tour in a number of Western cities and has gained a reputation in the Rocky Mountain Region as a dynamic and effective choral unit, authorities said.

In 1962 the chorus was featured by the Utah State University in the Land Grant Centennial Celebration. They also toured the Northwest states during the same year.

In 1963 they toured Arizona and California and sang at Disneyland and Knott's Berry Farm. Recently the group has completed a four of eastern Utah.

The fraternity was organized in 1869 and has the distinction of being the first Greek-letter fraternity organized in Utah and one of the first to be organized west of the Mississippi River.

Since its organization, the fraternity has had far-reaching effects with chapters on many Western University campuses including the one in Hawaii.

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

Often overlooked by taxpayers is a deduction permitted for casualty losses. The deductible losses of this nature are those that arise from accidents, fires, storms, and theft. If you were in an auto accident you can deduct the cost of damage to your car to the extend you were not covered by insurance. A sudden freeze or a hail storm could cause damage to your property which gives rise to a deduction. Mysterious disappearance of an item of value does not give rise to a deduction unless you can establish that theft was involved.

If you sold your home, you may be entitled to special tax treatment. Document 5017 which furnishes more detailed information on this subject is available upon request from our local office at 521 S. Tejon St.

You may deduct union dues, employment agency fees, alimony, and certain other miscellaneous items of expenses on your return. You may deduct ordinary and necessary expenses in connection with the production or collection of taxable income, or the management of property held for the production of taxable income. This includes amounts spent for a safe deposit box for taxable securities, investment counsel fees, income tax counsel and assistance fees, custodian fees, clerical help, inc. If you are divorced or legally spearated and are making periodic payments of alimony or separate maintenance under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance, or under a written separation agreement entered into after August 16, 1954, or under a decree support entered after March 1, 1954, you may deduct such payments.

The following is a partial list of additional items of expsnse which are considered personal and which you therefore cannot deduct: Travel to and from work; travel expenes to place of new employment; moving expenses; losses on sale of residence; family auto; etc. repairs to your home; insurance on your home; attorney fees for preparation of a will; safe deposit box for personal effects; fines and tax penalties.

WITHHOLDING AND SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES: Employers liable for income tax withheld and social security taxes in excess of $100 for the month of February must deposit such taxes in a depositary, before the deposit deadline of March 16, 1964. Form 450 must be used for this purpose. Deposits may be made in local authorized banks, or Federal Reserve Banks. Circular E, "Employer's Tax Guide, which furnishes more detailed information on this subject is available on request. The new guide with withholding rates effective March 5th. are now available.

CORPORATION FILING DUE DATE: Corporation tax deadlines — March 16 is the deadline for several tax law obligations for corporations reporting on a calendar year basis. Corporations must file a 1963 income tax return, Form 1120, or an application for extension, Form 7004, and they must pay at least 50 percent of the balance of the tax due.

Corporations which have elected not to be taxed as corporations must file Form 1120-S.

Unincorporated businesses electing to be taxed as corporations must file their 1963 income tax return, Form 1120, or application for extension on Form 7004, together with payment of at least 50 percent of the balance of income tax due. This return must contain a statement that it is filed in accordance with Section 1361 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Air Force Says Missile Blasts Builder's Fault

ROSWELL, N.M. (UPI)—The Air Force pointed a finger Friday at the firm that built a string of $13.5-million missile sites and said Air Force men are "so regimented" they could not have caused the latest Atlas missile explosion near Roswell this week.

Col. Len Klanecky, public information officer at Walker Air Force Base, told United Press International the activities of Air Force crews at the missile site are so stringently controlled it was virtually impossible for man-made errors to have caused the blast.

Monday's explosion was the third within a year at the Strategic Air Command base.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., said earlier this week the Air Force told him the explosion was caused by a spark. Air Force officials at Roswell denied this statement Friday.

Klanecky said blame for Monday's blast rests by default with General Dynamics - Astronautics of San Diego, Calif., builder of the missiles.

The first Atlas explosion occurred June 1, 1963, and the second Feb. 13 of this year. The three blasts cost the Air Force, and the taxpayer, nearly $40 million.

Klanecky said the Air Force knows the cause of the Feb. 13 blast, but said the information as to the cause would have to come through Air Force officials in Washington.

Of the six Atlas F missile complexes across the nation, Walker AFB is the only one to have had explosions.

Klanecky said the two most recently destroyed missile sites had been scheduled for modification by GDA. He said the firm brought 500 technicians to Roswell in December, but said they had not begun work on the two sites where the latest explosions occurred.

Chiropractors Cite Scientific Correction Cure

By The
COLORADO CHIROPRACTIC SOCIETY.

Colorado Springs Chiropract tors have cited a specific cerebral palsy case as a typical example of what nerve disorder can cause, and how scientific correction can cure.

The parents of a once deaf mute, crippled victim of cerebral palsy had the dubious honor of being parents to a CP poster girl. But now they answer a quick "Yes," when someone asks them if there is anything to chiropractic care.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beaty of Muncie, Ind. tell this story, which appeared in the International Review of Chiropractic.

Their daughter, Cindy was born prematurely in the Ball Memorial Hospital of Muncie in 1957. She weighed only two pounds, three ounces. She was in and out of the hospital, bills ran high and hope ebbed low. When she was two and a half, cerebral palsy was positively diagnosed. For two years before she could walk, Cindy was the Delaware County National Foundation poster girl for cerebral palsy.

Mr. and Mrs. Beaty never quite gave up faith that their little girl would live, but they found it hard to imagine she would ever recover. Mrs. Beaty said "...we had little reason to believe that Cindy would ever grow into a normal child... all we could do was wait and hope. Some said there was no hope...that Cindy would die."

But a mother never stops hoping until the last hope has been exhausted.

If Cindy could live to be eight years old, operations would be possible. Casts and braces would follow, but no assurance that she would ever be able to walk. And even this chance for Cindy was more than five years in the future.

It was a distant relative who suggested a chiropractor. Mrs. Beaty discussed the idea with others. One, she said, stated that "a chiropractor is not a god, and only a god can perform miracles." Others encouraged her, while many simply did not know.

In the end, Mrs. Beaty took her daughter to Dr. William R. Brown of Muncie. This was in April, 1962. Cindy was X-rayed and an analysis of her spinal condition was made. She was under no other care, no other kind of treatment, after beginning with chiropractic.

On April 12, Cindy received her first chiropractic adjustment, which means that bones in her spine were set correctly in place, and pressure on nerves was released so they could function normally.

On May 25, 1962, Cindy took her first steps.

And now? An active Cindy runs and plays with the normal children in her neighborhood.

Was it a miracle?

"Not at all," smiled the president of the Colorado Springs Chiropractic Society, Dr. William Salsman, "merely the science of freeing nerve pressure within the spinal column."

One of the easiest things to postpone is the making of your will. You have spent your lifetime accumulating property for the benefit of yourself and your family. If you postpone the few hours necessary to plan and work out your will with your attorney, you can undo these years of work, because you have failed to complete the job.

Your Will in Colorado. In almost every case, persons moving into a new state should revise the estate plans which they have previously made. If you have moved to Colorado, there are reasons why you should review your will and other estate arrangements:

(1) The laws of the state where you previously lived may differ from those of Colorado both as to the validity of your will and as to the interpretation which will be placed upon its provisions.

(2) If the witnesses to your will are not residents of this state, they would have to come to Colorado to prove your will, or their depositions would have to be taken, or they may be difficult to locate. This would add to the cost of settling your estate. It may also delay the administration of your estate at a time when your family might be in serious need of the benefits which your will bestows upon them.

(3) You may also have named as the executor of your will someone who is not a resident of Colorado — leading to probable further delay and expense.

(4) Each state has its own tax laws dealing with property passing by will. It may be advisable to examine the effect of Colorado inheritance tax laws on your will made in another state.

We strongly recommend that you have your will rewritten by a Colorado attorney as soon as possible to make sure that your family will be protected and that your estate will be spared unnecessary expense and delay in probate proceedings.

The Trust Department of The FIRST NATIONAL BANK will be pleased to make an appointment to discuss the administration of your estate in Colorado. Our telephone operator (635-3531) will connect you with a trust officer, or if you are in the bank any of our people will make an immediate appointment for you.

Pike Realty Co. Puts on Three New Salesmen

Three men have been added to the sales staff at Pike Realty Co., 1201 N. Weber St. They are Milton C. Feiden, Gary Eaklor and Paul F. Poduska.

Feiden is a member of the First Methodist Church, Al Kaly Shrine and Masonic Bodies.

Prior to moving to Colorado Springs from Kansas in 1958, he was zone manager for U. S. Rubber Co. He is married and lives at 520½ W. Brookside.

Poduska is originally from Iowa and lives at 2011 Finch Ct. He retired from the Air Force recently after 22 years of service. He was assigned to Ent Air Force Base from 1953 to 1956 and has served with the Strategic Air Command since that time.

In his military career, he served in the administration, training and munitions fields.

Eaklor and his wife decided to settle in Colorado Springs after his discharge from the U.S. Army. The two met while Eaklor was in the Army and she was employed in Civil Service.

"We hope to take an active part in civic affairs and in some measure help build a better community," Eaklor said.

By JACK LEFLER

NEW YORK (AP)—The business outlook took on a rosier hue during the week.

It already was good but new estimates and reports enhanced it.

The stock market took note and advanced to a series of historic highs.

The major developments:

—A prediction that business will increase its investment in new plant and equipment by 10 per cent this year.

—A survey indicated that consumer confidence reached a seven-year peak in the past three months.

—Manufacturers expect a steady rise in sales through June.

—Retail sales in February increased 1 per cent over January and 4 per cent over a year earlier.

Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges said bussiness capital spending was expected to hit a total of $43.2 billion this year, up $4 billion from 1963. This was more than double the increase from 1962 to 1963. It will be the third consecutive year that bussiness investment has risen.

Hodges said the income tax cut was a factor in the plans of businessmen to boost their spending.

Business investment is considered a major indicator of the economy's course because it creates new jobs.

A University of Michigan survey disclosed that consumers are in a mood for spending. Automobiles may be a possible exception.

The university survey research center's index of consumer sentiment rose to 99.0 in January-February compared with 96.9 last November.

The study called the income tax cut "a positive factor."

However, the report said that last January consumers' plans to buy automobiles were lower than a year earlier.

"The new data suggest that the automobile market may receive a smaller share of the consumer dollar in 1964 than it did in 1962 and 1963," the report added.

The Commerce Department said a survey indicated that sales by manufacturers would increase $2.1 billion in the first half of this year.

Durable goods producers expect their sales to rise from $55.3 billion in the last quarter of 1963 to $5.9 billion in the current quarter and to $56.4 billion in the second quarter.

Retail sales in February rose to $18.5 billion. A Commerce Department survey indicated that manufacturing and trading business expect sales to increase 6 per cent this year.

The autombile business went ahead with high production as if it hadn't heard any indication that softness might develop in sales. It turned out an estimated 164,700 passenger cars during the week, up from 161,536 the previous week and 151,140 a year ago.

Assemblies for the year rose to 1,747,185 against 1,621,099 at this time last year.

Steel output ran into a minor setback during the week for the first time in 10 weeks. Mills produced 2,312,000 tons of ingots, off about 1 per cent from the previous week.

However, demand for steel remained strong and industry sources expected gains in production and shipments this month and probably through April.

Price Bolster Move Reported for Beef

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department's program of buying beef to help bolster cattle prices has started off on a small scale.

Purchases made this week — the first week of the program—were a little short of 1 per cent of a week's production of beef under federal inspection. The amount was 2,556,000 pounds. Last week's production was 271 million pounds.

No Experience Necessary, Franchising Executive Says

The best man to run a franchised business is one with no previous experience in the field involved, contends Donald R. Conley, vice president of the McDonald's chain of hamburger restaurants.

"The man who has run a restaurant before may be too set in his ways. I'll take the shoe clerks, salesmen, engineers, farmers and dentist who have no previous habits to unlearn and can be taught the restaurant business from scratch — our way," says Conley.

Proof of Conley's unorthodox point lies in the fact that, in a field with a high mortality rate, McDonald's hasn't had a single failure in its nine-year history—and the chain has grown to nearly 600 units in 45 states, 90 per cent of them franchised operations.

More than 80 per cent of McDonald's operators had no previous experience whatsoever running restaurants — and those who had got their franchises not because of their restaurant backgrounds but almost in spite of them, because they qualified in every other way.

Conley thinks the "No Previous Experience Wanted" requirement applies not only to McDonald's but to virtually any kind of franchise operation in virtually any field.

The McDonald's vice president explains, "The key to franchise success — whether you're talking about restaurants, motels, retail stores or what have you — is the way the parent company sets the standards. The franchisee owns his own business, but he's identified with the national chain not only in the use of the name but in every method of operation. Not matter what he has done before, he is going to have to learn new methods when he takes a franchise.

"When a man has had previous experience in the field there is always the probability that he will insist on doing things the way he has always done. Ironically, the more success he has had in the past, the more he will want to do things his way. But if he doesn't change his ways, he'll lose all the benefits that come with identification with the franchising company—and, in turn, the company will lose out on the benefits from his operation.

"Even when a man with experience earnestly tries to change, he'll invariably find himself doing things the old way strictly from force of habit. Any psychologist will tell you that it's harder to break an old habit than to form a new one in untried territory."

In the case of McDonald's, for instance, new franchisees go thru a stiff training program before they ever start running their restaurants. McDonald's maintains its own Hamburger University — a training school, where they learn not only how to make hamburgers, McDonald's style, but the ins-and-outs of managing a McDonald's, from the unique "assembly-line" system of turning our burgers and selling them self-service fashion to the standards of quality and cleanliness they'll have to meet. Nothing is left to chance, right down to the precise amounts of catsup and mustard that go on each hamburger.

Once in business, the franchisee is held to rigid — and uniform — standards.

"One of the secrets of McDonald's phenomenal growth is that we've got the business of preparing and serving hamburgers down to a science," says Conley. "And that means we have to make 'scientists' out of McDonald's operators. It's an easier job when they have no preconceived notions of how it should be done."

Swan Only Local Member Of Order of Golden Rule

Stanley M. Newman, owner of Swan Funeral Home, 316 N. Tejon St., has just received confirmation that his firm will continue to be Colorado Springs' only member of The Order of the Golden Rule — the largest controlled - membership organization for funeral directors in the world. This is the sixth consecutive year that Swan Funeral Home has received this distinction.

According to the statement issued by the order's headquarters in Springfield, Ill., membership is not automatically renewed. Each member's facilities, service and prices are investigated annually by a representative of the Order's staff to make certain that the firm continues to meet the strict requirements for continued affiliation. Special emphasis is placed on ethical standards and service to the community.

A non-profit organization, the order is represented on five continents. Funeral director - members are pledged to serve always to the best of their ability, regardless of financial consideration, and to maintain facilities and equipment that fully meet the needs of families requiring a funeral director's service. Ordinarily, membership is granted to only one funeral director in a community.

Members of the order are identified by a symbol showing a knight in full armor. On his shield is inscribed the motto of the organization: "Service measured not by gold, but by the Golden Rule."

Swan Funeral Home was established here in 1910 by Paul D. and Howard F. Swan, and has been owned and operated by Newman since 1959.

Newman's qualifications and experience as a funeral director are such that he has been elected to various posts on the order's board of directors for several years, and he is currently serving as first vice president of the international organization.

He will attend the order's sixth annual workshop conference in Chicago on March 31, at which time new officers will be elected.

Punched Card Indicator of Wheel Alignment

Jordan Auto Service, 114 E. Las Vegas St., has installed a new Weaver Wheel Alignment Punch Card Sign-Align. This testing machine produces a card on which OK, Caution or Danger, describing the condition of a car's running gear, when a vehicle is driven across it.

The Weaver machine has automatic, electronic features which will tell the motorist quickly and easily if his wheels are correctly aligned, and if not, how far they are out of adjustment.

Jordan Auto Service has brought the first Weaver Sign-Align to the Pikes Peak Region. Regular tests will aid motorists in determining when wheel alignment work is needed.

Jordan Auto Service began in 1929 under Harold R. Jordan, now retired. His son, Keith L. Jordan, came into the business in 1946. In May, 1962, the firm was incorporated and Keith L. Jordan became president and Carl C. Stroud was named vice president. Stroud joined the firm in May of 1957.

Telephone Co. To Install More Equipment

Recent news releases have indicated that the Colorado Springs metropolitan area was the seventh fastest growing community in the United States in the period from 1960 thru 1962.

This has been a blessing to our area, but has also created certain problems to some kinds of businesses.

Glenn Anderson, district manager for Mountain States Telephone Company, today explained a difficulty that some subscribers are experiencing due to this tremendous growth.

In the east edge of Colorado Springs, a $130,000 cable addition was completed in December, which took care of many customers who had been waiting for service in that area. Many more cables are in the process of construction and engineering to take care of other areas.

At the office at 17 North Weber, where the dial equipment is located, central office equipment shortages are also causing some difficulties.

Normal growth would not have added additional equipment at this office until the fall of 1964, but because of the tremendous growth, wheels have been in motion to step up this complicated addition, and the Telephone Company is happy to state that around the last of April completion of this major addition will take care of the difficulty created by the tremendous increase in calls.

The Telephone Company will also add 4000 numbers and 2470 lines to take care of future growth.

Atlas Missile Site Probe Is Demanded

ROSWELL, N. M., (AP) — A former New Mexico governor and his Roswell radio station called here for a congressional investigation of the construction and operation of Atlas missile sites at Walker Air Force Base.

John Burroughs, Democratic governor in 1959-60, and station KRSY, which he owns, sent telegrams asking for the investigation to Rep. Carl Vinson, D-Ga., chairman of the House Armed Services committee and to New Mexico Democratic congressional members.

The telegrams, Burroughs said, were prompted in part by last Monday's fire and explosion which destroyed an Atlas intercontinental missile and its $11 million silo 33 miles northeast of Roswell. It was the third similar incident within a year and reduced the squadron of ICBM's deployed around Roswell and Walker Air Force base to nine. Originally, 12 were built.

No one was injured in any of the explosions.

Amazing Stock Market Continues Weekly Rise

By ED MORSE

AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The amazing 1964 stock market rise strung out its list of weekly advances to six straight last week.

Market averages once more were boosted to their highest levels in history.

But the advance, again, was irregular. As profits were taken on previousl y strong groups, other sections of the list moved into the spotlight.

Analysts who expected the market to sell off when the Dow Jones industrial average reached the "magic" 800 level saw the indicator rise 10.19 last week to a new closing peak of 816.22.

It was a substantial gain but the over-all market showed only a moderate margin of gainers over losers, the score being 778 to 562 among the 1,509 issues traded.

Volume swelled to 28,204,421 shares from 26,048,470 the previous week. It was the largest since the week ended Jan. 18 when 30.6 million shares changed hands.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose 2.9 to a new closing record of 302.0.

On Monday the market encountered a wave of profit taking but had enough reserve buying strength to take this in stride and wind up with a gain which put averages at new highs. Steel rose despite the fact that weekly steel production was down after nine weekly increases.

Not untli late Tuesday did the market develo penough strength to move ahead and post its third straight rise to new peaks. Late in the day, the government issued its anticipated estimate that capital spending by business this year is expected to increase about 10 per cent—a great spur to the economy.

The strongest rally of the week was on Wednesday when volume surged to 6.21 million shares, highest since Jan. 16. Most brokers and traders credited the tax cut and its multiplying effect on sales, profits and credit, for the bullish feeling.

On Thursday a late rally by the steels helped the market averages make records again, but gains were very narrow and the issue was in doubt until late in the day.

A boost in the U.S. price of copper to 32 cents a pound from 31 cents, combined with strength in world copper prices, brought wide gains to copper stocks on Friday. Steel again joined in the advance. The averages carved out a moderate gainto another new high.

Air Line Asks CAB to Extend Standby Fares

United Air Lines has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board to approve extension of military standby fares for another year. L. E. Perry, regional manager of sales, announced. United's filing asked to extend the fare until April 24, 1965.

The special rate allows servicemen and women to fly at half the regular fare on all United flights when traveling on leave or when returning to civilian life after discharge from active service. The discount, computed using jet coach fares as the base, applies to travel when space is available after other revenue passengers have boarded the plane. Reservations are not included.

United's standby half-fare for military personnel on leave went into effect on March 27, 1963, and has proven extremely popular with servicemen, Perry said.

Brazilian Land Expropriated For Peasants

By EDGAR MILLER

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—Brazilians anticipated a possible fierce reaction today to a controversial land reform decree expropriating land for hundreds of thousands of landless peasants.

Many feared the decree signed by President Joao Goulart Friday night would set off land invasions by the impoverished peasants. Landowners have vowed to turn them back with bullets.

In Sao Paulo state, Adhermar de Barros said he would use his 40,000-man police force to prevent any government seizure of land.

Goulart also signed an executive decree expropriating the seven remaining privately owned oil refineries. The state Petrobras oil monopoly was ordered to take over the refineries within 30 days by "friendly negotiations or by judicial action using its own resources."

After signing the decrees at the presidential palace, Goulart addressed a cheering throng of 200,000 workers and farmers in Republic Square and described the land decree as the "first step for the solution of Brazil's agrarian problem." He promised to begin dividing up the expropriated lands within 60 days.

Kaman Aircraft Losses for '63 $64 Million

Speaking to company employes, Charles H. Kaman, president of Kaman Aircraft Corporation, announced that company sales for the year 1963 were $64,398,000. He also said that "as indicated earlier" the company had a loss of $1,447,000 after tax credits.

These figures compared with sales of $7,280,00 and earnings of $802,000 after taxes in 1962. In discussing the anticipated loss earlier in the year, Kaman also said that he expected the company would return to a profit position in the year 1964.

During the year the number of company stockholders increased to 4,546, and at the end of the year stockholders' equity per share was $12.04, based on 507,816 shares outstanding.

Kaman has plants in Bloomfield, Bradley Field, Moosup and Hartford, Connecticut and is in production of the UH-2 SEASPRITE helicopter for the Navy and the HH-43B HUSKIE helicopter for the Air Force and foreign governments. Present contracts on the UH-2 and HH-43B continue deliveries thru 1964 and well into 1965.

The company's divisions and subsidiaries expanded their sales; Kaman Nuclear at Colorado Springs, added to its staff and business; AirKaman, whose business is sales and service of business aircraft at Bradley Field, was again cited by Beech Aircraft, for whom they are dealers, as the outstanding dealer in the Northeast for 1963.

Power Transmission Systems personnel and business expanded over 50 per cent, and the work of Kaman Instruments in Austin, Texas increased at almost a similar rate.

But, AFL-CIO spokesmen hastened to add, the crisis is over now, and there is no further danger that a visiting potentate may be disturbed by gnawing termites.

Trusty members of the AFL-CIO's Building and Construction Trades Department eliminated any posibility of an international incident by removing all the termite-infested wood in the basement and first floor.

The story is told in the current issue of 'Construction Craftsman,' official magazine of the Building and Construction Trades Department.

Intense Devotion to Music Marked Life of Jean Miller

By JOHN FETLER
Music Critic

With the death of Jean Miller, last Thursday, the end came to a life filled with music and the creation of it, and there is every indication that some of the music will go on. There is nothing which fulfills an artist's purpose so much than that the music will live.

I met Jean Miller a number of times, in the course of my duties of chronicling the cultural events of this city. The one thing which always struck me pleasantly was the crystal clarity of her mind, although, as all her friends knew, she has had to battle many other difficulties along the way through life, such as restricted vision, for instance.

* * *

JEAN MILLER

Music, of course, and the composition of it, was Jean Miller's passion all her life, and her music always showed clarity and sparkle, as well as thorough musical science. In looking over records, I reviewed, for instance, on Nov. 2, 1960, one of Jean Miller's songs, sung by baritone Donald Jenkins, with Carlton Gamer as accompanist, at a concert in Perkins Hall. I described that I was "particularly interested in the psychology of the accompaniment in the song, played with fine sensitivity by Gamer; an accompaniment characterized by ascending (and later descending) figurations exhibiting a finely worked out emotional context, with at times a very sombre-sounding mood: (In consideration of the fact that it was Jean Miller's own new setting of the old Scottish ballad Lord Randall). A most effective song."

Another time, when Jenkins conducted the Colorado College choir in a Christmas concert, I remarked in my review: "But to us, one of the best-done numbers was the beautiful 'And There Were in the Same Country' (an anthem) by Colorado Springs' own composer Jean Miller. We have remarked on Miss Miller's compositions before" (I wrote at the time). "In this number, Jenkins and the chorus successfully brought out the poetic qualities of Miss Miller's music. The composer, as we have noticed in previous works of hers, showed great psychological sensitivity, to the point that at the climax the music becomes what we could call, for lack of better words, a choral thrill."

It was incidentally this last-named choral work by Jean Miller which was published, by J. Fischer & Bros. in 1963, and which may, in addition to some other of her music, help to give her music a permanent place in the American repertoire.

And there is a very good reason to hope that especially the choral work may perhaps be one of importance. The publishers, in their catalogue, in announcing this work, state that "this work, is a long (nine minute) acappella Christmas anthem of a quite unique character. Over a hummed, sustained background, the soloist tells the story, with the chorus breaking in from time to time. Difficult, this needs sure intonation, while its dynamic contrasts and strong rhythmic pulsation demand the utmost in flexible treatment. Stunning for those choirs that can manage it and produce its unusual effects." In other words, it is a choral work of great challenge, especially for college choirs.

And the reason I mentioned in the first paragraph that the music will live, is that just the other day, the publishers notified Jean Miller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Newton Miller, that over 700 copies of this choral work have already been sold all over the country, in the first few months since its publication last fall; so that the prospect is even brighter for future years, and Jean Miller's last Christmas anthem may be heard throughout the country in years to come.

But the anthem by Jean Miller is not the only one of her works which found such success in this very difficult cultural field of music in the United States. She wrote more than 70 musical compositions, most of them art songs. But a string ensemble, "Divertimento," was performed in Town Hall in New York by Harold Kohon and his American String Music Ensemble, with critical success. And an orchestral "Scherzo" of hers was performed at Drake University at Des Moines and was given a nationwide broadcast. Also a sonata of hers has been performed by the American pianist William Masselos all over the United States on his concert tours.

But particularly one type of music in which Miss Miller became interested just a few years ago, proved to be one of the big surprises for her, and already has established her as one of the most successful contemporary composers in that medium: I mean, music for carillon (bells), in the wake of the renaissance of carillon music throughtout the United States. For instance, a "Soliloqui for Carillon" by Jean Miller was performed during the dedication ceremony of the great Washington Cathedral Carillon in Washington, D.C., on Sept. 22, 1963. Her carillon music was also played at the Kansas University Memorial by Ronald Barnes, who praised it as a perfect example of carillon writing. Subsequently, Jean Miller's carillon music was published by the Guild of Carillonneurs in North America, and performed widely.

In addition, her other music was performed in Tanglewood, Chicago, New York, Montreal, Princeton, Colorado Springs, Denver, Boulder, Grand Junction, and other cities in Colorado, as well as in many cities throughout the United States. Many professional singers included her songs on their programs.

This kind of a remarkably active musical life began for Jean Miller just a few years after she was born in 1916 in Holly, Colorado. Before she was two years old, she was keeping time to rhythm. At about the age of three, she loved to "play" the piano, picking out the notes herself, but she did not begin receiving music lessons until the age of seven. Even before that, however, her parents observed her musical ability, and until she began music study, she improvised her own music on the piano.

At the age of 14 she studied piano with Elizabeth Straus at Juilliard, but then decided to concentrate on composition, instead. Even at that time, one of her outstanding characteristics, in addition to perfect pitch, was musical improvisation. For a summer, she studied with Arnold Schoenberg in Hollywood, then returned to Colorado Springs, where she was a graduate of the San Luis School for Girls in Austin Bluffs, and then took a year's work at Colorado Women's College in Denver. Then she went to the University of Colorado, on the honor roll in composition, and graduated with a bachelor's degree, having studied under Mark Wessell, who proved a turning point in her life as a composer, opening the doors of modern music to her.

Whenever there was an opportunity, such as in summer sessions, she continued to study musical composition with an imposing array of famous composers, among them Roger Sessions, Bernard Wagenaar of Juilliard, and Paul Hindemith, and while at home in Colorado Springs, she used to borrow musical scores from Dr. Frederick Boothroyd, for study, being able to read them, as other people read books.

It was during a summer of study with Bernard Wagenaar on Martha's Vineyard that she composed the piano sonata which was given the prize by Aaron Copland, and which resulted in a scholarship at Tanglewood in 1945, where it was first performed. The famous violist William Primrose sat next to her in the audience at the Tanglewood performance, and it was he who urged her to take a fifth bow to acknowledge the ovation from the highly enthusiastic audience at Tanglewood.

In addition to her music, she found relaxation in nature and became a linguist in Spanish and French, and reached out to the vast mysteries of astronomy. At Northwestern University, she also began anthropological research into the background of African tribal music.

But, the climax of her musical studies came with Nadia Boulanger, the famous music teacher in France who nurtured some of the world's greatest composers to their present heights. And, after studying with Mme. Boulanger, the internationally famous teacher was quoted as saying about Jean Miller: "I never saw such a talent!"

About a year after Jean Miller returned from France, her final illness developed, about four or five years ago, coming to a gradual, final decline during the past seven weeks at Penrose Hospital. The brief notice of her death in the newspaper marked a span of an intensely creative musical life. And her music lives on, in her songs, in her choral works, and in the bells of the carillons throughout the United States.

Meeker Named Broadmoor Zoologist

Officials of the Cheyenne Mountain Zoological Park announced the appointment of William Meeker to the position of Zoologist.

In his new position, Meeker will be responsible for the health and welfare of the animal collection and will assist Zoo Director, Don Davis, in other aspects of zoo operation.

Bill Meeker is a bachelor of science graduate from the University of Arizona at Tucson with a degree in wildlife management. A native of Phoenix, he attended grammar and high school in Safford, Arizona. For the past year and a half, he held the post of curator of mamals at the new Maytag Zoo in Phoenix, Ariz. In this position, he was responsible for the mamal collection and aided in the design of exhibits for the new zoo.

Prior to this, he was curator of large animals for two and one-half years at the famed Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum. While associated with the Desert Museum, he accompanied a scientific expedition to Baja, Calif. in the spring of 1962 to study the nesting habits of terns on Isla Raza.

This island near Guaymas, Mexico in the Gulf of California is the principle nesting area for Royal and Elegant terns. Over one million birds converge in an area of approximately one square mile and there is at least one nest for every foot of island.

In addition to his regular duties, Meeker will also work on special projects for the Zoo. Two such projects on which he is already working are, an attempt to induce breeding in the Zoo's colony of rare Rothchild's Mynahs, and an attempt to eliminate the eye inflamation encountered in the Zoo's two harbor seals.

Meeker is also a member of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums. He and his wife, Shirley, reside at 2613 Concord St.

Castro Says He Would Rather Be Scientist

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro says he would be a scientist rather than a lawyer, if he could make the choice again.

Calling on Cuba to direct its energies toward a technical revolution, Castro told a rally Friday night he is "sorry" he studied law instead of one of the technical professions.

"We don't need more lawyers," Castro said. He urged young Cubans to consider scientific studies, especially in such areas as food production to improve the country's standard of living.

Airman Receives Medal for Sea Rescue

With a three-day-pass in his pocket, AIC Samuel V. K. Hipa, boarded an H-21 helicopter at noon July 5, 1963, and departed Okinoe Erabu Shima Air Station, headed for Hawaii, and a Luau at Naha.

Ten miles off the island of Okinawa, the helicopter pilot was told to stand by for emergency instructions which followed a few minutes later.

The crew of the A3D Navy aircraft from the aircraft carrier Constellation, was forced to bail out. With coordinates given to the hilicopter pilot they proceeded as directed.

Arriving at the designated position, Parachute Rigger 1st Class Carl Hatley, USN, was spotted floating unconscious below them.

With complete disregard for his own personal safety Airman Hipa leaped from the hovering helicopter into the open sea, and freeing the unconscious seaman from tangled parachute lines brought about the successful rescue of Hartley.

Altho a little late, Airman Hipa made the Luau at Naha.

'MICKEY' FILM FIRST

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway plays frequently turn up later on the movie screen, but director Arthur Penn is planning the opposite course for "Mickey One."

Penn intends to convert the film property which he is producing into a stage exhibit. He said it would follow the picture by "a couple of years."

The chase comedy by A.M. Surgal stars Warren Beatty and Alexandra Stewart in the celluloid version.

Some Tax Cuts Not as Bright As They Looked

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP)—A tip to taxpayers in the middle to upper-middle income brackets:

Your tax cut may not be quite as big as it looked in your latest paycheck. Uncle Sam is withholding less this year than he used to, in proportion to the tax actually owed.

If you assume that the whole increase in take-home pay is yours to spend, you could find yourself in a pinch when income tax time rolls around a year from now.

Millions of taxpayers who usually get refunds will find the refund shrunken or gone entirely. A good many will be jarred to discover—unless they have taken steps to cushion the blow—that they owe the government sums ranging from small amounts up to hundreds of dollars.

The "under-withholding" is estimated at $800 million this year. The gap results from technical problems met in introducing lower rates with the year already one-sixth over.

For taxpayers earning wages or salaries up to the general neighborhood of $10,000 a year, the withholding comes fairly close to matching the tax actually owed.

But in higher brackets, where withholding always has fallen well short of covering the tax liability, the margin now widens perceptibly. It could be a matter of some consequence in the $15,000, $20,000 or $25,000 income levels.

For a hypothetical example, take Harry X. Birdlong, a junior executive who is paid $15,000 a year. He has a wife and two children. Like most taxpayers in his bracket, he itemizes his deductions because his interest, tax and medical outlays exceed the $1,000 standard deduction. They add up to $2,500, which is about average for his income group.

He has just finished figuring his 1963 tax. It came to $2,225. The withholding amounted to $2,220. Birdlong has sent the Internal Revenue Service $5 with his 1963 tax return.

For 1964 his federal income tax will drop to around $1,975. His paycheck withholding will come to about $1,810.

Instead of owing IRS only $5, he will owe something like $165.

Next, take Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Z. Millsaps, income $20,000. They also have two children, but because of a bigger mortgage their itemized deductions total around $3,000.

The Millsaps' tax bill for 1963 was about $3,500, of which withholding covered some $3,240. The withholding fell $260 short of covering actual tax liability by $260.

For 1964 the gap will be $570. With no change in income or deductions, the withholding covers only about $2,550 of a $3,120 tax liability.

Millsaps has been accustomed to keeping his payments current by making a declaration of estimated tax and sending IRS a check for $65 every quarter.

If he fails to make a new estimate, more than doubling his quarterly payments, he'll wind up owing Uncle Sam $310 at tax-return time next year.

The amount of under-withholding, incidentally, would be greater if his itemized deductions were smaller. If Millsaps claimed only the $1,000 standard deduction for 1964, he would be more than $1,100 "under-withheld."

Moving up to the $25,000 income bracket, a typical case might be that of Mortimer X. Kipling, also married and father of two. He claims $4,000 of itemized deductions.

Kipling paid a tax of about $4,800 for 1963. His withholdings came to around $4,020, so he was under-withheld by about $780.

This year he will be $1,020 under-withheld; his tax will be about $4,300 and his withholdings only $3,280.

It would seem to behoove all three hypothetical taxpayers to take steps to avoid financial difficulty at the yearend—and perhaps also, to avoid trouble with IRS, which frowns on big unpaid balances at tax time.

With the new tax tables for 1964 which IRS has made available, Birdlong, Millsaps and Kipling can estimate their 1964 taxes in advance and remit larger quarterly payments.

Birdlong might elect, instead, to ask his employer to reduce his exemptions. With a $15,000 income, he could make the withholdings cover his tax liability by not taking the withholding exemptions for the two children.

For him, this device would work out this way: tax, about $1,975; withholding, about $2,000; result at year's end, a $25 refund from the government.

For the $20,000-a-year Millsaps family, the dropping of two exemptions would not be enough. It would work out this way: tax, about $3,120; withholding, about $2,740; results at year's end, an unpaid tax liability of $380.

The $25,000-a-year Kipling would make only an insignificant dent in his end-of-the-year liability by peeling off exemptions.

But if Millsaps and Kipling wished to avoid the trouble of sending quarterly payments, they could ask their employers to increase their withholding by arbitrary amounts.

The IRS says most employers will make such an adjustment if the withholding is increased in multiples of $5. For example, an employe who now has $25 withheld from each paycheck could ask that it be increased to $30, or $35, and so on.

However, tax men add a warning: the under-withholding will be less acute in 1965, when the tax reduction program is fully in effect.

So a taxpayer who has jacked up his withholdings to come out even in 1964 may find that the withholdings are somewhat too large in 1965.

Technically, any wage or salary earner whose withholdings fall more than $40 short of his full tax bill is required by IRS to make quarterly payments. In practice, IRS rarely if ever takes action against a taxpayer who fails to do so, unless the taxpayer is also committing some other violation of the rules.

Lung Cancer Diagnosis Soon To Be Perfect

With more specialized films, radiologists may now be able to detect malignant tumors of the highest portion of the lung with "close to 100 per cent" accuracy.

Such prompt recognition of "Pancoast tumors" is important in line with the recent reports of vigorous therapeutic efforts leading to significant relief and cure.

According to Drs. Harold Simon and Alfred C. Moon, the tumor is characterized by pain around the shoulder which radiates to the armpit, toward the shoulder blade or down into the arm. Routine x-rays of the chest, the area where the growth occurs, often do not reveal the tumor.

The radiologists' report, published today in the February issue of Radiology, a medical journal, told of 11 patients they reviewed, four of whom had a history of symptoms of over six months, and with two having symptoms covering at least two years.

"With routine chest films," wrote the authors, "7 of the 11 cases were not diagnosed. With the addition of an anteroposterior spine film (front to back x-ray of the spine) and apical lordotic (x-ray films of the upper chest with the patient bending back) and oblique films of the apices (upper lung field), however, all were readily recognized."

The radiologists, both associated with the Pratt Clinic, New England Center Hospital, Boston, Mass., wrote that six patients had bone destruction (bones that were invaded and destroyed by tumor) and five soft-tissue mass only, adding:

"It was surprising how much bone destruction could be missed on a routine chest film." They noted that fluoroscopy and barium swallow, along with laminagrams, added to the diagnostic study. Finally, they concluded:

"If there is a suspicion of a superior sulcus tumor (Pancoast tumor), routine chest films, an anteroposterior dorsal spine roentgenogram (strongly penetrating films of the chest area), and lordotic views should be the minimal examinations, and with these very few lesions will be missed."

World War II Scout to Leave Carson Monday

One of the original Alamo Scouts of World War II fame will leave Ft. Carson Monday for Korea. Sgt. Vergil F. "Chief" Howell, a Pawnee Indian, is an accounting specialist in the Garrison Finance and Accounting Office.

He is one of the few men in the U.S. Army entitled to wear on his left brest pocket the badge of the Alamo Scouts, a voluntary reconnaissance group of the Sixth Army which went behind Japanese lines in advance of task forces.

Three-hundred men were interviewed for the elite unit. Forty were chosen for training. Twenty became members of the team, says "Chief" Howell.

Their mission was to check on the enemy, determine his location, his strength, his supplies, then suggest the best time and place to attack.

Howell left the scouts near the Philippines to rejoin the 158th Regimental Combat Team, the Bushmasters, a jungle infantry group. This service earned him another distinctive patch — a Bushmaster snake coiled around a machete against a blue background.

His 42 months of active combat during World War II took him to many areas in the Pacific and earned him battle ribbons including the Bismarc-Archipelago with three battle stars and the Philippine Liberation with one star.

Howell was born on the Pawnee Reservation at Pawnee, Okla., and was given the name of his grandfather, Ti-Da-De-Kuk-Sa, a Pawnee chief. He followed the rodeo circuits until he entered the Army in 1940.

He has served in three separate periods for a total of 15 years. The "Chief" attended Bacone Indian College and the University of Oklahoma City, majoring in accounting. His wife, a Sioux, and five children will remain at 4002 Weber St.

The first class of the United States Air Force Academy started training on July 11, 1955, at Lowry Air Force Base, Denver, Colo.

I Remember

By CHARLES S. DUDLEY

C. S. DUDLEY

Road making nowadays looks pretty easy, as I see the big yellow "blades" that remind me of crabs, with the engines on behind, the great wheels, with giant tires, treading the area where the road is to be.

It was much different when I was a roadmaker, in my high school days. I lived in Denver, but one summer visited former neighbors where I had lived in the San Luis Valley, in southern Colorado, 20 miles from Monte Vista.

Repairs were being made to the road extending by my farmer friend's home, and I was asked by the county foreman if I wanted a few days' work on it. I jumped at the chance, for I would be driving a team hitched to a kind of scraper that was used in those days. The operator, besides handling the reins, guided the scraper by two wooden handles. When it was filled he drove the team around to the place where it was to be dumped. He would then lift up on the handles until the edge of the scraper dug in deeply and it would dump itself. He then drove the team back to the starting place to get another scraperful of dirt.

How they ever got roads built in that way I cannot now for the life of me see. And it is more of a mystery how the workers stood up under such toil.

As the work was done on that particular section of the road to which I refer the men stayed overnight in a bunkhouse some little distance from my friend's home. Of course as soon as I reported for work I was made the victim of a put-up job. I was given the largest scraper to handle and a team of intractable mules to drive. I was soft, and had no strength or size, anyway. One trial at the work convinced me that I could never do it. But I resolved to stick it out as long as I could. And I did for one whole day. That night I could hardly get into the bunk where I was to sleep, I was so stiff. And that was nothing to getting out of the bunk the next morning.

I went back to work. This time they gave me a smaller scraper and a team of horses easy to drive. I lasted until noon, but I don't know how I ever did it. As I worked I imagined I was shoveling coal far under decks aboard a battleship in a battle and tho I thought I would lose my life anyway, I was determined to keep on shoveling with might and main while the battle was in progress. Finally I fell headlong into the scraper. I could carry on no longer.

When my farmer friend learned of my mishap he was sorry that he had let me try to do the work. His sympathy made me feel better. But he lost all patience with me when he learned that I had signed my order for a day and a half's pay at the end of the month over to a scalper who advanced me the money at a considerable discount.

East Denver Takes State Crown

NCAA Meet Advances to Semi-Finals

K.State Wins Midwest Despite Stallworth's 37

WICHITA, Kan. (UPI) —Kansas State, despite a 37-point scoring performance by all-American Dave Stallworth, stopped sixth-ranked Wichita 94-86 Saturday night to win the NCAA Midwest regional basketball tournament.

The victory, coach Tex Winter's 200th at Kansas State, sends the Big Eight conference champions into the national semi-finals next week at Kansas City.

Stallworth, a 6-foot-7 forward, won his personal duel with Kansas State's Willie Murrell, a similarly built forward and Big Eight player of the year. Murrell scored 28 points.

But in the final between the two Kansas rivals, who met Saturday night for the first time in 14 years, Kansas State's 1-3-1 zone defense spelled the difference. Wichita was unable to hit consistently from outside the sagging zone and as a result fell behind at the outset.

On the other hand, Kansas State had little trouble with Wichita's alternating half-court and full-court zone press defense.

Murrell scored 17 points during a torrid first period in which Kansas State connected on 51.3 per cent of its shots. Kansas State, in rolling to its 13th consecutive victory, opened an eight-point lead midway in the first period and rammed home eight consecutive points in the final two minutes of stanza to take a 46-33 lead at halftime.

Stallworth scored seven points in 90 seconds early in the second period to whittle the margin to 10, and four minutes later pushed through a tip shot to cut Kansas State's lead to six points at 60-54.

But Wichita never again got so close. Kansas State, blending a control offense with its zone, rolled its margin right back up again when Wichita managed only two points in a four minute period while Kansas State scored nine.

In the opener, ninth ranked Texas Western came from behind in the second period to turn back Creighton, 63-52.

Russell Paces Michigan To Victory in Mideastern

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI) —Big Ten co-champion Michigan, led by Sophomore Cazzie Russell, Saturday night defeated Ohio 69-57 to win the NCAA's Mideast regional basketball playoff.

Loyola, Michigan's semi-final victim Friday night, won third place with a 100-91 victory over Kentucky.

Russell shrugged off the handicap of an injured ankle and paced his team's scoring over a smaller Ohio team with 25 points.

The Bobcats played Michigan practically basket for basket until with less than 13 minutes left in the game Russell and Bill Buntin spurted to open the gap.

Ohio's Don Hilt, who saw only limited service Friday night because of foul trouble, was the Bobcats top shooter Saturday night with 18 points.

He scored 13 in the first half and got the bulk of Ohio's rebounds.

Buntin, voted the most valuable player in the tournament, scored 15 points for Michigan.

The Wolverines now advance to the NCAA national championships in Kansas City next weekend.

Michigan took a 13-8 lead early in the opening period, before Hilt freed himself from a tight Michigan defense and scored eight consecutive points to put the Bobcats back in the game.

Michigan, whose rebounding was a key factor, wore out the smaller Bobcats in the closing minutes of the game.

Les Hunter scored 27 points for Loyola.

Duke Five Wins East Regional

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) —Fourth-ranked Duke hammered Connecticut, 101-54, Saturday night to win the NCAA Eastern regional basketball tournament and a spot in the national semi-finals at Kansas City for the second consecutive year.

Duke, again led by a sparkling performance from Jeff Mullins, play in the semifinals next Friday. Duke placed third in the national last year after dropping a semifinal match to 1963 champion Loyola of Chicago.

Earlier Saturday night, seventh-ranked Villanova staved off Princeton's second-half surge to win the consolation match in the eastern regionals 74-62.

Mullins hit for 30 points to lead Duke over a Connecticut team that upset Rhode Island for the Yankee Conference championship and beat Temple and Princeton to reach the eastern finals.

Mullins, a second team All-America, hit for 43 points Friday night to pace Duke over seventh-ranked Villanova and give the Blue Devils a berth in the finals.

Leading by 62-27 at the halftime, all of Duke starters were benched with six minutes to play and the reserves took over to try to boost the score past 100.

In a full court press from the start, Duke obviously was tuning its big guns for the return match it expected with Michigan in Kansas City.

The Huskies could score only 10 field goals in the first half while the Blue Devils hit 26 of 39 for a 66.7 per cent.

Mullins hit three in a row in the first three minutes and Duke was out and rolling. He hit four in a row three minutes later and when Connecticut triple-teamed him he fed Denny Ferguson, Steve Vacedak and Hack Tison.

Tison, at his best blocking shots and picking off rebounds, glided under the basket to twist in shots through Connecticut's big men while Buckley, Duke's other 6-10 player, lofted his accurate hooks over the Huskies.

Air Force Quint Defeats Marines In Service Meet

DENVER (UPI) —Air Force surged from a halftime deficit Saturday to take a 71-64 win over the Marines and the 1964 Armed Forces Interservice Basketball Championship.

Air Force, behind 25-34 at halftime, took the lead with only 8:20 left in the game on a shot by forward Herschel Weatherspoon that put the score at 51-50. Air Force was never headed after that.

Weatherspoon, from Osan Air Force Base, Korea, was high man for the winners with 18 points Doug Williams, a member of the Air Force Security Service at San Antonio, Texas, hit for 17 points.

Former George Washington University basketball player Dick Markowitz hit 25 for the Marines but could not stop the Air Force second - half onslaught.

Denver Whips Michigan In Western Ice Playoff

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Six players got into the scoring column as Denver won the Western Collegiate Hockey Association playoff championship with a 6-2 victory over Michigan Saturday night.

It marked the second consecutive year, and the fifth time in the past eight seasons, that Denver has captured the McNaughton Trophy that goes along with the playoff title.

But a Denver spokesman admitted after the game that the trophy—insured for $5,000 and called hockey's most valuable—was missing.

The trophy was put on the same plane on which the Denver team traveled to Detroit. When the team arrived, the trophy was gone, the spokesman said.

An investigation is underway.

Denver scored the first goal and never was headed.

Dominic Fragomeni, Bob Lindsay, Andy Herrebout, Marv Henning, Myles Gillard and Billy Staub were Denver's scorers. Mel Wakabayashi and Pierre Dechaine scored for Michigan.

Michigan, the regular season champion, is now 22-4-1. Denver, which finished in the runner-up spot, is 19-6-4.

Each will probably play in next week's NCA tournament at Denver. The NCAA committee has not yet announced the western representatives in the tournament.

A Mercy Killing

Hitting the high spots . . .

The jury of public opinion is out on the Charles (Sonny) Liston case, and if the sampling of a very informal poll is correct, the verdict is guilty as charged.

It seems that Sam Fan has had his fill of the former heavyweight champion and most feel that if he never gets another chance in the ring it will be all too soon. Despite an over-anxiousness to see someone with the title who is worthy to be called the best fighter alive, there still remains an obligation beyond the arena.

As champion, a man must present at least an honorable if not exemplary personal life for the sake of youngsters and oldsters alike who are prone to hero worship. And Sonny has proven without doubt that his muscles are not only in his arms and legs — but also between his ears.

To say he had been given every chance he deserves would be an under-statement. At least this is so of Denver and this state, where he was welcomed with open arms by the majority that gave a hang, and pictured as a genuine reformed ex-con who apparently had just started down the wrong road.

His lastest escapade, along with a concensus of many that he quit in his corner against our new "champ" Cassius X — or what ever he calls himself today — has brought the wrath of disapproval down on Liston. It's certainly not without cause for after given the opportunities he has and still tossing them away with the casualness of a whim, he should be humored no longer.

Nearly doubling the speed limit and creating a menace on the street is bad enough. But then resisting arrest and carrying a concealed weapon is inexcusable for anyone and especially someone with a long list of past offenses and in the public's eye.

It's pretty obvious that Liston has kissed his comeback chances away — or at least that's the only way this sordid tale should end. But as long as they're digging a grave for the boxing future of this unfortunate ape, perhaps it would be wise to think about rolling the entire game into the hole with him.

There is no easy way to cleanse the grim that's been rubbed in the face of fisticuffs since nearly the beginning of time. However, the allure of blood and magnetism of human distruction seems to have pulled this often ugly sport thru the muck for years and it will most likely survive the current mess and anything else it drags from the gutter.

Boxing has lived on controversary since its birth and in that sense this lurid Liston affair has fanned the fire. The only way for a peaceful death would be thru a boycott by the public.

But it's obvious by this essay or anything that's mentioned of the business that a mercy killing will never happen. . .

Turning to a happier scene, it's encouraging to note that at long last Memorial Park will again be in use this summer. It has had some traffic over the past couple years, but nothing like the facility deserves.

Starting this spring, baseball will keep the old home of the Sky Sox busy. Colorado College, under the steady hand of new coach Bob Johnson, will play all its games there, and Wasson and Palmer High Schools also will share the park for at least half the home games of both schools.

BOB JOHNSON
Sees Age Limit

* * *

Unless something should gum the works between now and June, a better-than-ever American Legion program will be help the field justify its existence for a change. This will be started off with an All-Star game between prep seniors from thruout the region and this has the potential of giving baseball the lift it's needed for a long time.

In addition, the City Recreation will have another boys program for younger players, as will the Legion "B" league, and there's even some talk of reviving the adult baseball league which was started a few years back.

For many, this still won't take the place of professional ball that once flourished in the area, but it's better than nothing for those who prefer the sport.

On the subject of youth, which we usually are, it was interesting to note at the annual awards banquet for Young America League and high school hockey this week that one official recognized and sounded off on the gap between the finished product of the prep program and the college level.

Part of the remedy was also given, altho the dispenser for the prescritption has yet to be found. It's a simple fact that more time on the ice for both practice and more games is needed to improve the kid's hockey in and around Colorado Springs. The Broadmoor has already given more than its share (as usual) and now if anyone is truly interested the ice time will have to be found from a different source.

The other factor, of course, is completition as teams and individuals can hardly be expected to improve when there is no one of at least equal talent to play against. It's fine to have a close-knit group all in one area as far as administration of a league, but the rivalry of outside competition would be like a vitamin pill for the entire program.

Some think that within the

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW
By Bob Foss

Here's one I bet you didn't know . . . Baseballs used in big league games have not always been white! . . . In the late 1930s, an experiment was tried with yellow baseballs in a game between Pittsburgh and Brooklyn . . . It was thought spectators might be able to follow the ball better if it were colored yellow . . . But, the idea never caught on . . . It would seem strange today seeing a game with yellow baseballs, wouldn't it?

How many hits is it possible for a baseball team to get in 9 innnings and still not win? . . . Did you know a team can get as many as six hits in an inning and not score . . . So, it would be possible for a team to get 54 hits in a 9-inning game, and lose 1-0!

More and more ex-little leaguers have now grown up and are playing major league ball, but do you know who was the first boy in history to play Little League baseball, and then go to the big leagues . . . The first boy to graduate from the Little Leagues to the majors was pitcher Joey Jay . . . He broke in with the Milwaukee Braves in 1953, and he's been in the big leagues ever since.

Top-Seed DePaul Upset By NYU in NIT Quarter

HE CAME DOWN EMPTY HANDED —Eddie Jackson of Bradley is the high man in this first half action but he misses the rebound against St. Joseph's in the National Invitational Tournament game in New York's Madison Square Garden, Saturday night. The floor men are Bradley's Joe Strawder (51) and Rich Williams (22) and St. Joseph's players Tom Duff, left, and Larry Hofmann, mostly hidden. Bradley won the game, 83-81. (AP Wirephoto)

Bradley Advances By St. Joe

By FRED DOWN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Erratic New York University overcame a 12-point deficit to upset top-seeded De Paul, 79-66, with the help of Happy Hairston's 28 points, and second-seeded Bradley defeated St. Joseph's, 83-81, on Joe Strawder's field goal with eight seconds left Saturday night in quarterfinal round games of the National Invitation Basketball Tournament.

A crowd of 15,429 at Madison Square Garden saw NYU recover from a lethargic first half to spring the biggest upset of the tournament so far. NYU, which has lost eight games, goes on to the semi-finals to meet the winner of next Tuesday's New Mexico-Drake game while Bradley opposes the winner of the Duquesne-Army game.

In an afternoon twinbill that completed first round play, Army defeated St Bonaventure, 64-62, and Drake beat Pittsburgh, 87-82.

Alert, ball-hawking De Paul stole everything but NYU's water bucket in the first half and had the crowd booing and jeering the Violets' cumbersome and ineffectual passing. With Dennis Freund leading the hawking, De Paul led by as many as 12 points in the first half and left the floor at intermission with a 43-37 lead.

NYU had learned during the first half, however, that De Paul's 6-10 center Dave Mills was no match for Hairston and the 6-foot-7 NYU center was the difference in the Violet's blazing second-half rally.

With Hairston, Bob Patton and Barry Kramer leading the way, NYU tied the score at 52-52 after seven minutes of the second half, and then after a succession of ties, suddenly spurted away to a 68-63 lead with 4:50 remaining.

Hairston scored six points on field goals during a three-minute period to lead this surge.

Emmette Bryant, one of De Paul's chief ballhawkers, fouled out in the midst of NYU's rally, and De Paul fell apart in the final minutes as NYU scored virtually at will.

Strawder, who drew his fourth personal foul at 4:34 of the second half, came back in the closing moments to tally a free throw that gave Bradley an 80-79 lead and then reached up to his full stretch of 6-feet-9 to score from close range to give the Braves an 82-81 margin. A free throw by Lavern Tart with four seconds left added Bradley's extra point.

Although taller and faster, Bradley had to overcome a sensational long-range, one-handed shooting performance by St. Joseph's Steve Courtin, who led both teams with 31 points. The 6-1 Courtin and 5-10 Billy Oakes kept the pressure on Bradley with 12 points each in the first half, and Courtin had the Garden crowd cheering with his long-range, eye-popping one-handers that brought him 19 points in the second half.

St. Joseph's never led in the first half and twice trailed by seven points, but the constant pressure of its long-range shooting gave Bradley a mild case of Garden jitters early in the second half.

Gene West scored 21 of his 27 points in the second half in pacing Drake to its matinee victory, and Army nipped St. Bonaventure on Joe Kosciusko's rebound basket at the buzzer.

West was particularly effective from the foul line, hitting 13 of 13 in the second half at crucial times when Pitt kept threatening to tie the score or go ahead.

It was an extremely close, well-played game which produced 21 ties. It was not until the last five minutes that Drake took command.

Gene Bogash hit a jump shot with 5:35 remaining to put Drake in front 72-70, and the Bulldogs of the Missouri Valley Conference never trailed after that although Pitt came back within two points with 1:44 left.

But then West and Dave Hansen hit key fouls to put the game out of reach.

McCly McLemore aided West on offense for Drake with 20 points and also had 19 rebounds.

Brian Generalovich was Pitt's high scorer with 30 points followed by Cal Sheffield with 24.

Grelle Tops O'Hara's Mark In Winning K of C Mile Run

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — Jim Grelle of Los Angeles broke Tom O'Hara's meet record in winning the mile run Saturday night in the Cleveland K of C. track meet after O'Hara had withdrawn from the event because of a strained groin muscle.

The West Coast runner had to share top honors, however, with Diane Gerace of Trial, British Columbia, who cracked the world indoor record in the women's high jump with a leap of 5 feet, 9 inches.

The Canadian girl broke the record of 5 feet, 5½ inches set by Eleanor Montgomery of Cleveland last spring. Miss Montgomery cleared 5-6 Saturday night but then went out at 5-7.

Grelle finished in 4:02.3 to break O'Hara's record of 4:02.8. Grelle, hoping to become the first man to run a sub-four minute mile in Ohio, took the lead at the start and held it most of the way, opening up a big lead in the final quarter.

The quarter times were 61 seconds flat, 2:02.4 and 3:02 flat. Ergas Leps of Toronto was second in 4:05.4.

O'Hara decided not to compete shortly after the meet began and announced the decision himself to a sellout crowd of some 10,000.

O'Hara who set a new world indoor record of 3:56.4 in Chicago last weekend, said "I have to take myself out of this meet, much to my regret."

He noted that he had won three times in a row here and added, "I had hoped to make it four."

O'Hara made his announcement a few minutes after Dorie Reid had won the 50-yard dash in the meet tying time of 5.2 seconds and Paul Jones of Detroit had won the 50-yard high hurdles in 6.2, well above he meet record set in 1960 by Bob Brown and later equalled by Frank Budd of Villanova and Paul Drayton, former Villanova star.

Drayton, Nate Adams of Purdue and Bob Moreland of Michigan State had been entered in the dash but Adams withdrew to concentrate in the one-mile relay. Drayton and Moreland had not appeared by the time the event was run.

John Bork of the Los Angeles Striders Club won the 1000-yard run, edging John Dunkelberg as they swept across the finish line. The winning time was 2:11.3, well off the meet record.

Bill Crothers of the East York Track Club of Toronto won the 600 - yard run with a late surge. The Canadian sensation, beaten only once this winter when he fell down, took the lead shortly before the start of the final lap and poured it on to win by several yards. His time was 1:10.4, only three - tenths of a second off the meet standard.

Bill Boyle of Notre Dame, who set the early pace, rallied at the end and finished second. Barry Sugden of Ohio University was third and Roger Keekee of Iowa fourth.

Abby Hoffman of Toronto, the defending champion, won the women's half-mile in 2:16.4. However, the time was well above her world indoor mark of 2:11.9.

Graduation Takes Stars Of Wasson Track Team

(Editor's note: This is the third in a series of articles reviewing springs sports prospects in the local high schools)

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Wasson track coach, Jim Hartman, has laid out an ambitious track schedule for a squad which he says "may turn out to be the weakest we've had."

The Thunderbirds, who finished second to rival Palmer in the South Central League meet last year, lost their two top scorers in versatile Chuck Stuart and weight-man, Bob Stanley, and will likely have to depend on rapid development in the sopohmore and junior classes to field a comparative team this spring.

In addition to Stuart, who was one of the state's leading pole vaulters, and Stanley, who holds the South Central League record in the shot put, the 'Birds graduated nine other lettermen, including half-miler Bob Noel and discus ace Mike Sorrell.

Hartman said that among the returning lettermen, junior high-jumper Charlie Steel has switched to baseball and senior distance man, Bill McClellan, did not report.

Still the Thunderbirds will have several outstanding individuals when the new campaign gets underway April 1. Tops among the returnees is senior miler, Jeff Berven, who was third in the state in that event a year ago and should have a fine year ahead of him. Berven clocked in the mid 4:30s last spring.

JIM HARTMAN
Needs Improvement

Another key returnee is hurdler Dominic Flacco, the conference champion in the lows. Flacco was the third best scorer on last year's team and will undoubtedly be one of the top contributors this spring. In addition to both of the hurdle events and the broad jump, Hartman plans to try him as a sprinter, at least in the early season.

Also back are a pair of letterman in the 880, junior Allen York and senior Alan Britton. Junior Tom Benson and senior Steve Leonard return in the 440 event, junior sprinter Barry Stimits is back, as is junior shot-putter, Bob Toof. Another of the more promising returnees is junior Mike Martin, who was the team's best high-jumper as sophomore last year.

Hartman said that the team should also receive help from Craig Gillette, a non-letterman from last year's team who competes in the 880 and high jump. A senior transfer student, Bruce Teschner, is expected to bolster the ranks in the shotput and discus.

The Wasson coach said he had a large turnout of sophomores but assistant coach Jerry Robinson has been working with them and Hartman has not had much chance to analyze help that may be coming from that group.

The T-Birds will open their season April 1 in a dual meet at Boulder and three days later will be out to defend their title in the annual Pikes Peak Relays at Wasson Stadium.

Also scheduled for the local track this spring are a pair of Tuesday night meets with Palmer and the Aurora schools plus the South Central League championships which will be held May 9.

WASSON SCHEDULE
March 25 — at Palmer (Longmont)
April 1 — at Boulder
April 4 — Pikes Peak Relays
April — 7 at Lakewood (Wheatridge, Alameda, Aurora)
April 11 — at Aurora Relays
April 15 — at Pueblo South
April 18 — at Centennial Invitational
April 21 — Palmer, Aurora Hinkley
April 24-25 — C. U. Relays
April 28 — Aurora Central, Palmer
May 2 — at CSU Invitational
May 9 — SCL Meet (Wasson)
May 16 — State Meet (Boulder)
May 23 — State Pentathlon (Aurora)

BETWEEN THE LINES

By LOU HOLMAN

next couple years Denver will have a high school league in hockey. On the other hand, there are those who feel this will never come about because the powers that be in the Mile High City would rather not break up the potential of an All-Star team by scattering the players among the schools.

There's no doubt that ice hockey is growning thruout the country, however. And in the process, there are bound to be growing pains . . .

And speaking of pains . . .

This next week the American Hockey Coaches Association and the Western Collegiate Hockey Assn. will hold meetings in Denver in conjunction with the NCAA tournament, Thursday thur Saturday. As for the AHCA it should be the usual malarky of patting each other on the back, but the WCHA could and should develop into a hairy affair before it's over.

Armed with the threatened boycott of any team (especially Denver) which doesn't conform to the will of the majority, at least most of the coaches in the Western Assn. are pushing for some sort of control on the rat-race of recruiting.

In the interest of creating more equitable competition and thus better games, they are pushing for an age limit that would all but knock out the importing of semi - pro players from Canada. The Big Ten conference already has a rule for all other sports that trims a year's elibibility from any player who enters school after he is 19 years old.

Some, including Colorado College's Bob Johnson, feel that this has a good chance of passing in the WCHA, which has three Big Ten schools among its members. This would eliminate the Canadian "Junior A" player who completes for two or three years after high school and before entering college.

The main purpose, of course, is to give the American boy an equal chance at least in age and maturity. Instead of going up against someone three or four years his senior, then if Canadians are still brought in to play they would at least be of equal age, altho still holding an edge in experience.

There continues to be some talk of a commissioner to settle the family quarrels in the WCHA — something that's been advocated here for some time— but tho many of the coaches are in favor of this, they are having a tough time deciding on the individual.

The suggestion here is Colorado Springs' own Andy Gambucci, if he would take it. He is knowledgable in the sport, just stubborn enough to hold a firm hand in decisions, and is sympathetic to all sides of the issues. The league would be losing its best referee — one who is preferred by all coaches — but the gain would be worth it.

Spahn Says Hard Work, Desire Keep Him Going

By JOE REICHLER

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — How does a baseball antique like Warren Spahn, who by all logic should have stopped pitching years ago, go on winning 20 or more games year after year with no sign of letting up?

"There really is no secret about it," said the indestructible southpaw. "It's hard work, it's maintaining top physical condition and it's desire.

"All three are terribly important," said the man who will celebrate his 43rd birthday April 23, "but I regard desire as the most important. If you have the desire, naturally you will strive to maintain the other two.

"Nature has a way of compensating for the loss of physical ability. If an athlete could maintain the same desire that he had when he was younger, I believe he could pitch until he's 50. Sure, it's tougher to get in shape than it was 10 years ago, sure, you have to push yourself harder than you did when you were a kid. But the actual difference is only about five to 10 days of training. That's how much longer it takes to get past the stage when you're stiff and sore.

"So many guys look for an excuse. What better excuse is there than old age? Each spring I say to myself I've got to make the starting staff. I've got to be as good, if not better, than anybody in camp. I never fall back on last year."

Although Spahn is starting his 19th year in the major leagues, all with the Braves, there isn't a better bet in baseball to win 20 games this season. He already has done it 13 times, more than any other left-hander in history.

"I see no reason why I shouldn't win 20 again," he said. "We all start even. Yet some guys win the most. The guys who do it are the guys who believe they can do it. First, of course, comes ability. Then, it's what you want. It comes back to the same thing—desire."

Spahn equaled his best victory total last year, although he missed six starts and pitched for a sixth-place team. He matched his 23-7 record of 1953, the Braves' first season in Milwaukee after the move from Boston.

Spahn has a special incentive for wanting to duplicate his 23-victory total of last year. He has won 350 games. The big milestone ahead of him is the Nation League record of 373 victories, shared by Christy Mathewson and Grover Cleveland Alexander.

"If I don't have anything to shoot for," Spahn said, "I get sort of an empty feeling. A guy's got to have a challenge to keep going."

Devlin Stretches Lead In St. Pete Open Golf

By CHARLES T. STAFFORD

St. Petersburg, Fla. (AP)—Australian Bruce Devlin stretched his lead in the $25,000 St. Petersburg Open Golf Tournament Saturday in a third featuring a pair of holes-in-one.

Devlin shot a three-under-par 69 on a windy day when most of the scores were closer to par 72. It gave him a 54-hole total of 202, five strokes ahead of his nearest rival going into Sunday's final round.

Joe Campbell and Dick Howell had the holes-in-one. Both hit five-iron shots on the 190-yard seventh hole that bounded into the cup.

PGA officials could not recall the time when two acres were recorded on the same hole in the same round of a tournament. They were the third and fourth recorded in 10 PGA tournaments this year.

Neither did the competitors much good. Howell came in with a 70 for a 212 total. Campbell had a 71 for 209.

Devlin had his good moments and his bad. His game suddenly went sour on the front nine when he bogied No. 8 and No. 9.

"I thought I had let it slip a bit," he said at the end of the round. But he birdied the 10th and had little trouble thereafter.

Five strokes back in second places was Rex Baxter Jr. of Amarillo, Tex., who shot a four-under-par 68 for a 207.

Tied at 208 were Dan Sikes, Jack Nicklaus and Don Fairfield. Nicklaus, the pre-tournament favorite, had a four-under-par 68.

Campbell, Butch Baird, Jacky Cupit and Terry Dill were tied at 209, seven strokes behind Devlin.

Devlin's five-stroke margin is the largest a third-round leader has carried into a final round in any PGA tournament this year.

The loss was the first for the Broncos in 21 games this season.

Bennett built leads of as much as 1 1points three times in the first half before Vilas started cutting the margin and took its first lead at 36-35 with 25 seconds left in the third period.

The Broncos went up 38-35 early in the final period before Robert Harvey touched off Bennett's winning surge. He hit six straight points to give Bennett a 41-38 bulge with 5:12 left and Bennett never trailed.

Bennett hit 21-of-26 at the free throw line, where they got the decisive points.

Player Leads List of Foreign Masters Entries

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) —Gary Player, the little South African who wields a big club on the U.S. pro golf tour, heads a list of 26 foreigners who have agreed to play in the famed Masters tournament here April 9-12, it was announced Saturday.

The foreign entries raise the Masters' field to more than 100 but the actual starters will be limited to 84 with most of the older stars in attendance as non-playing honorary invitees.

Player, who won the Pensacola Open in a playoff last wekend, won the Masters championship in 1961 and missed being the only defending champion to protect his title when he lost in a playoff in '62 to three-time Masters champ Arnold Palmer.

Other foreigners who are well known in the United States who have accepted Masters invitations include Canadians Al Balding and Stan Leonard, British PGA champion Peter Butler, British Ryder Cup team members Geoffrey Hunt and Dave Thomas, and British Open champion Robert Charles —only left-hander to ever win a major tournament.

Also included are former Australian champions Bruce Crampton and Bruce Devlin, Canadian amateur champion Dick Westlock, and former British Open champion Kel Nagle of Australia.

The list of U.S. entries, announced three weeks ago, includes defending Masters champion Jack Nicklaus, Palmer, three-time Masters champion Sam Snead, U.S. Open champion Julius Boros and 70 others.

Americans Spill in Practice for Jumping

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Two young Americans took bad spills, one of them suffering injuries, in practice jumps Saturday for Sunday's climactic special jump in the 67th Holmenkollen Ski Festival.

Jerry Goyen, 17, of Ishpeming, Mich., suffered a slight brain concussion, sprained his left ankle and twisted his knee in a fall on his first tune-up jump.

He was taken to Ullevaal Hospital, where doctors reported he had no fractures but would be unable to compete.

Dave Hicks, 17, of Duluth, Minn., another junior jumper, also took a spill. He was placed on a stretcher and carried out from the hill's horseshoe outrun. Later he stood up, shook off the snow and walked away under his own steam. He may be able to jump Sunday.

Meanwhile, Georg Thoma of West Germany won the Nordic combined title for the second straight year with a second-place finish in the 15-kilometer cross-country ski race, and two Olympic titleholders were upset in other events.

Thoma, bronze medalist in the Olympics, also finished second in the jumping phase of the double-pronged competition and compiled an overall point score of 469.95.

Erwin Fiedor of Poland, winner of Thursday's jumping, could do better than 16th in the cross-country and finished second in the combined standings with 455.50 points, followed by Arne Larsen of Norway, the 1962 world champion, with 440.16.

John Bower of Auburn, Maine, a member of the U.S. Olympic team, made a surprisingly strong showing, finishing 14th in the stellar international field. Bower scored 394.24 points for both jumping and cross-country.

The 9.6-mile cross - country race was won by Horst Moehwald of West Germany in 51 minutes, 28 seconds, but failure to place high in Thursday's jumping dropped him to seventh place in the combined with 426.82 points.

Thoma was second in the cross-country with 52:40, followed by Kristoffer Groetli of Norway in 52:47. Fiedor clocked 55:30.

In other events, Arto Tiainen of Finland upset Olympic champion Sixten Jernberg of Sweden in the 50-kilometer ski race; two Swedish women, Barbro Maryinsson and Toini Gustafsson, beat out Russia's Olympic gold medalist, Claudia Boyarskikh, in the ladies' 10-kilometer cross-country; Christl Haas of Austria and Giustina Demetz of Italy tied for first in the women's Kandahar downhill, and Reidar Bekkemellom of Norway won the 15-kilometer junior race.

Tiainen covered the gruelling 50 kilometers — 31 miles, 120 yards—in 2 hours, 53 minutes, 32 seconds. Jernberg was second in 2:55:38, followed by the 22-year-old Norwegian, Gjermund Eggen, in 2:56:39.

Larry Damon of Burlington, Vt., finished 25th in a field of 42 with 3:18:35.4. Dick Taylor of Laconia, N. H., dropped out.

Miss Martinsson won the women's 10 kilometer—6.3 miles—in 39 minutes, 36.6 seconds. Miss Gustaffsson was second in 39:42.5 and Mrs. Boyarskikh third in 39:43.2.

Misses Haas and Demetz were clocked in 1 minute, 30.2 seconds in the downhill, a rare tie, with Christine Terraillon of France third in 1:30.3. Young Bekkemellom's time in the junior 15-kilometer was 50:-22.8.

Colorado's Buddy Werner Wins Eastern's Downhill

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Olympians Buddy Werner of Steamboat Springs, Colo., and Pia Riva of Italy won the downhill race of the Eastern Ski Championship on the rugged Nosedive Trail of Mt. Mansfield Saturday.

For Werner, at 28 the grand old man of the U.S. Olympic team, the victory was almost a repeat of the 1955 race.

In that year Werner surprised the ski world with a victory over the then top racers of the day.

Miss Riva only foreign racer in the field, edged out Olympian Jean Saubert of Lakeview, Ore., by fifteen-hundredths of a second.

Miss Saubert won Friday's giant slalom.

Werner's time for the 1⅝ mile course was 1:35.83. Second was Gordon Eaton of Middlebury College. Third was Chuck Ferries of Houghton, Mich.

The course had a vertical drop of 2,400 feet and Werner's time was record-setting in that the original hazardous seven turns at the top have been cut down to four challenging curves. This makes any comparison with old times meaningless.

Third place in the women's event went to Joan Hannah, Olympic speedster from Franconia, N.H., who finished second to Miss Saubert in Friday's giant slalom. The women's course was just under a mile.

Fourth male finisher was Olympian Ni Oris, of Stockton, Calif., at 19 a youngster among the racers. Billy Kidd, the pride of Stowe and Olympic silver medalist, placed fifth, a setback after a spectacular win Friday.

Wasson Gymnastics Team Opens in Win Over Saints

Overall team balance by the Wasson gymanstics team offset a workhorse performance by Thomas Jefferson's Bob Fisher in the opening meet of the sport's schedule, Saturday at the Wasson gym. The Thunderbirds won only two of the seven events, but came out on the long end of the 65-47 final score for the meet.

Fisher won three of the events for the visitors from Denver, taking first place in the Floor Exercise, Trampoline and Tumbling. Scoring a double win for the Saints was Charles Baughman, who took both the Parallel Bars and Still Rings. Fisher entered and placed in every event.

Event winners for the T-Birds were Art Wright in the Side Horse and Fred Schanburger on the Horizontal Bar.

Wasson took second place in every event to build up valuable points for the team title. Jefferson led thru the first two events, but the T-Birds took over the lead in the Side Horse by scoring 11½-4½ and pushed ahead by an even larger margin in the Horizontal Bar by taking 13 to Jefferson's three, and the teams were on an even basis thru the last three events.

Frick Queries Players On New Draft System

By JACK HAND

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP)—Commissioner Ford Frick is touring the major league baseball camps, sounding out opinion on a uniform player draft roughly comparable to the pro football leagues' draft system.

When Frick completes his swing, he will attempt to

When Frick completes his swing, he will attempt to draft a rule that will incorporate suggestions he has heard from general managers, owners and players.

"The purpose will be to help the lower clubs," said Frick in an impromptu interview in a dugout at the Philadelphia Phillies' training camp. "We must be sure that we do not deny any boy the right to negotiate or the right to advance freely.

"The club that drafts a player will have the right to negotiate for a limited time. What the limited time will be is the $64 question. There are many questions to be answered. But it can be done and it will be done somehow."

The rough draft of the plan would call for a draft of all high school graduates in May or June of their senior year. The number to be drafted still is to be decided. A subsequent draft of American Legion junior players and college boys would be held at a later date.

"Did you know that baseball now is paying the way for 180 boys in college," said Frick. "These are boys who have signed professional contracts and are playing pro ball. They realize that they are ineligible for college sports but want to continue their education."

Under an agreement between the colleges and the majors, no club can sign an athlete who is playing college sports until after the close of his sophomore year. Eventually they make it the end of his senior.

Baseball subsidized a summer college league in Illinois last year and plans to back two similar leagues this year. With a $50,000 subsidy the pros take care of the team's deficits, uniforms and traveling expenses. The players, still eligible for college sports, do not get any part of the money but work during the season.

In this way a boy can get solid baseball experience in the summer and still retain his eligibility while letting pro scouts look him over. Because of weather conditions most colleges run a very limited baseball program of their own in the spring.

TRINOVID BINOCULARS

Creators of the world-famous Leica camera have perfected a new prism system that dramatically reduces binocular size and weight. It's the first truly significant binocular advancement in fifty years. The Trinovid 6x24 panoramic 636-foot-wide viewing field at 1000 yards is an amazing 40% larger than conventional models. The 8x32 and even the 10x40 are more compact than conventional glasses of much lower power. And all Trinovid models have fast-action central focusing, are hermetically sealed, dustproof and absolutely waterproof.

Baseball Comeback Candidates

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Grapefruit and Cactus belts are loaded with candidates who hope to make baseball's "comeback of the year."

There are perennials like sore-armed Frank Lary and Vern Law and a flock of new ones headed by Ernie Banks, Frank Robinson, Bob Purkey, Tito Francona, Dick Donovan and Dean Chance.

In the old days, managers with little publicity to "sell" touted certain rookie prospects as "another Ty Cobb" or "another Babe Ruth," but that went out of fashion when decades of fruitless search indicated both Ruth and Cobb were moderately secure in the pages of history.

The comeback kick therefore is far safer—and almost every major league club has one or more on which to pin its hopes.

Cincinnati and Cleveland each has two who can make a whale of a difference with a return to form.

Purkey, plagued by a sore arm, dipped from a zinging 23-5 record in 1962 to 6-10 last year. More mysterious was slugger Frank Robinson's failure to approach his fancy lifetime figures as he slumped from .342 to .259 and from 39 homers to 21 in the space of one woeful year.

Donovan, a 20-10 pitcher for Cleveland in '62, faded to 11-13. Francona, with a lifetime average of .286, dipped to .228.

Banks, vetearn home run clouter for the Chicago Cubs, had an excuse for his letdown last year. While battling an illness that finally knocked him out in September, Ernie hit 19 fewer homers than he had the year before. He's chipper again and sure he'll lead the comeback brigade.

Chance won 14 and lost 10 for the Los Angeles Angels in '62, dropped to 13-18 in '63.

Two '62 stars involved in a swap — Peter Runnels of the Houston Colts and Roman Mejias of the Boston Red Sox — both are looking for comebacks after unusual twin slumps.

Runnels, American League bat champ in his last year at Boston, sagged to .253 in his first year at Houston. Mejias dipped from .286 at Houston to .227 at Boston with his home run production cut by 13.

Bill Skowron of the Washington Senators is back in the American League for a new life after a miserable .203 batting season with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Jim Bunning, 12-13 at Detroit after a 19-10 season the year before, has moved to the National League with the Phillies where he thinks he'll get back on the "normal" trail.

AMERICANS IN THE RUNNING FOR OLYMPICS — These are three 100 and 200 meter sprinters who are among the outstanding candidates for the U.S. track team to compete in the Olympic Games in Tokyo this October. From left are Nate Adams of Purdue, Bob Hayes of Florida A and M, and Henry Carr of Arizona State. (AP Wirephoto)

Hayes Tabbed Likely Winner In Sprints for Summer Olympics

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Bob Hayes, the world's fastest human, is the American most likely to win an Olympic Games gold medal this year—and he could win three of them.

Hayes, a broad-shouldered football player from Florida A&M, should dominate the 100-yard and 100-meter dasnes this season just as he did in 1963, when he was unbeaten and ran history's first 9.1 for 100 yards. He will probably anchor the 400-meter relay team which should win if it passes the baton smoothly.

Hayes' 220-yard, 200-meter background also is impressive. With some concentration on the longer race, he could win that gold medal, too. He beat world record holder Henry Carr last year in their only major 220 clash.

Carr, who sped around a curve in 20.3 seconds for Arizona State in 1963, must decide which of the three dashes to concentrate on for the Olympics.

A history of bad knees could send him up to the 400 meters. He stepped off a series of sub-46 second legs last year for the world record Arizona State mile relay team.

Behind Hayes and Carr—if he runs—the 100 and 200 should be wide-open events. Young John Gilbert of the Southern California Striders; NCAA champion Larry Questad, suspended this season from Stanford, and Nate Adams of Purdue seem the best of the remaining century men.

Darel Newman of Fresno State, Nebraska freshman Charles Greene and Sam Perry of Fordham are the longshots.

Veteran Paul Drayton, the ex-Villanovan who makes a habit of running second in major meets, is a good bet in the 200 with Questad and Adams other U.S. team possibilities.

World 440 record holder Adolph Plummer and the man who usually beats him, Arizona State's Ulis Williams, should reign supreme in U.S. one-lap racing once again.

If Carr skips the Olympic 400, any of a dozen others could be the third American, including Bob Tobler of Brigham Young, Ray Saddler from Texas Southern and 1960 Olympian Earl Young.

Plummer, Williams, Carr and 400-meter hurdler Rex Cawley should give the United States the first 1600-meter relay team ever to break three minutes. The current world record is 3:02.2.

Next: middle and long distances.

Dempsey Feels Ex-Champ Quit in Fight With Clay

By GEOFFREY GOULD

WASHINGTON (AP)—"A real champion doesn't quit sitting on his pants in his corner," Jack Dempsey said Friday. He was talking about Sonny Liston, the dethroned heavyweight king.

As for Cassius Clay, the man who deposed Liston, Dmpsey said, "I don't think he's a real American. I don't know much about the Black Muslims, but if it's true they hate all white people, then I don't think it's right."

Dempsey, one of the most colorful figures in ring history, was honored by Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, who gave him a citation for clean sportsmanship.

"This is the nicest thing that ever happened to me," Dempsey said as he was handed the plaque. "I am overwhelmed."

The 68-year-old Dempsey met reporters and made it quite clear he doesn't think much of today's boxing.

"Either clean it up or get rid of it," he said. "Either it's right or it's wrong. But if you banned it you'd get bootleg boxing and that would be worse."

Dempsey advocated a national boxing commission to "get rid of undesirables in the sport." He included the new champion Clay in that category because of Clay's avowed membership in the Black Muslim organization, which favors racial segregation.

Dempsey, who was champ from 1919 to 1926, said Liston obviously hadn't trained properly for the recent title bout, which he said he watched on closed-circuit television. Clay won the title when Liston failed to answer the bell for the seventh round.

In his day, Dempsey said, world champions "didn't quit." When Liston did, "that proved to me he was not a real champion."

Other skiers picked to compete were Dale Miller of Ogden, Ladd Christensen, Richard Groth and Dave Engen, all of Salt Lake City, Gary Reynolds of Jackson, Wyo., Barbara Amick of Sun Valley, Idaho, and Charles McWilliams of Twin Falls.

The selections were announced as skiers gathered here, for this weekend's Intermountain Senior Slalom and Downhill Championships.

Pat Studstill Leads League In Returns

NEW YORK (AP)—In the absence of Pat Studstill, the 1962 champion, Dick James of Washington and Tom Watkins of Detroit divided the punt-return honors in the 1963 National Football League season.

Official NFL statistics, released Friday, gave James the championship while Watkins made the most runbacks, the greatest distance and the longest return. Studstill, the Detroit specialist who swept everything in 1962, was unable to play all season because of an injury.

James won the title with an average return of 13.4 yards on 16 attempts. Only 11 players who returned more than 14 punts were officially classified. Brady Keys of Pittsburgh, who returned only 13, had a 15.2 average which would have put him well in front.

Watkins ran back 32 punts for 399 yards and a second-place 12.5 yard average. He made one 90-yard runback for a touchdown.

All Sorts Of Sports In Review

NEW YORK (UPI) —Sports of all sorts:

A quick sell-out of nearly 56,000 season tickets by the New York Giants of the National Football League also may be a big break for the big town's other pro team — the Jets of the American League ... With an attractive new home in Flushing Meadows for their fifth season, the Jets expect for the first time to grab some of the "overflow" from pro football bugs shut out at the Giant ticket gallery.

Heretofore, local shutouts generally preferred no football to AFL football, but the Sunday hysteria is growing so great hereabouts the Jets are likely to benefit handsomely this time around.

The Chicago White Sox have come up with a variety of improvements on Comiskey Park for the '64 baseball season ... Among them is additional parking bringing the total to 8,500 cars and, for gals who want to stay slim, a special concession stand featuring low caolorie food and soft drinks!

For those who don't mind calories, a test at Miami's Doral Country Club indicates a slug of beer before teeing off for a round of golf can increase putting efficiency up to 10 per cent. That bears out a theory of England's John Blackwell, a happy-go-lucky swinger who reached the finals of the British Amateur championship last spring while nipping from a bottle in his golf bag ... "Why save it for the 19th hole?" Blackwell quipped along the the way.

Illinois topped the Big Ten in home basketball attendance this year with a seven-game average of 14,486 for conference games ... Ohio State, perennial national football crowd leader, was second with a 12,193 average.

Dick Radatz, strapping Boston Red Sox relief pitcher better known to opponents as "The Monster," lost a bit of weight during the off-season ... He also lost his tonsils.

Gymnastics, one of the Olympic sports in which the United States has been woefully weak in the past, is on the rise and may produce some important results by '68 ... The big Eight Conference, for instance, is staging its first league gym meet in history this weekend ... NCAA meet is scheduled at Los Angeles State College March 26-28.

Pittsburgh's ace quarterback, Fred Mazurek, will miss spring football practice this year to play varsity baseball ... That doesn't hurt his passing arm any ... He skipped spring football last year, too, but was a wow in the fall.

Olympic soccer trials starting Sunday in Mexico City are likely to see the end of U. S. hopes for a trip to Tokyo ... Mexico is favored in the regional qualification finals.

Golf Helps International Relations

MIAMI (UPI) — Golf goes to work on another front today in an attempt to improve international relations through play among high handicap businessmen.

The accent at first, through the newly-formed International Amateur Golf Association, will be a contest involving the Pan American nations. The hope, eventually, is to arrange matches all over the world.

The idea is to form friendships on the fairways which will ease international tensions at a high level.

"We'll start it off," explained Frank Strafaci, seven time New York Metropolitan amateur champion," with Pan American Week at Doral Country Club April 13-18. We hope to have two-man teams from the United States and every Latin American nation."

The secret in this highly competitive event will be that no two-man team can have a combined handicap of less than 12. The teams will play a 36-hole event, with 18 holes of alternate shot-making and an 18-hole best ball match.

"The most important aim is to create good will," said Strafaci, former director of the Miami Metropolitan Amateur Golf Association and tournament director of the $50,000 professional Doral Open March 19-22.

"With such handicaps we will be taking in the successful businessman who can talk constructive international good will."

It will, he feels, serve as well as or better than world-wide amateur matches involving such as U.S. amateur champion Deane Beman or pro king Arnold Palmer.

"I'm not knocking the professional Canada Cup, played in Paris last October among 33 nations," he said. "But in those matches the last team was 97 shots in back of the winning United States. That's not being exactly competitive. We feel that under our format, every country will have a chance to win."

"The Pan American matches, he explained, are merely a "jumping off point."

"But it's certainly a good place to start from" he pointed out. "There is a great need for us to improve our relations with some of our South American neighbors.

Two Men Indicted For Bank Robbery

DENVER (AP) — Two men were indicted Friday afternoon by a federal grand jury on two counts of bank robbery at Boulder.

They were Joseph A. Latson, 35, and his nephew, Willie Latson, 21, both of Denver.

The men were arrested in December after a Boulder bank cashier said a bag containing $20,000 was taken from his car. Bond was set at $5,000 each.

Weld County sheriff's officers captured the pair west of Greeley. FBI officials said the money — deposits of the Mercantile Bank and Trust Co. of Boulder —was recovered intact from the Latsons' car.

The maximum penalty upon conviction would be 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine on each count.

Protest Symbol Perched Atop Cheyenne Pole

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — If you look atop a 50-foot pole at a hotel construction job in downtown Cheyenne, you'll see a symbol of protest.

It's just the construction workers' way of getting even.

An outside privy had been used at the construction site. But a Cheyenne radio station campaigned against the lack of progress in the heart of the business district—and pointed out that it was against the city ordinance.

So down came the privy.

And up went a bright red toilet—perched 50 feet in the air atop a pole.

The traditional Latin Club banquet which is held annually was tentatively scheduled for Saturday. The WHS all-purpose room was the site of the event. All of the present members of the Latin classes plus former Latin students were invited by the Latin Club to attend. Kirk Wells and Anne Lively presided over the evening as emperor and empress.

The program for the banquet included Latin plays and dances. The WHS Latin Club is affiliated with the state and the national Junior Classical League.

On April 18, members of the Latin Club will attend the Junior Classical League convention to be held at George Washington High School in Denver, Colorado. Sam Larsen is president of the Latin Club and Toni Young is secretary treasurer.

Eleven Widefield High School students attended the First Statewide National Honor Society Conference held at the University of Colorado on February 29. WHS students who attended are Carol Williamson, Louis Ruybal, Frances Holzinger, Cande Korbelik, Kirk Wells, Sam Larsen, Sherry Shattuck, Sheryl Hamilton, Pete Meese, Donna Knight and John Henke. Mrs. A. Adams sponsored the group. The three purposes of the conference were to recognize the members of the NHS: to conduct thought provoking discussions concerning the future; to establish the conference as an annual event on the University of Colorado campus.

The Division of Music of Colorado State College presented the CSC Symphonic Winds 1964 at WHS. The orchestra was conducted by Mr. Wayman E. Walker, with Mr. James Miller as associate conductor. Mr. Howard Mickens, violin soloist, played "Czardis" by Monti, and Meditation from "Thais". Mr. Howard Skinner, baritone soloist, sang selections from "Brigadoon" by Loewe, and Selections from "Porgy and Bess". The concert had two guest conductors.

National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Tests were given on Saturday, at 8:00 a.m. in the WHS gymnasium. A testing fee of $1.00 was collected at the time of testing. The test is designed to measure students' abilities to use what he has learned, to think critically and to apply factual information to the solution of problems.

The Winter Sports Banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 18, 1964, at the Fort Carson Officer's Club. In past years there has been only one large banquet for all sports participation during the year. This year, however, a banquet is being held for each season's sporting events. The Winter Sports Banquet will host Varsity and junior varsity wrestlers and basketball players. The varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders have also been invited. There will be a roast beef dinner for all who attend. A guest speaker has been invited to speak to the winter sportsmen.

Letters and awards will be given to all eilgible athletes. Mr. R. Rounds will announce the winners of two special awards, the outstanding wrestler of the year and the most improved wrestler of the year. Coaches T. Petersen, R. Rounds, D. Jorgensen, G. Richardson, and V. Pugel will give awards to their respective teams.

On Feb. 21, 1964, the local chapter of the American Cancer Society presented a film to WHS students. The film showed statistics concerning cancer and smoking. Following the showing witnessed a series of lectures by six local doctors on the dangers of smoking. 300 science students saw the film. On Friday the same film will be presented to all of the social studies classes.

Because of the showing of the cancer film and the recent publicity of the dangers of smoking, J. Cantrell built a smoking machine. The rigged apparatus is composed of various glass flasks, rubber tube sand a large jug. A piece of cotton is placed in a glass flask to act as a filter. A lighted cigarette is placed in the rubber tube and the large jug is filled with water. As the water in the jug is allowed to drain out, it acts as a vacuum and imitates the human lung in inhaling the smoke. After the cigarette is "smoked" the cotton filter has become dark yellow and the flask containing the cotton has become a dark brown color.

Carson Room Dedicated to Dead Soldiers

The Day Room of the 4th Squadron, 12th Cavalry at Ft. Carson has been dedicated to the memory of two members of the unit killed in the line of duty in September, 1962.

The assistant division commander, Brig. Gen. Joseph R. Russ, and 4th Sqdn, 12 Cavalry commander, Lt. Col. Neil M. Chapin, officially dedicated the newly remodeled room in a ceremony Monday, March 9.

Col. Chapin said the room will honor the memory of SP4 William F. Russell and PFC Russell Lesenger, killed September 26, 1962, when they were thrown from the back of a truck in an accident.

During the ceremony Gen. Russ was made an honorary member of the unit. He called the room another first for the squadron.

Capt. Charles A. Slaby presented a Letter of Appreciation to PFC Ellis Robinson of Headquarters and Headquarters Company for designing the room. Robinson prepared plans for the interior of the room and in his off duty hours worked on remodeling the day room.

One out of every seven families in this country changes its residence each year.

Massachusetts To Show Vote About Lodge

By CORNELIUS F. HURLEY

BOSTON (AP)—Voters in Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge's home state will have a chance to show how they feel about him for president in the Massachusetts presidential primaries April 28.

And after his impressive showing in New Hampshire, where he scored with 35.4 per cent of the popularity vote as well as all 14 delegates to the Republican national convention, it's a pretty sure bet the Massachusetts primary will be a one way street.

In this state there is no way for potential candidates for presidential nominations to be entered on the ballot.

Voters in both parties are given a single space on the ballot in which they may enter their preference for nomination.

There is some competition for positions in the Massachusetts delegation to the Republican convention.

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall is at the head of one slate filed by National Committeeman Richard F. Treadway. Saltonstall says that as Lodge becomes an active candidate, he is confident the entire delegation will back him.

There is another slate of unpledged candidates for delegate at large, filed by Jack E. Molesworth, a state committee member and long a backer of Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona for president.

Another Goldwater backer, Lloyd Waring, filed slates of unpledged delegates in 10 of the state's 12 districts.

Then there is a third contest in the 1st district, where candidates pledged to Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine filed for the two district seats.

The small campaign team which pulled the rug from under the active candidates in New Hampshire has no plans to make any drive for a big Lodge write-in in Massachusetts.

"I don't see the point," said David B. Goldberg. "Of course he'd get a big write-in, and I don't see any need for a drive."

AMA Warns AboutHousehold Chemical Danger

Household chemicals are so familiar and we have used them so long that we tend to become careless. When we get careless, someone in our family can get hurt.

Each year half a million people are accidentally poisoned. Many are children, but many also are adults who should know better. Some 1,700 people die each year from accidental poisoning.

We use household chemicals to clean our homes, launder our clothes and open our drains. We spray roses, control weeks in the lawn and exterminate vermin and pests with poisons. We take medicines occasionally without realizing that, while the prescribed dose may relieve aches and pains, an overdose can be fatal.

What can be done to help avoid accidental poisoning in the home? The American Medical Association offers some suggestions —

— Label everything. Don't depend on memory to tell you what's in a bottle.

— Keep all household chemicals, cleansing agents and polishes out of reach of children.

— Keep all medicines, including aspirin, in a locked or inaccessible cabinet.

— Never put a poison or toxic substance in a container designed to contain food — milk bottle, soft drink bottle or cereal box.

— Teach your children there are some things they must leave alone. Never forget the curiosity of the child. He will eat or drink anything.

The Congress has proclaimed this week as National Poison Prevention Week. Home poison dangers will be stressed, in an effort to help families remove or reduce them.

If poisoning occurs in your home, three steps are essential — (1) Administer first aid to the victim; (2) Save the container and any of the poisonous substance to identify it; (3) Get medical help immediately.

First aid involves getting rid of the poison or delaying its absorption. To get rid of the poison induce vomiting by finger gagging after a generous drink of tepid water. To delay absorption, have the victim drink milk or raw egg. Vomiting should not be induced when volatile oils like gasoline or kerosene are involved, or when corrosives like lye or drain cleaners have been swallowed.

Prevention of accidental poisoning requires a sense of responsibility and an awareness of possible hazards. Remember, your home contain enough unlabeled poison to kill your entire family.

American Men More Prone To Suicide Than the Women

The average white American male is four times as likely to take his own life as he is to slay somebody else. He is three times as likely to commit suicide as is the average American woman.

He is more than twice as suicide-prone as the non-white American male. He is most likely to end his life on a sunny day in spring; least likely to do so during the gloomy days of winter.

Suicide is now the fourth greatest cause of death among our young people aged 15 to 24. It is outranked only by accidents, heart disease and cancer as a killer of young Americans, says a study by the medical department of Northwestern National Life Insurance Co.

More Americans killed themselves in 1962 than in any year since the great depression of the 1930's, the study finds. Indications are that the 1963 suicide total will prove to be still larger than that of '62, when the Government's figures for last year are complete.

A total of 20,207 suicides were recorded by the U.S. Public Health Service for 1962, which is a jump of more than a thousand above the 1961 figure (18,999), the insurance company's report points out.

But back in depression 1932, nearly 22,000 suicides were recorded, among a U.S. population only two-thirds that of today, the study says. The result was a rate of 17.4 suicides per 100,000 of population, the record high mortality rate for this cause in the United States.

The final revised rate for 1962 was 10.9, highest since 1950. Preliminary figures for 1963 indicate that the rate for last year probably exceeded 11 per 100,000. Since the 1932 peak the rate has declined irregularly, with occasional upward fluctuations, but is now on the rise again, the report says.

Many authorities feel that the government's records, for several reasons, greatly under rate the actual number of suicides, and that the total really runs nearer 26,000 than 20,000 per year at the present time.

In many thousands of deaths each year, although suicide may be strongly suspected, it is not so recorded by medical examiners and coroners unless there is clear-cut evidence of suicidal intent, such as a farewell note, or statements made to relatives or other persons prior to death.

If there is any possibility that a death might be due to natural causes, accident or homicide, it is ascribed to one of those causes, rather than to suicide.

Each year many deaths from poisons, particularly barbiturates, as well as from plunges off the road in automobiles, falls from high places, and many drownings, are hard to classify but are automatically recorded as accidental in the absence of clear evidence of suicidal intent. Furthermore, many actual suicides are disguised by the victims to spare relatives pain and embarrassment, or to avoid religious penalties, insurance limitations, etc.

The above factors, reinforced by a number of studies of death records in various areas, have convinced many authorities that if all such doubtful cases could be cleared up as to true cause of death, the annual suicide total would run a good 30 per cent above the official records, or currently around 26,000, the report says.

The suicide rate rises as age advances. Above age 45 it becomes almost double that of the 25 to 34 age bracket.

Among those most prone to suicide are many discouraged oldsters, often with comfortable incomes and excellent health, who succumb to sheer loneliness after moving far from their home towns, into some retirement "paradise."

The U.S. suicide rate historically has held a halfway position among the nations of the world. For decades Austria was the most suicide-prone country, while Berlin has long been the most suicidal city. But the grim all-nation championship has been recently taken over by Communist-ruled Hungary. United Nations mortality records show suicide rates per 100,000 persons in 1961 as: Hungary, 25.4; Austria, 21.8 - both over twice the 1961 U.S. rate of 10.4. Other nations with high rates are Finland, 20.6; Denmark, 20.3; Japan, 19.3; Switzerland, 19.0; German Republic, 18.7; Sweden, 17.4. West Berlin's in 1961 was a fantastic 36.9.

Australia, England and New Zealand have rates that closely parallel that of the United States. Suicide rates are low in Central and South American countries, and in Ireland, Spain, Greece, Norway, Italy.

The Soviet Union does not reveal its mortality rates. But in spite of official pronouncements that suicide is a form of capitalistic cowardice and therefore is no problem in the U.S.S.R., evidence leaks out from time to time to indicate that the Russian suicide rate is very high.

Suicide in the U.S. came close to achieving membership among the top ten causes of death in 1962, even on the basis of the recorded figures of 20,207. The estimated total of somewhere near 26,000 actual suicides would project it well into the deadly first ten, just behind diabetes.

Yet compared to the attention given other leading causes of death, pitifully few organized preventive efforts have been aimed at suicide, the study of the insurance company's medical department emphasizes.

In a few scattering cities in recent years, suicide prevention centers have gone into operation. Included are such major cities as Los Angeles, San Francisco, Boston, Chicago, New York, Miami. Such centers keep telephones manned 24 hours a day, and handle many calls from persons contemplating suicide.

Homely practical advice, psychiatric counsel, and sometimes family or financial help made available through these aid centers are credited with saving many lives each year. An occasional team of doctors, psychiatrists and social workers has conducted scientific researches into the suicide problem. But by and large, such efforts represent only a few hopeful beginnings.

Certain basic recommendations for heading off an impending suicide have come out of the scientific studies already made. A dangerous fallacy has been exploded, in the widely held belief that, "If a person talks about committing suicide, he won't do it. If he really plans to kill himself, he doesn't tell anybody."

Actually, records prove that most suicides do give warning of their intent. Suicidal threats should always be taken seriously.

The first thing to do to prevent an impending suicide is generally to try to get the person to accept prompt psychological help to analyze and diagnose his depression state, together with the attendant circumstances which make him want to end his life.

Yet sometimes an understanding friend or relative whom he trusts and respects, perhaps his minister or family doctor, can give greater immediate assistance.

The risk of suicide, however, often lasts as much as three months beyond the crisis that has inspired the intended or actual attempt. Therefore continued psychological treatment and eternal vigilance are needed to avoid another emergency, until the person is clearly back in control of his personal situation.

CU Professor Gets $14,000 Study Grant

Assoc. Prof. Alfred Hassner of the University of Colorado Chemistry Department has received a $14,916 National Institutes of Health grant to continue his study of hormonal action in the body.

Hassner is entering his seventh year of research to understand the whys and wherefores of gland secretions.

He is focusing his attention on cholesterol, a much-discussed but little-understood body substance. Cholesterol is the most abundant steroid, or group of hormones, in the body. It is the body's "starting material for other hormones," according to Hassner.

Studies have shown a relationship between arteriosclerosis — hardening of the arteries — and the amount of cholesterol found in the blood.

Basically, Hassner is studying what happens when a steroid such as cholesterol and chemical compounds known as heterocyclic compounds meet up with other chemicals under a variety of conditions.

What he finds out may be helpful to other scientists studying such human malfunctions as tumors.

In fact, several of the chemicals Hassner has synthesized so far in this work are being tested at the National Institutes of Health as antitumor agents.

Questions and Answers On Alcoholism

Editors Note: As a public service, The Gazette Telegraph will answer questions on Alcoholism and Problem Drinking in our rgeion. Send all inquires to this newspaper. Answers will be supplied by G. L. McDougall, Director, Alcoholism Information Center, Out West Building, sponsored by the El Paso County Council on Alcoholism.

1. Q. What Are Some of the Reasons for the Alcoholic's Excessive Drinking0

A. Part, at least, of the alcoholic's drinking may have been precisely because his standards for himself and others have been too high for attainment. In his bitter disappointment with himself and others, he may have turned in impotent rage against himself or those close to him, as a child does when thwarted. It is well to remember that his distorted values are not of his chosing, but are rather a resultant of the myrid of adverse pressures, past and present, internal and external, exerted on him by family and society. Perhaps the pressures have been realistically overwhelming and crushing, or perhaps he has never had the security, training and discipling in childhood which every ego needs in order to withstand and cope with the normal adversities and tensions of adult life. When we add to this the possibility at least, that he has inherited a body and constitution which because of some little understood metabolic or chemical derangement, is less able than the bodies of the majority of us to metabolize the poison, alcohol, we can see that his task of controlling alcohol, ie., remaining, or becoming a moderate or social drinker is considerable greater than ours.

2. Q. What Should a Doctor's Attitude be toward an Alcoholic?

A. According to Dr. Ruth Fox, how a doctor treats an alcoholic, depends not only on an understanding of the illness, but to a certain extent on the therapist's own attitude toward life. To help the compulsive drinker first to understand and then be willing to give up the negative and destructive philosophy of life which alcoholism may be considered, requires a tolerant understanding of, belief in, and respect for the potential dignity inherent in every human being. To teach the alcoholic how to regain the self-resepct without which he cannot recover. He cannot be consigned to the stockpile of the week-willed, the delinquent, the deliberately perverse, the criminal.

3. Q. How long does Intoxication persist?

A. How long a person stays drunk varies from one person to another, and depends primarily on how much a person has drunk and over what period of time. Hangover usually occurs between four to twelve hours after the peak-blood level has been passed.

4. Q. What About Alcohol as Food or Medicine?

A. Nutritionally, alcohol resembles pure fat or stacrh in that it supplies only calories. If it replaces too much of a normal diet, the resulting inbalance may lead to malnutrition. Alcohol contains none of the essential vitamins or amino acids so necessary in the daily diet, but it can make one fat! Alchol's medicinal value has been overrated in the past. Today it is sometimes used in small amounts as a sedative.

5. Q. Does Alcohol itself harm the Digestive Track?

A. Excessive drinking of straight liquor often produces inflammation of the stomach lining, known as "alcholic gastritis", it can be painful and sometimes bleeding occurs.

6. Q. What is Alchol's Effects on other Organs of Tissues of the Body?

A. There is evidence that frequent and large intake of alcohol may effect the brain cells. . . .in some cases causing irreversible damage. Large quantities of alcohol impair the breathing function so that oxygen in the blood is decreased. Fat accumulates rapidly in the liver, impairing its function. Eventually portions of the liver may die and be replaced by scar tissue (cirrhosis of the liver) which is often found in alcohics, but which may occur sometimes as a result of other causes among non-drinkers.

7. Q. Is Alcohol More Dangerous for Young People?

A. Alcohol works the same way in the bodies of children, adolescents and adults (although, of course, the same amount of alcohol in a smaller body has a larger effect). But people are not the same emotionally and therefore react diferetntly. Uncontrolled behavior because of intoxication is the major hazard for young people.

8. Q. What Is the Percentage of Trafifc Accidents Caused by the Drinking of Alcohol and Driving?

A. Traffic accidents make up one third of all accidents. Of these (according to a police survey covering several months) twenty - three percent involved "more than a trace" of alcohol. . .Accidents of all kinds cause more deaths and disabilities than any single disease.

Florence Area Gets Drought-Breaking Snow

With a snowfall variously measured from 14 to 16 inches in Florence and much heavier in the mountains south and west of the city, prospects for breaking a long drought in this section of Colorado appeared excellent this week.

City Manager Frank Carochi, all smiles after measuring the city's watershed above the Newlin creek intake, stated that over 26 inches of snow now cover the foothills of the Green Mountains which will insure the city of filling both its No. 1 and No. 2 reservoirs with run-off water this spring.

"Already we have more snow on the Newlin creek intake than we had all last winter," Carochi reported. "I measured the snow Monday and it has .02 mositure content, which is excellent."

When the two large reservoirs are filled, Florence will have an estimated 96,000,000 gallons of mountain water for local consumption, Carochi declared.

Before the last big storm hit the area, forest officials reported a snow count near Lake Isabel of 87 inches for the season with 30 inches on the level. This count placed the Lake Isabel area at near normal count for the 8,500-ft. level. The snow-readings for February showed an increase of 25 per cent above normal for the month.

Despite the heavy snow, which blanketed the area from Thursday until Sunday, most highways in the area remained open. Warm weather had melted much of the snow by Tuesday but another storm was reported moving into the area by mid-week.

Last weekend's snowstorm was the heaviest reported in this area since 1959, which caused considerable damage to vegetation, powerlines, and property.

Fees for State Park Use Sparks Colorado Dispute

DENVER (AP) —Ronald Strahle, a member of the State Game, Fish and Parks Commission, claimed Friday that a Colorado Democratic congressman helped the commission expose its Democratic opponents "for what they truly are."

Strahle quoted U.S. Rep. Wayne Aspinall of Palisade as disagreeing with the Democratic state chairman, Robert Maytag, on the matter of charging fees for use of state parks and recreation areas.

The commission and Gov. John A. Love, a Republican, advocate the fees. Maytag has opposed them.

Strahle said he was "intrigued to learn" that Aspinall had called such opposition the "romantic view of outdoor recreation."

He said Aspinall added:

"That view says the 'outdoors' is and always has been and ought to be free. This is nonsense."

Strahle remarked, in a statement from Republican state headquarters:

"We feel sure that, if Mr. Aspinall were in closer touch with his party leadership in Colorado that there would be many other Maytag statements which he would label as 'nonsense.' Most of the statements emanating from the Democratic headquarters are composed of fiction and propaganda, and we welcome Congressman Aspinall's assistance in the exposure of them for what they truly are."

Adventurer Plans to Sail Viking Ship Across Ocean

By MILTON MARMOR

LONDON (AP)—Robert Marx is a young American adventurer who comes straight out of the story books. His latest plan is to sail a replica of a Viking ship across the Atlantic.

This 30 year old, who was deep-sea diving at 13, seeks to prove that long before Columbus, or even the Vikings, the Phoenicians and Carthaginians sailed the Atlantic to the Americas.

"The Viking ships were no different in shape, construction or equipment from the ancients," he said. "My voyage from Lisbon to Yucatan in Mexico starting April 15 will be made in a replica of one of the 10th Century Gokstad ships excavated in Norway in 1880.

"The open decks, shallow draft and square sail were common to most early vessels before the great age of discovery. And since a few seals, hieroglyphics and frescoes provide the only clues to the design of ancient Mediterranean ships, the Viking 'long ship' is the most accurate copy of a pre-Colombian vessel possible."

Marx observed that many experts claim that the Viking ships could not have made the long ocean voyage because they would have broken in two in the huge ocean swells.

"This voyage without any maps, compass or other modern navigational aids should dispel this belief," he commented.

Marx, who was born in Pittsburgh and raised in Los Angeles, now uses the American embassy in whatever country he is in to receive mail.

He is in London doing research at the British Museum, Maritime and Admiralty Museums and public records office.

"I want to have a United Nations crew of 9 to 15," he said. "One from each country, if possible. I have had hundreds of requests to join but the majority come from people who have never sailed. Also, 50 women offered to sail with me. I'm not taking women along."

The long ship he is using is 72 feet long with a 16 foot beam. It draws only 24 feet. He's not using oars, just a square sail.

Marx in 1962 sailed a copy of Columbus' ship Nina as pilot-navigator from Spain to the Bahamas. It took four months.

He also has served three years in the U.S. Marines, run a hotel and hunted treasure in Mexico. He has served as an underwater cameraman on feature films, on a two-year world tour dived for undersea mineral samples, worked in Yucatan as an archaeologist, and meanwhile wrote two books on the Nina—"The Voyage of the Nina II," and "Following Columbus."

He has just completed a two-volume history of the Spanish treasure fleets. He also has completed research for a book on pre-Columbian voyages to America.

Marx estimates that it will take about two months for the western crossing. Then he plans to sail to New York, to Newfoundland, Greenland, Iceland, the Faroe Islands and Bergen, Norway. It'll all take about five months, he says.

The only modern items on the trip will be a few cameras and life saving equipment — and tobacco for smokes. He's taking an hour glass to keep time.

Marx points out that his ship will not be the first to make an Atlantic crossing in Viking style.

"But we will be the first Viking vessel to cross absolutely authentically, just as the Vikings themselves would have done," he said.

"The previous ships not only added modern sails to their vessels, but also modern rudders and all sorts of other modern gear and, of the four that crossed since the first in 1893, three used auxiliary motors. They also navigated by modern means, selected the best routes near shipping lanes, and carried modern food and drink."

Marx is taking all kinds of live animals to slaughter as food, as well as salted meat and salted fish, dried fruits, cheese, nuts and honey.

School Mothers Organize Child Protection Group

Six hundred mothers in School District No. 2 have organized to form a child protection group called the "Helping Hands." Its purpose is what the name implies, the mothers will watch the children passing their house going to and from school and will lend a helping hand in case of emergency.

The organization came into being when mothers in the area became alarmed over several cases of child molestation and attempts of strangers to pick up children.

The "Helping Hands" volunteers will be watching all the children in the Stratton Meadows, Stratmoor Hills, Stratmoor Valley and Pikes Peak Park areas of the District.

Other than protecting the children from any possible molestation, they will provide a refuge in case of bullying by older children, accident or similiar emergencies. Every "Helping Hand" mother will be provided with a poster to be displayed in her window to identify her to the children and the teachers in the schools will instruct them in the program.'

A capacity audience attended an organizational meeting at Chamberlin School on March 12. They were addressed by N. V. Gorman Superintendant of School District No. 2 and by Deputy Sheriff Ed Packenham, who outlined steps to be taken by the mothers in notifying the Sheriff's Office of any attempt by a stranger to pick up a child.

This is a safety program of the District No. 2 P.T.A. under the direction of the safety Chairman, Mrs. James Sinton. It has had the approval and assistance from school authorities, the Civil Defense Agency and the Sheriff's Department.

The District has been divided among area chairmen who are responsible for organizing the many volunteer "Helping Hand" mothers; in the Chamberlin School area Mrs. William Borgen, Mrs. Edward Turano, Mrs. Marie Berggren; in the Stratton Meadows School district Mrs. Arthur Freeman and Mrs. Clifford Benson; Stratmoor Hills School area Mrs. Kermit Kieger; Stratmoor Valley Mrs. George Griffin and Pikes Peak Park Mrs. P. D. Gonzalez. Anyone wishing to volunteer may call the chairman in that area.

There are more than enough volunteers at the present time but others will be needed during the summer months and next fall.

CSU Reaches $9 Million in Research Work

Signed contracts for research now underway at Colorado State University have reached the $9 million mark, CSU Research Foundation officials announced this week. Of that amount, $4,180,000 is scheduled for completion during the current fiscal year.

Dr. George G. Olson, director of the foundation, in making the announcement pointed up the growth of the institution. "Six years ago, in 1958, CSU's research amounted to $500,000 annually. Since then, our faculty and staff have increased that figure by almost 800 per cent.

"This is $4 million in new money that generates many times that amount of total business for the state of Colorado," Olson pointed out.

Financial support for the research is derived from public and private organizations. The greatest percentage of CSU research is federally supported by such agencies as the National Science Foundation, the Atomic Energy Commission, the Office of Naval Research, the National Institutes of Health of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Department of Defense, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The research program also includes sponsored training grants and overseas programs of the university.

Research grants and contracts are made on the basis of the recognized outstanding professional and technical competence of the individual faculty members who prepare and conduct the research programs. The funds developed through research grants and contracts contribute to the payment of faculty salaries and graduate stipends, and also aid in the construction and equipment of laboratories as well as publication of research results.

The CSU Research Foundation is the service arm for the institution through which scientists submit proposals for research contracts and grants to public and private agencies. CSURF also handles the routine administrative details on approved projects, leaving the scientist free to devote his efforts to research.

Labor Council Still Studying Love Recall Move

DENVER (AP) — The executive board of the Colorado Labor Council decided Friday afternoon to study further before deciding whether to jump into any campaign seeking recall of Republican Gov. John A. Love.

Herrick Roth, president of the organization, said a committee —probably of five members — will be appointed to look into all aspects of the situation and to report back to the board at its next meeting, tentatively set for May 5. The council is an organization of AFL-CIO unions in the state.

Roth's announcement followed a closed meeting of the board, apparently with two persons from the University of Colorado. The visitors were not identified.

Recall of a public official is possible under Colorado law, but is exceedingly difficult. It must be launched by petitions signed by 25 per cent of the voters who balloted for the ofifce at the previous election. In the case of a governor, approximately 153,000 signatures would be required — roughly three times the number needed for filing a proposed constitutional amendment.

Talk of recall moves against Love developed at the height of the legislative session, during which he insisted tuition be increased at state colleges and universities to help pay increased costs.

At the time, it was learned that persons seeking the governor's recall had asked Democratic party officials for financing help, but had been refused.

In a separate action, the Labor Council's executive board sent a letter of commendation to presidents of the state-supported colleges and universities. It praised them for a letter sent to the Joint Budget Committee of the legislature asking that appropriations for higher education be raised above levels recommend by the governor.

The request was ignored by the budget group and Love suggested the college presidents say what taxes they wanted raised and how much.

"We don't consider it your responsibility to show the governor or the members of the General Assembly how or what tax sources to use at what level," the Labor Council letter said.

The letter also suggested that four years of college education be provided for all Colorado residents without tuition, the same as in public grammar and high schools.

Your Outdoors

By MARY L. SHIRER

For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

Most of the historic landmarks and world's famous sightseeing points of interest in the world have been carved in rocks or sand by the hand of nature.

In our own region, the Garden of Gods which has attracted tourists all over the world. Those fantastic shapes of rock formation such as Kissing Camels, Cathedral Spires, Baldheaded Scotchman, Siamese Twins, Irish Washwoman, Buffalo Rock, Stagecoach and dozens others are the work of wind and rain.

The same is true of the natural bridges in the four corners, Colorado, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and many other fantastic shapes in Zion National Park, Bryce Canyon and Grand Canyon are great wonders all carved by nature.

People travel all over the world to see the wonders of nature not only on the earth but also under the ground, as the great natural caves like Carlsbad Caverns and Mammoth Cave the two great wonders of the world. There is our own Cave of the Winds, another wonder carved by water. All these are the great handiwork of nature. The effect of erosion can ruin land and yet at the same time create wonder to behold.

In the Badlands in South Dakota, there are 207 square miles of unusually beautiful erosion. A number of the formations are as high as 300 feet and are composed of layers of clay and sand that range in color from green, cream and yellow to pink.

Bones have been found of such prehistoric animals as the saber-tooth tiger ,three footed horse and of ancestors of the rhinoceros, hog and camel that inhabited the swamps once covering the region. Erosion continues with every rain.

For several hundred million years the Gunnison river has been carving its channel thru pre-Cambrian complex the oldest matter in geologic history.

The Black Canon of the Gunnison river covers 22 square miles of the most remarkable bit of scenery in the San Juan Mountain region in Colorado. The gorge ranges from 1,730 feet to 2,425 feet in depth, at one location the river channel narrows to 40 feet.

In southeastern Utah is that formation called the Arches which is formed by water, freezing and thawing, wind blown sand and other forms of weathering in a 300 foot thich layer of red rock called Entrada sandstone.

Geologists explain that this sandstone has been cut by two series of master joints or cracks intersecting at right angles. The cracks pass thru the entire thickness of the formation. For thousands of years, water entering the cracks, has dissolved the sandstone thereby enlarging the joints and leaving fissures between slabs of rock that are sometimes less than 20 feet thick, yet more than 100 feet high.

It is in these slabs that many of the arches have been formed. Once the slab has been perforated, weathering and force of gravity enlarges the opening until it becomes an arch.

It is a most interesting section and is visited by many people, especially from our own city.

Instruments on the Mariner II spacecraft showed temperature on the surface of Venus at approximately 800 degrees Farenheit.

County Judge Discusses Problems of Delinquency

By JIM GLEN

Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

He looked like a cherub who might have fallen from the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel with his blond curly hair and guileless expression.

But this 13-year-old had already been handled by the juvenile department for burglary, shoplifting, bicycle theft and was now before County Court Judge Charles J. Simon again as he had assaulted another boy whom he did not even know. He admitted there had been no provocation whatsoever.

When he was arrested by the sheriff's office the boy had a butcher's knife concealed in his sleeve.

Quietly and gently the judge talked to him in chambers. The boy's mother was an alcoholic and the only alternative was to send him to the Look-out Mountain School for Boys at Golden.

How is an apparently normal youngster transformed into "a bad boy?" Lack of parental control, no home life, too little money, too much money, the answers are innumerable and no two authorities ever seem to be in complete accord.

In El Paso County boys between the ages of 10 and 17 are generally sent to Golden tho the 16 and 17 age group can also go to the state reformatory at Buena Vista. The girls go to Mount View Girls School in Morrison.

Judge Simon stresses that these are "correctional" institutions and not for punishment. The boys and girls attend normal school and the older ones can learn a trade. But the schools have a population problem which does not tend towards a progressive rehabilitation program as many of the children must be sent back into society before any benefit has been derived.

The judge pointed out that in most cases a child is never deemed delinquent when he comes before the court for the first time. Legally everyone under the age of 18 is a minor in the eyes of the law and therefore must be handled by the juvenile authorities no matter what the offense. There is one exception only, first degree murder.

When the children are first picked up they are generally taken to the Zebulon Pike Center where they remain a few days pending disposition by the juvenile probation department.

The main function of the court is to diagnose the reasons for the anti-social behavior and then set up a plan. To achieve this Judge Simon depends on his staff of four men and one woman, all skilled counsellors with degrees in their various fields.

Initially the case is studied by Jack Crook who tries to obtain some idea of the problems involved. He then assigns the youngster to one of the counsellors who sees the family and child frequently prior to and after the hearing before the judge. Overall supervision of all facets of the juvenile department is handled by Gary Holmes, chief probation officer.

About 90 per cent of the cases are handled without a child ever being declared delinquent. The judge makes it clear that he asks the co-operation of the child and the parents. The system has the advantage of preventing the boy or girl from having a reocrd.

Delinquency figures in El Paso County Court show an extremely favorable comparison when placed against counties of comparable size in non-metropolitan areas. Last year 400 cases were dealt with, about one per cent of the school population. In areas similar to Colorado Springs in population the rate is two and a half to three per cent.

When questioned as to his opinion concerning the use of minor's names in news media Judge Simon said he was against the practise. Acocrding to the Colorado statute it is forbidden except in a case of first degree murder. Infringement of the statute carries a possible $500 fine and jail sentence up to 30 days, but many papers, not the Gazette Telegraph, continually publish the names.

The judge explained that a name may be made public should the presiding judge give his permission.

It is his opinion however that publication does more harm than good. Certain youngsters will treasrue the cuttings as the publicity gives them the status they are seeking. On the other hand publication may result in ridicule at school and with social contacts or cause a teacher to be unnecessarily severe.

Judge Simon mentioned a case where the name of a boy was published. His father was with the military. The man was charged in City Court with failure to supervise the youngster. Ultimately the man was transferred leaving his son with the mother, a psychiatric case.

Many of the children appearing before the judge are suffering from some type of psychosis and in need of psychatric care but facilities are woefully inadequate nation-wide.

Locally they may reecive some kind of treatment at the John Brady Hospital or the Child Guidance Clinic. They may also be sent to the Diagnostic Center in Denver and if treatment is deemed necessary admitted to any psychiatric hospital in the country.

But frequently, the judge said, no admission is possible as the demand is so great and accommodation so limited. This demand is particularly noticeable among the 16 to 17 age group.

Some years ago in Denver a 14-year old boy was in acute need of psychiatric treatment. It was recommended but the facilities were not available.

A few years elapsed and the boy, then a young man, placed a bomb in an aircraft which exploded. More than 40 people were killed.

To continue to ignore that more treatment centers are desperately needed is not only callous, it is foolish and dangerous for the community at large, Judge Simon said.

Florence Groups Agree to Long-Planned Contract

At a joint meeting of the Florence Sanitation board and the Florence city council, tentative agreement was given to a long-planned contract between the two municipal groups, it was announced by Attorney Jerry Sandell.

The session, held Thursday night, included the adoption by the Sanitation district board of an annual budget which calls for an expenditure of slightly more than $41,000.

The board also approved the annual audit made by F.J. Halbig and Associates.

"SEATED CLOWN"—This ink and wash drawing by artist Rico Lebrun is contained in an exhibition of drawings, paintings and sculpture by the distinguished artist which is being shown at the Fine Arts Center thru March.

Lebrun Exhibit On Display at Fine Arts Center

The Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center is currently showing an exhibition of one of the country's most significant artists, Rico Lebrun.

The exhibition, which will be shown thru March, is an extensive look at the artist's paintings and drawings done over the past 20 years plus a number of sculptured items which Lebrun completed only recently.

A native of Italy, Lebrun came to this country in 1924 and now lives and works in California. The exhibition was organized by the Fine Arts Parons of Newport Harbor Service League.

A painter of the baroque spirit, Lebrun is considered one of the most powerful painters today of the Christian religious symbols, particularly of man's struggle with death.

Among his more famous accomplishments are the "Crucifixion Cycle" completed in 1950; the Buchenwald series protesting atrocities of the German prisons; a group of drawings based on Dante's "Inferno" and the famous "Genesis" mural completed in 1960 at Pomona College, Claremont, Calif.

Since the completion of the "Genesis" mural, Lebrun has concerned himself with a recapitulation of the themes which have continually preoccupied him. During this period a transformation that has taken place in his style of drawing and painting which led him to recently turn to sculpture as an expressive new medium.

Lebrun is not a stranger to the area, having served as a visiting instructor at the Fine Arts Center in 1945.

The Lebrun exhibition, plus two other one-man shows, constitutes a particularly outstanding month at the Fine Arts Center. Also running through March are exhibitions by Henry Koerner, who is serving as artist-in-residence here this month and the young California artist Nathan Oliveira.

Eruption of Volcano Reported on Unimak

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—A major new volcanic eruption was reported late Friday on Unimak Island in the Aleutian chain, with a two-mile river of lava flowing from the mouth of the crater and debris hurled 2,000 feet into the air.

The lava flow and spewing debris was reported by a Coast Guard plane flying a low-level survey about five miles east of Westdahl peak, on Pogromni Volcano at the west end of Unimak.

Sheep Raisers Blast Foreign Competition

WASHINGTON (AP)—American sheep raisers cannot make a profit if they try to meet competition of imported lamb and mutton, the Senate Finance Committee was told Friday.

Edwin E. Marsh of Salt Lake City, executive secretary of the National Wool Growers Association, said Lamb from New Zealand can be sold in this country at 36.7 cents a pound. American sheep producers requre at least 42.4 cents to make a profit, he said.

Marsh said his organization supports the proposal of Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana for quotas based on import figures of the last five years. The proposal would cut imports of beef, veal, mutton and lamb about one-third below those of 1963.

Support of import quotas also was expressed to the committee by Don F. Magdanz, Omaha, Neb., executive secretary of the National Livestock Feeders Association, and Octavio R. Elias, Mexico City, representing the Sonora Cattleman's Association.

Elias said the health of his country's cattle industry depends on good U.S. prices. He said he would urge that Mexico protest the agreement on imports made with Australia and New Zealand by the administration.

Electricity Rate Reduction Reported

DENVER (AP) — Residential users of electricity served by Public Service Company of Colorado will get a million dollar rate reduction annually.

The company asked the Colorado Public Service Commission Friday to authorize the reduction and it was done immediately.

Jerry Mahoney, secretary of the utilities commission, said the reduction will total $1,091,800 annually and is slightly larger than the reduction in federal income taxes which the company will receive under the new tax law. Under the new system, persons formerly served by Central Colorado Power Co. will pay the same rates as other customers of Public Service Company.

Public Service purchased Central Colorado Power several years ago.

Personalines

Mr. and Mrs. J. Donald Haney of 1428 N. Tejon St. have returned from an extensive trip to Africa and the Mediterranean area.

In Liberia, they attended the wedding of their daughter, Suellen, to Robert McAndrews of Los Angeles, on Feb. 7. Both young people are members of the Peace Corps. The bride teaches first grade and the bridegroom teaches fourth and fifth grades, English language in the Village of Kpaiyea.

Two ceremonies were held — a "Bush" or tribal ceremony in the Village near Monrovia on Feb. 4, and a formal ceremony at the Monrovia Lutheran Church on Feb. 7, when the bride wore the wedding gown belonging to her great grandmother, the late Mrs. Charles Blackman.

The couple agreed to the tribal ceremony because of their fondness for the natives, and an amusing part of the tradition of the ceremony was that Mr. McAndrews had to "buy" his bride from Mr. Haney for $40!

The Village is about 250 miles from Monrovia, and it was necessary for the bride to wear the native buba-lappa, as did her parents, and the bridegroom wore a black robe of "country cloth."

Following the unusual wedding ceremonies, Mr. and Mrs. Haney, traveling exclusively by air, visited Cairo, Egypt, Jerusalem and other places in the Holy Land; Istanbul, Turkey; Athens, Greece; Rome, Venice Madrid, and Lisbon, Portugal.

In Lisbon, they met Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Heinicke of Broadmoor who were enjoying a vacation there.

Mrs. W. Freudenberg and Mrs. Phillip Dieffenbach gave a cocktail party last Saturday night honoring committees and all who helped with the CARE fashion show held last week at the Broadmoor Hotel. The party was held at the home of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Freudenberg, 1702 N. Nevada Ave .

Mrs. Dieffenbach was general chairman of the benefit and Mrs. Freudenberg was in charge of decorations.

Mrs. Mary Jo Thieman left Monday for La Mesa, Calif., to attend the funeral of Mr. Walter A. Freeland who died March 8 of a heart attack. Mrs. Thieman will spend some time in La Mesa with Mrs. Freeland, who is her aunt.

Mrs. Freeland is the former Betty Marksheffel and the couple formerly resided in Colorado Springs.

There will be a coffee and meeting of the Colorado Springs Symphony Guild at 10 a.m. Wednesday, at the home of Mrs. James C. Bowers, 1505 N .Tejon St.

The program will be violin and piano music by Ronald Hudson and Dr. Max Lanner.

Reservations are necessary and must be made by Monday with, one of the following assistant hostesses: Mrs. Frank Cotten III, 634-6713; Mrs. Kenneth Gloss, 632-2127; Mrs. Melvin Weimer, 633-6856.

Miss Judith Sims, a freshman at Colorado State College, Ft Collins, is on the Dean's list with a 3.4 average. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John A. Sims of 1016 N. Logan St.

Kenneth Wayne Shipps, senior from Colorado Springs at Wheaton College, Ill., has been awarded the coveted Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for full tuition and fees for the first year of graduate study.

Mr. Shipps is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Erickson of 1716 W. Boulder St. He is a graduate of Palmer High School where he was captain of the basketball team. At Wheaton, he is an honor student, majoring in history. He also plays basketball and tennis with Varsity teams.

Two Colorado Springs students attending Colorado University at Boulder were elected to offices in their sorority, Alpha Gamma Delta. Miss Judy Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Warren of 2500 N.

Steamy Doings On Home Front

KANKAKEE, Ill. (UPI)—The United States is continually in hot water—about 2.4 trillion gallons yearly.

This total is almost double the per capita amount of hot water used in the home 25 years ago, reports the A. O. Smith Corp.

It is estimated that 80 per cent of all water ued in the home is hot. The hot water faucet is turned on 111 times a day in the average home. This total includes tub bathrs, ranging around 15 galons for complete dunking, and about 31 ounces for grooming.

Besides higher health and sanitation standards, the big increase in hot water use during the last two decades arises from the growth of automatic washing machines and dishwashers.

The washing machine takes about 25 gallons a load and dishwashers require 7 gallons per load. Doing dishes byhand takes about 3 gallons, the company said.

New Model Kits Let Child Create Monsters, Racers

By JOAN SWEENEY
United Press International

VENICE, Calif. (UPI) — Parents, take wraning. If your child's hobby is scale-model building, you may be invaded by monsters like the Rat Fink and Mr. Gassser.

These ghoulish creatures are the latest thing in the plastic kit line which used to restrict itself to more subdued items—such as battleships and bombers.

The monster kits are even "customized" so that the junior Frankenstein can create his personal monster.

But if he's more inclined toward fast cars than horror, the biggest selling itmes in the scale model field are the car racers.

These too ca nbe "customized" and the pint-sized fan can concoct his own dragster or sports car from dozens of miniature bodies, frames, engines, et al.

Some communities, it's said, even offer public tracks where the creator can race his miniature against other competitors. At least, parents have to admit its cheaper and safer tuan experimenting with the real thing.

These model races are the most phenomenal seller in the plastic kit field that grew from nothing in the late 1940s to a multi-million dollar business today.

Most of these kits are purchased by the children themselves.

"Over 80 per cent of our purchaswers are the acual users," said Lewis Glaser, presdient of Revell, one of the largest manufacturers of the model kits.

Glaser confirmed what many parents have suspected about their small fry. Children are sophisticated. They demand complete authenticity in the models.

"You'd be amazed at how discr8minating 9, 10, and 11-year-olds are when they have to spend their own money," Glaser said.

To satisfy the demand for authenticity, Revell has been at times almost too successful.

A couple of years ago, Admiral Hyman Rickover chastized the plastic kit manufacturers for the model of the Polaris submarine. He said they were giving away vital military secrets to the Russians.

Glaser said that his company had built the Polaris from material available in techincal journals and the rest was expert guessing—and apparently highly accurate guessing as well.

A successful model must also have a certain human element to it, Glaser said.

"It's the Walter Mitty bit," he explained. "The boy imaginhe's a pilot of a et or a captain of a destroyer. The model must vie him a psychological feeling of importance."

Answer an embarrassing question simply, then change the subject.

Airline's Experiment Could Set Trend in Dining Aloft

By ROBERT J. SERLING
UPI Aviation Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. airlines, which spend $100 million a year feeding their passengers, are taking a close look at an airborne food experiment.

It is Eastern Air Lines' application of the frozen food concept to omestic in-flight meal service. Eastern has equipped its new Boeing 727 jets with freezer units and a new type of radiant heat oven that cooks a meal while the plane is covering 70 miles.

Frozen foods are not new to the airlines. But generally the use of pre-frozen meals has been limited to overseas flights —enabling airlines like TWA, for example,. to offer a choice of seven entries on a trans-Atlantid flight.

Eadtern is the first carrier to utilize the frozen food concept on a large scale in the United States. When it was planning the galley setup for its new 727, it figured it was time to start anew on the question of meal service—for Eastern alone has been losing up to $750,000 annually because of over-ordered or unused meals.

The line frankly admits that a woman was responsible for the decision to use frozen meals. Mrs. Edit Robertson, a food service consultant, had been trying to sell the airline on the frozen fodd concept using an oven she had designed largely by herself. She hoped to work on a contract basis, but her arguments impressed Eastern to such an extent that the airline hired her outright.

Briefly, the advantages she cited were these:

—Using frozen meals would eliminate the waste factor alcould be kept in an aircraft eliminate the waste factor alcould be kept in an aircraft freezer unit indefinitely and served nly when desired.

—The frozen foods would enable an airline to offer a wide range of choices hitherto available only to overseas passengers.

—Quality control would be easier to maintain on a systemwide basis with all meals prepared and frozen at a central source.

To these points, Mrs. Robertson added one more: use disposable dishes and glasses, she advised Eastern. She figured that it costs an airline 17 cents to wash and sanitize each dish, while an expendable dish costs only 13 cents in the first place.

Eastern asked for bids on a frozen food contract and the winner was National Food Marketers of Blue Anchor, N. J. Contracts also were let for manufacture of the lightweight oven and freezer units, which would up costing Eastern $1,920 and $1,720 per unit respectively. The combined arrangement on its 727 fleet of 40 planes had a $145,600 price tag.

Working with the food processor, Eastern began testing various recipes early in 1963. Sample meals were served on all Eastern flights out of New Orleans for several months with customer reaction recorded and evaluated. A lobster Newburg sauce, for example, was change 22 times before a final recipe was adopted.

The line, which carries many Jewish passengers, also decided to include special frozen koher meals, sealed at the processing plant under rabbinical supervision. Previously airlines have offered kosher dishes only if a passenger ordered them at least 24 hours before departure. The frozen food concept enabled Eastern to store kosher meals in th3 freezer compartment. And stewardesses were instructed howt o serve them: the cover of the frozen kosher casserole is to be opened only by the passenger, after which the meal can be put in the oven.

Seevral airlines are watching Eastern's exeprience with frozen foods carefully. One competitor even had its president riding an early Eastern 727 flight to observe the new food service.

Air food service dates back to 1927, when the then infant airlines began serving cold ham sandwiches, coffee and apples —handed out by the co-pilot in those pre-stewardss days. Two years later, cold fried chicken was the standard airline meal. Not until 1933 did Ucited introduce the first hot meal.

The airlines today spend more on food service than they did operating their entire fleets 30 years ago. United's food bill alone runs more than $14 million a year, resulting from such astronomical - gastronomical items as 8 million cups of coffee and 600,000 steaks esrved annually.

CHICAGO (UPI) — If you overhear someone predicting that "this year's color is avocado," it isn't necessarily a reference to spring fashions. The decree applies just as easily to upholstery fabrics.

Upholstery materials now come in a range of colors that rival those in the dressmaking industry.

In a year's study of the developing appetite for more daring colors for chairs and sofas, Selig Manufacturing Co., found that women havs become much bolder in choosing colors that have a gleam and a glow. The company found that there also is a much greater desire for smartly printed fabrics.

As recently as 1961, which was a godd sales year in the furniture business, almost one third of Selig's upholstered furniture came in nondescript char-brown colors.

In 1962, the popular colors were in the blue family. Peacock, tile and sapphire were the shades most frequently selected.

Last year saw a new interest in avocado and moss along with the warm accent shades of tangerine and marigold . The many ne wways of combining these shades have placed them in the forefront.

This year's sofas are likely to be enveloped in tweed, with color mixtures for heightened birlliance.

The increas ein brilliantly colored upholstery fbrics matches this year's color explosion in rugs and carpeting.

Interior designers now say that the so-called neutral colors of beige and off-white constitute a dull room design. They recommend bold splashes of color, but say it should be used with a discerning touch.

Bold colors are necessary for accent but today the accent an be a brightly colored upholstered chair rather than the conventional throw pillow or ashtray.

Keep Home's Air Moist

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa (UPI)—A room humidity level of 40 to 60 per cent is desirable for wood furniture.

If the humidity is too low for prolonged periods—as often happens during fall and winter — wood furniture dries out, Penn State home management specialists said. It may shrink, crack or split. The glue may dry out and joints become loose.

One way to raise the humidity level while the heat is on is to place low wide containers of water in the room.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said more than seven and a quarter billion hot dogs were prepared last year under federal inspection. That's enough for every man, woman and child in the U.S. to have at least 38 hot dogs.

TO MODEL AT BENEFIT — Burnett-Winslow Circle of the First Methodist Church will present a tea and fashion show at 1:30 p.m. Friday in the banquet room of the church. Proceeds from the benefit will go to the work of the Women's Society of Christian Service of the church. May D and F will present the spring styles in the "Easter Glamour" theme. Left to right here, wearing some of the apparel to be seen in the show are Miss Brenda Winslow, Mrs. Ben F. Lehmberg and Mrs. O. D. Fry.

The belt industry's celebrating. Paris couturiers, in their spring and summer collections, shoed belts galore. Belts usually were narrow, of fabric or leather.

Latest feminine touch for milady—a flower at her wrist or throat. Designer Yves St. Laurent of Paris showed for spring a black coat with one white camellia at the neck. Chanel showed a white or gold gardenia at the throat, wrist, or nape of the neck.

Chanel influences little ladies as well as the grown ones. For spring, the prettiest suits for the moppet set are cardigan jackets marked off in braid. Also plentiful are blazers with cluster pleat skirts.

The ring's the thing for spring, says the Jewelry Industry Council. For instance, there is the popular "mother's ring," a large band holding her birthstone, that of her husband and one for each of her children.

There are those who say the blonde never went away. But apparently the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, Inc., believes she might have been playing second string. It reports that among the new hair colors, blondes "will become truly important again," with reds and natural brownettes vyin gstrongly for attention. In its seasonal wrap-up of styles, the association also sees the plural use of colo— a tone on tone effect achieved with two or three tones of a single color for a coiffure.

Avoid the Crowds

CHICAGO (UPI) — If you don't like crowds, shop your favorite super market on Mondays through Wednesdays, advises Super Market Institute. Those three days together account for only 27 per cent of the average week's business. Friday accounts for 29 per cent of the business, Saturday 28 per cent, and Thursday 16 per cent.

The use of notrump as a rescue from partner's suit, in which a singleton is held, appears to be employed all too frequently by many players whose experience should have taught them differently. Seldom indeed is it profitable to employ a notrump bid for the purpose of rescuing partner from a double. In cases where your honor strength is scattered, if partner is going to be badly off in his suit, you are apt to be worse off in notrump because of your inability to utilize his hand. If partner is permitted to play at his own make, he will be able to avail himself of any high card strength that your hand may contain but, in addition, he will be able to single in some of his low trumps by ruffing, an advantage you will not enjoy if you run out to notrump.

It may be doubtful wisdom to publish the bidding in the above diagram, but I can vouch for its authenticity. When the smoke had cleared away, South had managed to take three tricks and was 1,700 points poorer and, we hope, much wiser for the experience. When North was asked why he had not persisted to four spades, he replied, quite aptly, that he just couldn't cope with the prospect of having his partner bid four notrump.

After South opened with one club, North chose to respond with one spade. While this department does not see fit to indorse North's bid, we are not prepared to embark on a crusade against such practice. South was now obliged to bid one notrump, despite the singleton. North could see trouble brewing and elected to pass. East doubled and West cheerfully left it in. North was unwilling to play one notrump doubled since his hand would be useless at that contract. South's rescue of two notrump when his partner had just escaped from one notrump doubled can only, with unbridled charity, be called indiscreet and the subsequent rescues may perhaps best be described as incredible.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

It's a Thought!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old widow with four boys to raise. I have no desire to marry again, but all my friends tell me my boys need a father. They are always arranging for me to meet this man and that man. I love my boys very much, and am raising them in a good Christian atmosphere. They are good boys, and I discipline them when they need it just as a father would do. I take in sewing and manage to keep my bills paid, so I don't need a husband to support us. I believe if the good Lord intends for me to have another husband, He will take care of it Himself. Do you think I should accept the company of men with marriage in mind just because people think my boys need a father, even though I don't think I need a husband? —SATISFIED

DEAR SATISFIED: As a Christian you must know that the Lord said, "It is not good that man should be alone." (Genesis II, 18.) And the same goes for woman. God helps those who help themselves, and perhaps God is trying to help you through thoughtful friends.

DEAR ABBY: Have you any suggestions for getting our son to date a certain girl? This girl is charming, intelligent, has a wonderful personality, and would be an ideal match for our son. He is 25, but he seems to prefer the more glamourous, flirty type. We know that once he gets to know this girl, he would appreciate her fine qualities. —PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: I can't tell you how to get your son to date a certain girl, but I can tell you how to sour him on her before he even sees her. Just keep telling him how "good" she would be for him! Your best move would be to arrange for them to meet "accidentally." And let him "discover" her for himself.

DEAR ABBY: Our baby is only three months old. My husband's family is quite wealthy and they have spent a lot on gifts for her. I must admit there is a great deal our baby would not have if it weren't for them. On the other hand, my parents barely make ends meet, and, though they would love to buy things for our baby, they can't afford to. Ours is the only grandchild on both sides, and both sets of grandparents are wild about her. But we don't want her to grow up thinking that because all the presents come from one set of grandparents the other set doesn't love her as much. What can we do about this? Or should we just keep quiet and teach our child that love means more than presents? —NEW PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: The affection of very young children is easily bought with gifts. It takes a mature mind to reason that "love" means more than presents. Your husband should explain this to his generous parents. They'll understand.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a man who comes into someone's home and sits the entire evening in the comptny of men and women without removing his hat? Thank you. —D. McC.

DEAR D.: He has either no manners, no hair, or a new hat.

Day Camps For Elderly?

CHICAGO (UPI)—Day camps for Grandpa and Grandma will be as commonplace as day camps for junior in another ten years, predicts an expert on nursing homes.

Chicago's Morton Textiles and Furniture has just finished a nursing home job which features a "day camp" set-up for senior citizens who will spend the day at planned activities and go back home at night.

Morton's president, Julius Greengoss, claims it is the beginning of a trend and said that in another decade whenever junior goes off to day camp, Granny, too, will go to hers.

Traffic Plan

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Careful planning of entryways can add to the comfort, convenience and pleasure members of a family derive from their home, a housing specialist at the University of Nebraska says.

The specialist, Mrs. Jerre Withrow, said function is the first thing to consider in successful planning for any area of the house. She described the entryway as the control center for circulation throughout the house.

From it, she said, family members or guests should be able to reach all areas of the house without interfering with activities in any one room. Location is the important factor in channeling this flow.

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI)—Parents may complain about their children's "poor appetites" because they do not understand that patterns of food intake vary among children.

The Committee on Nutrition of the American Academy of Pediatrics says eating patterns may be affected by age, sex, environmental temperature, caloric expenditure, and emotional, cultural and educational factors.

Considerable differences exist between boys and girls in the amount they eat and the times at which they eat the most, the committee said.

Tests have shown that girls eat the most between ages 13 and 16, averaging 2,500 calories daily. Boys reach a peak between ages 15 and 18, when they average nearly 3,500 calories.

Voluntary eating decreases sharply at high temperatures, the committee said, possibly because heat resulting from ingestation of food would interfere with maintenance of body temperature.

"This theory," the committee said, "is obviously attractive as an explanation for 'poor appetite' frequently reported during hot weather."

Emotional and cultural factors "are of exceptional importance" in eating, the committee said.

"Although we tend to think of food taboos in relation to strange and seemingly irrational practices of primitive societies, such taboos are actually common in our society also," the committee said.

"For example, we eat pig, but not dog, live oysters but not live shrimp. Americans often have a keen appetite for milk, which is considered repulsive in certain other societies."

Cultural factors also influence appetite at specified seasons or times of day. So, we eat turkey at Thanksgiving and are likely to have an appetite for ham and eggs at breakfast but not for roast pork.

Consequently, the child who craves ice cream for breakfast may not be ill, but merely less regimented by culture than the adult members of society, the committee said.

Running water and quick thawing are enemies of fish and seafood. One washes away delicate flavor; the other breaks down tender flesh tissues too quickly, causing loss of flavor.

National President Speaks At Annual Questers Banquet

Many women guests, dressed in authentic old styles, added a festive air to the third annual quester banquet held last Friday evening in the Antlers Hotel, and attended by over 100 members and guests. The guest of honor was the Quester national president of Ocean City, N.J., Mrs. Lee R. Layman. Seated at the head table with Mrs. Layman, were the Colorado Springs Chapter presidents: Rosalee G. Porter of Covered Wagon Chapter, who was the mistress of ceremonies; Evelyn Adams, Chipita Chapter; Mildred Fisher, Timpiute Chapter; Virginia Bean, Columbine Chapter; Virginia Ziegler, Rose Kingsley Chapter; Jan Gerdes, Treasure Trails Chapter.

In front of each chapter president, was the symbol of the chapter. Also at the head table was Maggie Zimmerman of Columbine chapter who, gave the invocation, Isabel Clarke of Covered Wagon chapter, who made a presentation of personally autographed copy of 'Newport in the Rockies' by Marshall Sprague, to the national president; and Dorothy M. Bogue, the assistant National Organizer for the Quester Clubs of America, who used a mechanical high wheeled bicycle as a symbol.

Questers and their guests were introduced, including Mrs. N. M. Lybarger, president of Westward Ho Chapter at St Joseph, Mo. Mr. Clay Banta, manager of the Chamber of Commerce presented Mrs. Laymen with a deed to one square foot of land on Pikes Peak.

Mrs. Layman wearing a corsage of yellow and blue Quester colors, a gift from Dorothy Bogue, gave a short insight into Quester mechanics at the national level. She then presented charters to the presidents of the two new chapters, Rose Kingsley and Treasure Trail.

Highlight of the evening was a style show of authentic old clothes under direction of Evelyn Adams, with models from the various chapters as follows: Chipeta Chapter, Mary Ann Bachtel, Evelyn Adams, Peggy Cowen, Virginia Colton, Susan Livingston, Florence Harder, Fern Gardner, Besty Cowen, Jo Hogsett and Jo Tulson; Columbine Chapter, Maggie Zimmerman, Louise Gilbreth and Barbara McMillin; Covered Wagon, Hazel Barnes.

Pianist for the occasion was Mrs. Edward Heltimus of Cascade. Narrator was Dorothy M. Bogue. Styles ranged from calicos of the covered wagon days to afternoon and evening dresses of colonial times to the Gay Nineties era, cruise and touring car outfits of 1900-1910, Gibson Girl costumes, school teacher dresses, Dickens study club dresses, basketball and swim suits of by-gone days, and an elegant array of 'flapper gowns' of the 1920s. Humor was added by models wearing old fashioned night gowns, night caps and the forgotten undergarment, the "Teddy Bear".

Lt. Col. Charles Bachtel, Deputy Signal Officer, ARADCOM introduced a clever up-to-the-minute pantomime given by Florence Harder, Mary Ann Bachtel and Jo Tulson, to terminate the evening program.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Do businessmen really eat well?

Not necessarily, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which reports that business and professional men in their 50's who have a good education and enough money to buy a good diet don't always choose one.

Some also need nutrition guidance, said the USDA. In a recent study of a number of men in one midwestern city, only half the men chose food that provided 100 per cent of allowances for calcium, thiamine and riboflavin.

Fashions From California Are Given Praise

By WALTER LOGAN

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—When California styles in men's wear are good they are very very good. When they're bad it usually means the Californians have been paying too much attention to some Eastern influence such as Ivy League.

This year West Coast manufacturers showed a mixture ranging from bad to good to spectacular at the recent convention of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers (NARCF) and the American Institute of Men's and Boy's Wear (AIMBW) press preview.

The Californians, with mountains and sea to play with, naturally excel at sports and leisure clothes and their "surfing look" in swim wear is expected to sweep the country. Other contributions are short sleeve sweaters, the ski look in beach wear and uninhibited designs in sports jackets.

For a rundown on the California Look we talked with such men as Leonard F. Dorfman of Hollywood Clothes, Los Angeles; Jack MacFarlane of Laguna Sportswear; Fred Silton of Silton Bros., Los Angeles (outerwear); Maynard Tow of Lancer (sports shirts) and Mike Galante of the Seattle Knitting Mills—whose biggest customer is California.

Here's the California Look:

—Suits: Shoulders pitched forward slightly in contrast with Eastern look where the coat rests back on the shoulder. Fuller chest and easier armhole. Preponderance of 1- and 2-button models. Gabardine with triple stitching along the lapel. Silk and wool blended irridescents. A few cuffed sleeves. Light but not ice cream colors.

— Sports coats: Much the same styling. Patterns smart but not wild with emphasis on neat checks and plaids with colorful contrast linings. Emphasis on fabric as much as the styling. Slacks color coordinated with jacket, either with side tabs or belt loops, belts often of the coat or sack fabric.

—Swimwear: Lace front surfer trunks with one to five grommets, laced tight for surfing or diving, loosened for relaxing on the beach. Heavy canvas with contrasting trim and hip pocket with some nylon making its appearance. (In the east the favorite fabric is gabardine.) The older group—25 and up—favor trim fitting boxer shorts. Favored colors royal blue, willow and tan. Button fly on surfers—sand goes right through and doesn't catch in the zipper.

— Sports shirts: The shirt-jacket is the leader in both woven and knitted models with heavy emphasis on stripes. In cut and sewn shirts (as opposed to knitted) the major difference is an emphasis on embroidered decorations and emblems and such details as welt pockets, contrasting cuffs and waistband. Colors run the gamut.

—Knitwear: The short sleeve sweater in heavy knit is a favorite from San Francisco north through Seattle. Newest are combinations of woolknits and stretch quilted for skiing, woolknit with suede for after skiing. Big trend toward attached hoods for fall and V-neck cardigans and pullovers. The links stitch—a big healthy knit—is a solid favorite. Colors? No limit. One manufacturer makes five shades of "ivy green" alone.

—Outerwear: The emphasis is on fabric, color and styling in that order with stitch quilt leading the field in ski wear: corduroy, leather and suedes good for after ski and leisure wear. There is a new salt and pepper look in wool and a huge shaker stitch is seen in the California knitted look. Colorful linings, especially stripes, give a youthful look to leisure wear and there is emphasis on fine detailing.

—Miscellaneous: The ski look is still big for boating and beachwear with many jackets sporting hoods. Surfers are wearing dazzling sweatshirts. Rugby shirts are seen everywhere. So are white levi's. Seersucker sportsjackets in plaids and stripes often sport such details as slanted suede pocket flap and a suede neckband for teen-agers. Teen-agers also like tapered slacks with frontier pockets. Straw beach hats have high crowns and wild decorations. Five dollar neckties are 2¼ inch wide, $2.50 ties 2-inch. One manufacturer (Don Loper) featured an irridescent finish on a shaded warp in very broad stripes, a swirling brocade in solid and combinations of red and black and a very neat, very plain tie with woven off center pip underknot decoration. One novelty sports jacket (Ratner) called "the Guardsman" featured a double welt (double besom) slanted pocket framed by a welted oval.

TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. Stone Anderson will hold open house from 2 until 5 p.m. Sunday, March 22, in celebration of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Their many friends and relatives are invited to attend, and they request that no gifts be given them. The Anderson's were married March 22, 1914 in Belle, Mo. In 1915 they homesteaded at Kendrick, Colo., and in 1950 Mr. Anderson retired from ranching because of ill health. The couple has three sons, Clarence of Colorado Springs; John and Lee of Rush; and two daughters, Mrs. Irene Wills of Colorado Springs and Mrs. Marble Keller of Rush. They also have 13 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. (Payton Photo)

Prayer Breakfast May Be Violation in Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Milward L. Simpson, R-Wyo., told senators Wednesday night they may be in technical violation of the law by holding morning prayer breakfasts in the capital and voting pay for congressional and military chaplains.

Simpson, with verbal support from Sens. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, and Spessard L. Holland, D-Fla., introduced a proposed constitutional amendment which he said should clarify present confusion.

This results, Simpson said, from misinterpretation of the Supreme Court's ruling against state-sponsored prayers and Bible reading in the public schools.

Unless clarified, Simpson said this "may have charted a course which will bring moral decay and destruction to this nation which has been blessed so richly by God."

Simpson said he was not criticizing the court's decisions.

Sen. Lausche said the effect of the court decisions was to say "Thou shalt not pray."

"The cards are stacked in favor of the atheists," Lausche said.

Sen. Holland said he will co-sponsor Simpson's proposal because the public is tremendously confused by the decisions.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., said the Supreme Court should never have taken jurisdiction in the prayer and Bible cases.

Simpson said his proposed amendment would permit voluntary non-denominational prayers in public schools and state aid to parochial schools if state laws permit it.

His proposal states:

"Nothing contained in this Constitution shall prevent the enactment by any state of any law with respect to religions, except that no state shall enact any law establishing any organized church or religious association of any faith, denomination, or sect as a preferred or favored church or association, or enact any law prohibiting the free exercise of religion."

ENGLISH WORSTEDS—For a man's spring wardrobe are ten-month-style suits in gray, fine pin-stripe weave, and plaid sports jacket. Both are of English worsteds with natural shoulder construction and three-button fronts.

What's New

Now it's the lipstick case with the flip top. Ons manufacturer has produced a case, contour shaped, which opens with the flip of a wheel as you operate a cigarette lighter. (Tussy, 445 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y.).

Brush on your eyebrow make-up with a special angled nylon brush. Simply stroke the flat end of the brush across a cake of dry powder and then sketch on your brows. The maker says the brush gives a natural look to the brow that pencils can not. (Frances Denny, 610 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y.).

New in the luxury while lounging department are throws done in wool and brushed mohair. The throws can be used for both warmth and home decorating. They come in a rainbow of colors. (Nap Wraps, Einiger Mills, Inc., 111 W. 40th St., N.Y., N.Y.).

Want to weigh in skinny—at least when you ifrst step on the scales? One manufacturer has produced a bathroom scale which he claims has a permanenetly adjusted zero to which the scale always turns after a person weighs. The manufacturer says the zero starter means an accurate weight. There is no need—and no knob—to adjust the scale after use. (Detecto, Inc., 540 Park Ave., Brooklyn 5, N.Y.).

One-Room School Gets 1964 Look

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Maybe there was some merit in the old, one-room country school house Grandpa used to talk about.

At least two suburban San Francisco communities seem to think so.

One, the Dilworth school in Cupertiono, houses 110 students within one room—and a plush red-carpeted room, at that.

The big room is a feature of Dilworth's non-graded plan. The 110 pupils who ordinarily would be split up in grades one through sic, are ranked instead in 17 instructional levels.

The plan works simply. When a pupil is ready to mvve to a new leevl he picks up his things and walks across the room to another seat.

The other non-graded school is St. Stephen's Parish Day School at Belvedere. This school is much smaller, but it operates the same way. It has only 17 pupils of kindergarten to second grade age levels. Two teachers instruct in the standard subjects at each child's particular ability level.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

If you or any of your readers have ever tried to put out a cigarette while driving a car and trying to watch the traffic at the same time, only to have it sit in the ash tray and smolder and smell . . .

I am sure many are tempted . . . but please do not throw the cigarette out the window.

Just fill the ash trays in the car over half - full with sand! Stick the cigarette straight down into the sand and it will go out with no smoldering whatsoever.

To clean the ashtray, pick out the cigarette stubs. There is no need to change the sand often.

If you do not have any sand, buy a box of bird gravel.

We have been using this idea in public buildings for years but I'd never thought about using it for cars until recently . . . and it works. —Mrs. A. Rutherford

Dear Heloise:

Did you know that when boiling eggs . . . if they are taken from the boiling water as soon as the timing period is over and placed at once in cold water . . . the yoke will stay yellow instead of having that greenish color form around it? —S. F.

Yes, I did, and you are exactly right.

Did you also know that as soon as the boiling period is over that placing the egg in cold water will prevent it from further cooking and keeps the white from being "tough?"

If any of you ladies doubt this take two eggs, boil one egg for the usual amount of time. Take a spoon and dip it out of the boiling water and place in cold water immediately. Let the other egg boil a few minutes longer or place the lid on top of the pan and let it set until the water gets cold. Then . . . shell both eggs and see for "yourself" which egg has the tenderest white!

And, ladies, don't knock it until you try it! — Heloise

Dear Heloise:

What nationality are you? Could you possibly be Hawaiian? And what's your husband's name? Abelard? —Prudence

Dear Prudence:

I am Scotch and Irish! Really a bad combination when my dander gets up.

And I was born in Texas. But . . . I have been gone from that territory for over 20 years. I was married (and still am) to a military man. And his name is not Abelard. It's Mike. — Heloise

Dear Heloise:

To prevent tearing at the most tugged end of the shower curtain, fold the first eye into the second eye and insert a "single" hook. —Mrs. R.P. Dang

Dear Heloise:

When I make a big batch of our favorite spaghetti sauce, and after we have used it for our spaghetti, I take what's left — add green peppers and minute rice for a delicious Spanish rice. It's real easy for the second meal. —Judy

Dear Heliose:

I have discovered a way to do my old, limp, drip-dry, dacron, crisscross curtains — which makes them hang and drape like they did when they were new.

This requires no pre-starching.

I wash and drip dry them in the usual way. Then hang them up and tie them back and drape the first curtain—getting all of the folds in perfect shape.

Then . . . I get out the can of spray starch and spray the curtain gently and let it dry. Later I do the top "crossed" curtain in the same manner.

These curtains "stay in place—just as you have draped them—until the "next washing"

If some of the starch goes through to the windowpane (this does happen if you get the spray can too close to the curtain) a bit of window cleaner on a cloth will take it off. Just reach up under the dry curtains and wipe it off. Or lay a newspaper against the pane before hanging and spraying with the starch, and it can be removed afterwards. —A Steady Reader

Ladies, I just have to give credit to Mrs. Dawns for this terrific idea. I tried it and it's a gold mine on the end of the rainbow we are always looking for. —Heloise

CORNSTALK STORES ITS OWN

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A cornstalk is like a camel in one way—it stores its own food. This report comes from University of Kentucky agronomists Bill Duncan and Al Hatfield. They say an experiment shows that corn stores sugar, which then keeps it growing at an even rate.

The agricultural researchers label as unfounded a belief among farmers that the final yield of the crop depends on the number of "good growing days" in a season.

CUSTOM SPLIT LEVEL

THE EXECUTIVE AND HIS FAMILY will be delighted with this prestige home. Only minutes from downtown Colorado Springs from its location in the NE area. The children can walk to Wasson High, Horace Mann Jr. High or Audubon Elementary School. It has 4 levels in all. On the main level you'll find the living room, dining room and large kitchen. Mom will enjoy the built-in dishwasher, wall oven with rotisserie, counter range top under hooded vent fan and the garabage disposal. The cabinets are finished in wood. The upper level with 3 large bedrooms is secluded for restful sleeping — and there are 2 colorful ceramic tiled baths to handle the morning rush. 7 steps lead you to the first sub-terranian level and the spacious family room with its wall of red and grey rock which accentuates the fireplace. For entertaining your guests there's the bar with built-in refrigerator and sink with hot and cold running water. A 4th bedroom and 3rd bath are also on this floor. The bottom level is Dad's hideaway, or the kids party room . . . this huge Poker room or Game room is also ideal for listening to Stereo. A Fallout shelter and storage room make up the remainder of this section of the house. The drapes stay and the wall to wall carpeting is of the finest quality. This is a total electrical home with radiant heat thermostatically controlled within each room. The extra lot is completely landscaped and is serviced by an underground sprinkler system. A 2 level patio is at the back. The features listed here are by no means all. To show this home to the family looking for value and pride of ownership would be our pleasure. This CUSTOM built Split Level goes for just $40,500.00. For more information call Ron Dostal at 392-8923 or
